Which will Remove All Your Doubts—A Good Investment—One that Yields "AN HUNDRED FOLD."

The world is full of charlatans asking public attention to patent inventions for the mitigation of suffering. Everything claiming the power to do good should come from a reputable source, otherwise it is open to suspicion. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., affirms that his medicine, "Kennedy's Favorite remedy," is the best article of its kind ever produced. Hence it is only just to the public that he refer to his record as a physician and surgeon. Among the capital operations performed by him are: Amputation of the thigh-bone in the case of Abraham Ellsworth, Port Ewen, Ulster Co., N. Y.; amputation of the arm, case of Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and the operation of lithotomy (removal of stone from the bladder), in the case of Simon Tietsell, of Kingston, and the removal of the eye for Oscar Craigg, of Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. These are a few of many. All these persons fully recovered, because Dr. Kennedy prescribed "Favorite Remedy" (which has unequal powers of purryfying the Blood). Owing to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after-treatment of his surgical cases, not one has died; all are living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. $1 per bottle.

The Woburn Journal

In Memorium.

It is September twenty-six:
The nation mourns her loss to day
Of one so noble, just and true;
By the assassin snatched away.

It was in the year of eighty-one
He took the presidential chair,
But oh, alas, alas, how soon
Our hopes were turned into dispair.

And yet, its happiness to speak
Of one so noble and so grand,
Although his reign was very short
We found that he was just the man.

Ready to live, ready to die,
Ready for war, or ready for peace,
Ready to seek his country's right,
Where is the man to fill his place?

Where will we find a man to fill
The place of him that's in the dust?
We leave it in the hands of one
That's always been the Nation's trust.

And though he's left us very sad,
There's one can all our sorrows heal—
Will rule the presidential chair
And that according to his will.

Then may our aims and objects be
Higher than earth, or earthly things;
And do our duty while on earth,
That we may soar on angels' wings.

To meet the one we mourn to day
In that bright world where sins no more,
Where no assassin can molest,
Nor sorrow reach that peaceful shore.

G. A. H.

A LAWYER'S STORY.

I never would convict a man on circumstantial evidence if I were a juror—never! never!

The speaker was a distinguished criminal lawyer of nearly forty years' active practice and whose fame extended beyond the limit of his own state.

We had been discussing a recent cause celebre in which, upon purely circumstantial evidence, a man had been convicted of an atrocious murder, although many of those most familiar with the circumstances of the case entertained the gravest doubts about the justice of his conviction, and he had been swung off into eternity, protesting his absolute innocence with his latest breath and calling upon God to send his soul t perdition if he was not telling the truth.

As most of our party were lawyers, the conversation, naturally enough, drifted into a discussion of the dangers arising from convicting accused persons, whose own mouths were closed upon purely circumstantial evidence, in the absent of any direct and positive proof of guilt, and case after case was cited in which, after conviction and execution, the entire innocence of the supposed culprits had been clearly demonstrated. Most of the laymen present agreed with the distinguished lawyer whose positive expression of opinion has been quoted, while the majority of lawyers contended, with that earnestness for which lawyers are noted when advocating their own side of the question, that justice could never miscarry when careful judges guard against the possibility of unsafe verdicts by refusing to permit a conviction except when every link in the chain of circumstantial evidence has been established beyond doubt, and the whole chain been made so perfect and complete as to leave no room for any consistent hypothesis of innocence.

"The first murder case I ever tried," said one of them, "was stranger than fiction, as you will admit, and is quite as remarkable as any of the cases you have referred to where innocent men have been wrongfully convicted upon circumstantial evidence. It ought to have been reported as an example of the unreliability of the direct and positive testimony of eye witnesses, who tell what they believe to be the truth."

He then related the main points of what was certainly almost remarkable and romantic trial, and which constitutes a fair offset to some of the momorable cases to be found in every work of circumstantial evidence. The narrative produced so strong an impression upon my own mind that subsequently, with his consent, I put it into the following shape, having first carefully compared it with his notes of testimony taken upon the testimony of the case. It can be relied upon as absolutely correct, with the exception of that I have used fictitious names, for reasons which will readily be appreciated when it is known that most of the actors in the drama are still living.

One winter evening about three o'clock, in the early days of the war, in the quiet little town of———, while patrolling the streets to pick up stragglers from the camp on the outskirts of the town, Corporal Julias Frye was shot and killed by one of three men of bad character, who were in company and on terms of open enmity with the soldiers. The men were arrested, committed to prison and brought to trial at the next term of the court. Two of them were gamblers and desperadoes, and supposed to have more than once had their hands stained with human blood. The third, whom we will call Short, though bearing an unenviable reputation, was regarded as one uulikely to slay a fellow man unless under compulsion of circumstances. On account of the character of the men, and the trouble they had already brought upon the quiet, law-abiding citizens, the sentiment of the whole community was strongly against them.

Short was a small man of not more than five feet six inches in height, slender, weighing scarcely 130 pounds, with bright, fiery red hair and side whiskers, and at the time of the murder, wore a white felt hat and an old light blue army overcoat.

Ryan was fully six feet in height, of a robust frame, with black hair and moustache, dressed in dark clothes, and wore a black Derby hat.

Grey was a heavy, broad-shouldered man of medium height, weighing fully two hundred pounds, with a full black beard reaching nearly to his waist. But as the evidence subsequently showed that he had not fired the first shot, it is unnecessary to describe his appearance more minutely.

Certainly it is difficult to imagine two men more unlike than Short and Ryan, or less liable to be mistaken for each other, even by strangers, much less acquaintances. There is no possibility, here, for a case of mistaken identity.

Short and Ryan were tried together, with their consent, (Grey having asked for and obtained a separate trial,) and each was defended by separate counsel.

After the preliminary truth relating to the post mortem examination, the cause of death and the identification of the body of the deceased as the person named in the indictment, the Commonwealth called, as its first witness, a woman, Mary Brown. She bore a bad reputation for chastity, but nobody questioned her integrity or purpose to tell, (reluctantly, it is true), the whole truth. The prisoners were all her friends, and were constant visitors at the drinking-saloon of which she was the proprietress. She was a woman of powerful physique, almost masculine frame, great force of character, and more than ordinary intelligence.

From her testimony it appeared that a colored woman with whom she had some dispute had hit her on the head with a stone and ran, and the three prisoners coming up at the moment, started with her up the street in pursuit of the fugitive. Although the night was dark there was snow on the ground, and a gas lamp near by gave sufficient light to enable one to recognize a person with ease some feet away. After running about 100 yards the pursuers came to the corner of an alley and stopped under the gas lamp, being challenged by the deceased, who was in uniform, in company with one of his squad. She swore that when the corporal called "halt," Short, whom she had known intimately for years, replied with an oath, and while standing at her side, so that their elbows were touching, both being immediateiy under the gaslight, he pulled out a pistol and pointed it at the deceased, who was four or five feet from him, and fired and then ran down the alley, the deceased pursuing him. She heard four or five shots more fired and immediately the deceased returned, wounded, and Short disappeared. While the shots were being fired she saw both Ryan and Grey standing at the corner some feet away from her, and after that they seperated and she went home. It was also proved that this alley was bounded on either side by high fences difficult to climb, and led down to a stream of water about fifty feet wide and three or four feet deep. No traces of footsteps were found in the snow, except those of one man leading down into this stream, and it was evident that the person who had fired had not climbed either fence but had waded through the stream and disappeared on the other side.

The next witness was the soldier who stood close by the deceased when the first shot was fired, and who, not knowing either of the prisoners, described the person who has fired and ran down the alley as the man with red hair and side whiskers, dressed in a light blue army overcoat and soft white hat, and upon being directed to look at the three prisoners immediately identified Short as the man whom he had seen do the shooting.

The testimony of these witnesses was in no wise shaken upon cross-examination.

Then the sworn ante-mortem statement of the deceased, taken by a magistrate, was read to the jury. He said he had known Short personally for some time, but had never had any difficulty with him. He fully identified him as the man who fired the first shot, and then ran down the alley, firing one shot after another until he fired the last and fatal shot almost in the face of the deceased. He also fully described the clothing worn by Short as it had been described by the witnesses.

These were all the witnesses to the occurrence, except the prisoners themselves, and of course they must not be heard. The case against Short seemed to be as conclusively made out as though a score of witnesses had sworn they had seen him do the shooting. Neither the judge, the jury, nor the spectators entertained the slighest doubt of his guilt, and when the Commonwealth at this point closed its case, it seemed as though the fatal rope was around his neck and escape inpossible.

Ryan heaved a sigh of relief which was audible throughout the whole court room, for he was safe; there was not one word of testimony against him or any circumstances tending to show any previous arrangement or concert of action between him and Short.

After a whispered consultation between the counsel of the defense one of them rose and moved the court to direct the jury to forthwith return a verdict of "not guilty" as to Ryan, in order that he might be called as a witness for the other prisoner. This was resisted by the district attorney, and after lengthy and elaborate arguments, the court decided that it was bound to grant the motion, and accordingly Ryan was declared "not guilty," and the verdict recorded.

Then came a scene as dramatic to those present as anything ever witnessed on the stage. Without any opening speech by Short's counsel, Ryan, in obedience to a nod from his attorney, stepped out of the prisoner's dock into the witness box, looked around the court room, took up the Bible and was sworn to tell "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth." Every head was bent forward, every ear was on the alert, every eye fixed on the witness—something starthing was expected. Would he attept to show that Short had done the shooting in selt-defence? That seemed the only thing possible. But how could he be believed in the face of the positive testimony of three witnesses, two of them living and in the court room, one of them dead—murdered.

Ryan stood for a moment looking down, and then slowly lifting his eyes to the bench in a silence in which the falling of a feather might have been heard, he said:

"May I ask the court a question?"

The venerable judge, evidently surprised at being interrogated, looked at him and said "certainly, sir."

"I understand that I am acquitted," said Ryan, pausing for a moment and then continuing: "I want to know from the court whether anything I may say now can ever be used against me in any way."

What did he mean? What need of that question? Everyone looked at his neighbor inquiringly.

The flushed face of the judge showed that he, at least, understood what it meant—an attempt to swear his guilty companion out of the hangman's grasp. Then, in a tone of unmistakable indignation, came the answer:

"I am sorry to say, sir, that nothing you may say now can be used against you; that is, on trial of murder. You have been acquitted."

Ryan's face grew pale and then red, and he said slowly and distinctly:

"It was I who fired all the shots—not Short."

Most of the faces in the court room wore looks of incredulity; some of indignation at the hardened wickedness of the man who had just been declared innocent, and who, by his own statement, was guilty of murder, if he was not guilty of perjury.

But, quietly and calmly, without a tremor, as coolly as though he was describing some tivial occurrence which he had casually witnessed, Ryan went on, step by step, detailing all that had occured, and when he had finished his story there was not a person present who was not fully convinced not only that Ryan had told the truth, but also that he himself had fired the fatal shot in self-defence, or at least under such circumstances of danger that would have led any jury to acquit him.

He detailed how he had fired the first shot from a small, single-barreled pistol in the air without any purpose except to give his challenger a scare, and then ran down the alley, and upon being closely pursued by the deceased with saber drawn and ready to strike; he was compelled to pull out a revolver and fire several shots toward his pursuer, who was rapidly gaining on him, to keep him back; and that when he had but one shot left, he stumbled over a large stone and fell on his knees, and at this moment the deceased struck at him with the saber, cutting him slightly in the cheek, and being thus pressed, he aimed and fired the last shot which subsequently proved fatal. He further told how, upon recovering his feet he ran, waded through the stream, and finding that he had lost his hat when he fell, re-crossed the stream,, found the hat, and then went to a hotel, where was seen by several witnesses to dry his wet clothing. His manner, his bearing and his story itself convinced his hearers that he was telling the truth.

But so that nothing might be wanting if any doubt remained in the minds of the judge or jury, witnesses of undoubted veracity were called who corroborated him as to the condition of his clothing and the cut on his cheek within fifteen minutes after the occurrence. Besides it was shown that, although the man who had fired waded through the stream, Short's clothing was perfectly dry.

It is unnecessary to say that Short was promptly acquitted and warmly congratulated on one of the narrowest escapes ever made by any man in a court room. Nothing could have saved him had the court refused to direct the acquittal of Ryan and allow him to testify.

The deceased corporal, the soldier and Mary Brown were—mistaken. That was all there was about it.

So much for the occasional unreliability of the direct testimony of honest eye-witnesses.

And so much, also, for giving the accused an opportunity to be heard on the witness-stand, the denial of which by the law is one of the relics of barbarism which still disgrace its administration in some states at this late day.

HAMMOND'S CLOTHING HOUSE,

LYCEUM BUILDING, WOBURN. 38-13

HOMOSELLE.—J. R. Osgood & Co. Pp. 337. $1.00.

Another of the Round Robin Series which gives us an insight to Southern Society in the past when life was full of indescribable and touching scenes which have now passed away never to return. Some of the evils of the Slavery System are shown in the strong colors, and the dangers incurred by those who dared to assert that all are born free and equal; and the peculiar manners and customs of that section, which were the outgrowth of a system holding so large a portion of the population in bondage will interest not only those who knew southern society as it then was, but also the young readers who had no real knowledge of it. The hero of the story, styled a blundering Englishman, carries his point and abandons his trip through this country for observation and accepts a home where he has found all that makes life dear.

Tim's Kit.

It surprised the shiners and news boys around the post office the other day to see "Limpy Tim" comc among them in a quiet way, and hear him say:

"Boys, I want to sell my kit. "Here's two brushes, a hull box of blacking, a good stout box, and the outfit goes for two shilling's!"

"Goin' away, Tim?" queried one.

"Goin' on a 'scursion?" asked another.

"Not to-day, but I must have a quarter," he answered.

One of the lads passed over the change, and took the kit, and Tim walked straight to the counting room of a daily paper, put down his money, and said:

"I guess I kin write it if you give me a pencil."

With slow moving fingers he wrote a death notice. It went into the paper almost as he wrote it, but you might not have seen it. He wrote:

"Was it your brother?" asked the cashier.

Tim tried to brace up but he couldn't. The big tears came up, his chin quivered, and he pointed to the notice on the counter and gasped:

"I—I had to sell my kit to do it, b—but he had his arms around my neck when he d—died."

He hurried away home, and they gathered in a group and talked. Tim had not been home an hour before a barefooted boy left the kit on the doorstep, and in the box was a bouquet of flowers which had been purchased in the market by pennies contributed by the crowd of ragged, but big-hearted urchins. Did God ever make a heart which would not respond if the right chord was touched?—Detroit Free Press.

The Power of the Press.

One of the old-time editors of Michigan was boasting the other day that he had never been sued for libel, or attacked in his sanctum, but that he could recall many narrow escapes. Twenty-five years ago he was running a red-hot paper on the line of the Michigan Central railroad. A man named Carson, who was running for some county office, was given a bad racket, and the editor received a note that if he had anything more to say he might expect to receive a good pounding. He had a still more bitter attack the next week, and the paper was hardly mailed before in walked Carson, the candidate, accompanied by a brother and two cousins. The four were strapping big fellows, and each was armed with a horsewhip. The two compositors and the "devil" got out with all possible speed, leaving the editor without support. He realized the situation at once, and began:

"Walk in, gentlemen; I presume you have come to horsewhip me?"

"We have," they answered.

"Very well. Have you thoroughly considered this matter?"

"It dosen't need any consideration," replied Carson. "You have lied about me, and I'm going to lick you within an inch of your life!"

"Just so, my friend; but hear first what I have to say. Did you ever hear of the press being stopped because the editor was cowhided?"

"I dunno."

"Well, you never did. Lick me all you choose and my paper comes out week after week just the same. The power of the press is next to the lever which moves the universe. It makes or breaks parties, builds up or tears down, plants or destroys. Aggravate the editor and the press becomes a sword to wound and kill. Wollop me if you will, but next week I will come out more bitter than ever."

There was an embaraassing silence right here, and the face of each horse-whipper had an anxious look.

"It will go out to the world—to America, Canada, England, France—aye! clear to Jerusalem, that the Carson family of this county live on roots and johnny-cake; that they stole a dog from a blind man; that they murdered a pedlar for a pair of two-shilling suspenders; thot the women are club-footed and the men work their ears when they sing; that the——"

"What is the regular subscription price of the Herald?" interrupted Carson.

"Only twelve shilling a year."

"Put us four down."

"Very well—six dollars—that's correct. Run in and see me—all of you, and if any of you want to see any of my Detroit exchanges I shall only be to glad to glad to serve you."

Many who long suffered from nervous debility would now be in their graves had they not used Brown's Iron Bitters.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

THE EXTRA SESSION.

The special sessson of the Senate, called by President Arthur, will begin next Monday. If there should be but little or no contest over the election of a President pro tem it is expected the session will not be prolonged beyond a week or two, and a protracted fight over filling the place is hardly to be looked for, for the Democrats will have a majority large enough to make short work of the job, if so disposed. Considerable gush has been indulged in over a settlement of the question by papers and men on both sides; and late despatches from Washington state that several leading Democratic Senators strongly favor the election of a conservative Republican on the ground of policy. It would not be out of keeping with the "policy" of Democratic leaders in the past to yield the presidency of the Senate to the Republicans this time; but if they should do so and decline to take advantage of their political rights in making the choice, they will most likely hear from their constituents. The bulk of the party favor taking all that belongs to them, and the rank and file will not be satisfied if the leaders permit such a plum as is now within their grasp to be gathered in by the Republicans. It is also stated that the Republican Senators will make no serious attempt to thwart the will of the majority, and if so, the session bids fair to be of short duration, as, from present appearances, there will be but little business for it to transact.

SENATORIAL CONVENTION.

A convention, to nominate a candidate to represent the sixth Senatorial District in the General Court, was held at the Republican Headquarters in Woburn on Saturnay afternoon, October 1, of which J. W. Barry of Stoneham was chosen Chairman, and W. S. Greenough of Wakefield, Secretary. Ten towns were represented by twenty-seven delegates.

REUNION OF THE 39TH MASS. REGIMENT.

On the 6th of October, 1875, the 39th Massachusetts Regiment in the War of the Rebellion held its reunion in Woburn. It was an occasion of uncommon interest to soldiers and citizens. In subsequent years the annual gatherings of the veterans were held at different places in the State until Woburn's turn came round again, and on Wednesday last the reunion of 1881—the 15th—was held here. Perhaps it was gotton up on a little less elaborate scale than that of 1875, but it was a very gratifying success and an event which the veterans and people of Woburn will long hold in pleasant remembrance. The arrangements were all in the hands of a very efficient committee, composed of members of Co. K of the gallant 39th, which was recruited here and is claimed with pride as a Woburn company, by whom nothing was left undone to make the meeting an agreeable one to visiting comrades and all others who might participate in the good time. The programme could not have been better arranged, or more satisfactorily carried out. There was no hitch in it, and when the day closed it was the voluntarily delivered verdict of all present that a pleasant and profitable season had been spent. The names of the members of the committee that conducted affairs so admirably were Charles K. Conn, George E. Fowle, Luke R. Tidd, Alonzo R. Richardson, Julius F. Ramsdell, Albert P. Barrett, J. Fred Leslie, Abijah Thompson, A. Roscoe Linscott.

Wednesday came in cold, windy and very disagreeable, and continued to grow more so through the day. But the veterans had experienced a good deal more of worse weather "at the front," and were not therefore very seriously put out by the inclemency of Wednesday. Warm hearts beat under their jackets, while the greetings were as cordial, the hand-shakings as whole-souled, the pleasure of meeting again as keen, and the camp yarns and anecdotes as entertaining, as though the clerk of the weather had been "seen," and furnished the best he could get up to order.

After the lapse of so many years since their discharge from their years of gallant and patriotic service in saving our country from destruction at the hands of its enemies, of course the remaining members of the 39th are scattered all over the land, and therefore it was an agreeable surprise that ten companies and one hundred and forty-five members should respond to roll-call on Wednesday. The answer to call was as follows: Company K, Woburn, 33; C, Medford, 20; F, Taunton, 10; G, Boston, 6; B, Roxbury, 10; H, Dorchester, 16; A, Peabody, 8; I, Natick, 15; D, Quincy, 14; E, Somerville, 14.

At 10-30 a. m. Company K, under command of Captain Luke R. Tidd, headed by the Woburn Brass Band (full,) T. J. Marrinan with the baton, marched to the depot, and at 10-45 received the visiting companies who arrived from Boston on that train. Among the guests were Maj. Gen. G. K. Warren of the regular army; Maj. Gen. John C. Robinson of New York; Col. Charles L. Pierson, and others. The greetings of the comrades were very warm and cordial. Everybody appeared to be very glad to meet and see everybody else, and a short time was spent by them in renewing acquaintances and taking account of each other.

The Regiment was then formed in line on Main street under the command of Col. Charles L. Pierson and marched to the step of very fine music by the band to the residence of Col. William T. Grammer, where Maj. Gens. Warren and Robinson were formally received by "the boys," and hot coffee was furnished by the hospitable host.

The Regiment then took up its march and proceded to G. A. R. Hall. At noon precisely Lieut. Charles K. Conn, President of the Association, called the meeting to order, and made a very handsome address of welcome to visiting comrades. The records of the last meeting were read by Col. Charles H. Porter of Quincy, Secretary of the organization, which were approved, after which President Conn appointed a committee of five to present a list of officers for the year. An invitation from Company I of Natick to hold next year's reunion in that town was accepted with thanks. A committee was also appointed to draft resolutions on the death of the lamented Garfield. The Committee on nominations presented the following list which was accepted: President, C. P. Currier, Co. I, Natick; Vice-President, Charles Pierson, Boston; Executive Committee, M. C. Parkhurst, Co. E; I. H. Whitney, Co. C; H. A. Stevens, Co. H; Treasurer—Orville A. Parker, Co. F; Secretary—C. H. Porter, Co. D.

The business meeting coming to an end, at half-past one o'clock the Regiment formed and marched to Lyceum Hall where an excellent banquet awaited the hungry soldiers and invited guests. The dinner was good and was discussed with refreshing gusto by keen appetites. After dinner lively, patriotic speeches were made by Gen. Warren, Gen. Robinson, Col. Pierson, C. H. Porter, Capt. Davis, Capt. Mills and J. S. Beck. The annual address by Comrade Albert P. Barrett of Co. K, Woburn, was appropriate and eloquent, and was listened to with complimentayr attention. In the intervals of speechmaking the Band played fine music, which was an enjoyable feature of the occasion.

The report of the Committee on resolutions on the sad death of our noble President was accepted, at the conclusion of which and a dirge by the Band, the reunion, one of the best that has been held by the Regiment, closed at half past four o'clock, p. m.

☞ Last Thursday evening, week, at the residence of the bride's parents in Orono, Maine, Mr. George B. Goodwin of the editorial staff of the Boston Post, took unto himself a better half in the person of the beautiful and accomplished Miss Grace Webster, daughter of James Webster, Esq., one of the lumber kings of the Penobscot. The interesting ceremonies, which united in the silken bonds two hearts that beat as one, etc, etc, were witnessed by a very large and brilliant party of ladies and gentlemen gathered together from various and remote sections of the country. Rev. Mr. Fields of Bangor tied the hymenial knot. Beautiful and costly presents were showered upon the fair bride and gallant groom in rich profusion by the friends present and away, and altogether the wedding was one of the most notable society events that has occurred on the upper Penobscot for years. The next morning the Post printed a list of the invited guests which occupied nearly a half column of that sterling old paper.

On Saturday last Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin started on their bridal trip among the orange and citron groves of the "sunny South," taking along with them the good wishes and god-speeds of their hosts of Boston friends, and here's to a long life and a merry one to the young and happy pair.

☞ Hon. A. E. Thompson of Woburn declined a renomination for Lieutenant-Governor, tendered him by the Democratic convention, held at Worcester last Wednesday. He got all the honor out of it last year, and so didn't deem it worth while to go through with the bother of it again. James H. Carleton of Haverhill was nominated in Mr. Thompson's place.

☞ Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge has received the Senatorial nomination in the Lynn District, and will be elected. Thus merit receives its reward.

— The matter of purchasing a bell for the Highland Hose House was referred at the town meetieg to the Board of Engineers, where really it belongs, and who will undoubtedly settle the whole question satisfactorily.

— Mr. Alva S. Wood, the Woburn station agent of the B. & L. R. R., has filled his present position, uninterruptedly, ever since April 1st, 1864—seventeen years, and better. That is a pretty long pull, and in the whole time he has never taken a single vacation covering two week.

— After a shut-down of a couple of weeks Mr. L. B. Norris's mill is running again in good shape, with a large lot of accumulated work on hand. It is run evenings to make up for lost time. Mr. Norris sends into the city an average of two large loads of boxes daily, besides doing a great amount of other work, such as sawing, planing, etc.

— If the town would buy a suitable bell for fire alarm purposes and plant it on Meeting-house Hill, it would answer just the purpose, and put an end to all the talk on the subject. The best way is to do things right—for keops — in the beginning: and then, again, the things that cost the least money on the start are not always the cheapest in the end.

— Last Saturday Mr. Francis L. Skinner, fireman at the Woburn Water Works, met with a painful accident. While cleaning a revolver he dropped a cartridge which exploded and struck his right leg immediately above the ankle, producing a very painful wound. The bullet lodged about six inches from where it entered the leg, and was extracted by Dr. Bartlett.

— The proprietor of a nice, pleasant business here in Woburn wants to employ immediately, a couple of smart, active, intelligent women, married or siegle, to work in his store, to whom first-class wages will be paid. The right persons can obtain of him permanent, pleasant and profitable situations. Address the JOURNAL office, promptly, as the places must be filled forthwith.

— We call attention to the announcement of Mr. Mark Allen in our advertising columns of a grand dramatic entertainment to be given by him at Lyceum Hall, on the 19th of this month. The play is a real good one, and the cast of characters warrants the belief that it will be well played. We trust Mr. Allen's subscription list will soon swell to the requisite size to assure the performance.

— Some Woburn gentlemen, who have at heart the interest of the young men of the town, are talking over the matter of a free reading room for them, and making it so attractive that they will be drawn away from liquor holes and kindred establishments. Besides a reading-room it is proposed to have a gymnasium, billiards, and innocent games, with coffee, etc., to make he place pleasant, and popular with the young men. There can be no doubt but that the establishment of such rooms would result in great benefit, antl we trust the benevolent plans of the gentlemen may bear fruit at an early day.

— Rev. Dr. March, though not in robust health, preached a grand good sermon on the lessons taught by the life and death of the lamented Garfield, at the Congregational Church, last Sunday morning. He modestly announced his theme as "a few thoughts," but the sermon was something a great deal better than what the phrase generally means—it was a sound and practical discourse, abounding in good counsel and encouraging words for young men, and real, live, every-day piety throughout. We have heard nor read anything on the death of the President better than Dr. March's last Sunday's sermon.

— Rev. M. D. Murphy, associate pastor of St. Charles church, is held in high esteem by his parishoners, as well as by all who enjoy his acquaintance. In token of their appreciation of his worth as a pastor and man, his parishoners last Sunday evening, through a committee at the head of which was Mr. Patrick Crehan, presented Father Murphy with a purse containing $250 in good money of the realm, and their kind regards. It was a great surprise to the recipient of the generous present, nevertheless the pastor managed to make known his thanks in a nice little speech. A pleasant social season followed the presentation.

— Will Grover's Humpty Dumpty, successor to Jay Rial's. One of the best things of the season, will be produced at Lyceum Hall, Monday evening, Oct. 10. The situations are surprising and laughable, but not at all bearing on the indelicate. On their present tour they are winning golden opinions, of which the following from the Toledo Blade is a fair specimen — "Wheel-Opera House was well filled, last evening, with an appreciative audience, on the occasion of the first appearance of Jay Rial's Humpty Dumpty troupe. The low price of admission perhaps assisted in drawing the crowd, last night, but this evening the excellence of the show will be the strong attraction, for all who witnessed it unite in declaring it the best "Humpty Dumpty" performance ever given here. It has many features that place it ahead of Tony Dernier's, while Nick Roberts', in comparison, is literally no-where. The show was full of funny situations and surprises. The show was full of funny situations and surprises. It is well worth seeing, over and over again. Admission 25 and 35 cents; reserved seats, only 35 cents. Tickets for sale at Horton's.

— The Woburn Phalanx have decided by a vote of the company, not to hold their annual Fall parade this year. Something more enjoyable will probably be substituted.

— The distribution of school supplies since the reopening of the schools has kept Superintendent Davis very busy. The task is over with, and the schools will now receive his attention.

— The Misses Hayford & Adams have received their full stock of fine millinery; have made improvement in their pleasant rooms, and are now ready to receive customers. Their card will appear next week.

— A large and very desirable stock of overcoats has just been received by John C. Buck, which people in need of the article should examine. It is a prime lot, and the low prices at which they are offered will insure ready and rapid sales. Mr. Buck also has large stocks of clothing, hats, furnishing goods, etc.

Julia Gallagher, Lexington, d'k, $1 and costs. Edward Houston, tramp, d'k, $1 and costs, went down. Owen McCall, Montvale, dis. peace, $5 and costs. Andrew Logue, dis. peace, $3 and costs.

— Orderly Sergeant Mark R. Maddison, a much respected member of the Phalanx, and who is also connected with the Woburn Brass Band, is about to leave these organizations and start for Chicago, where he has obtained good employment. The "boys" of the Phalanx will greatly miss his pleasant face and presence in the drill hall and at muster.

"The New Phase of Napoleonic History" is the subject of a paper in the October SCRIBNER, by Walter A. Burlingame, son of the late Anson Burlingamr, and a close student of modern political events. So complete has been the revolution in public opinion concerning the character of Napoleon, that one is apt to feel a little shock of surprise to learn that it was only thirty years ago that Mr. John S. C. Abbott's picturesque romance was in course of publication- Thirteen years ago was published the first volume of "History of Napoleon," by Pierre Lanfrey—the first to tear the mask from the great French idol, and to show, by a presentation of facts, the political crimes and evil nature of the boloved Little Corporal. The shades in Lanfrey's picture, the recently published memoirs of Mme. de Remusat, Talleyraud, and others have only deepened. Mr. George W. Cable, of Creole story fame, has recently been the recipient of a distinguished recognition. The discovery of an unusually large and beautiful moth, in the Lousiana swamps, has been appropriately celebrated by giving the new specimen the name of Smerinthus Cabeli, in his honor. The discoverer, Mr. L. von Reizenstein, has written a description of the new moth which will also contain a beautiful engraving of it by Mr. Henry Marsh, whose exquisite wood-cuts of butterflies and moths in Harris's "Insects Injurious to Vegetation" are well known. It is also interesting to note that the discovery of the larva was made by the electric light. "Primeval California" is the theme of two Californians for an illustrated paper in the October SCRIBNER. The writer is Mr. James Warren Stoddard, and the artist Mr. Julian Rix. Some of the best wood-cuts in this article are by young men who last year competed with "first-work" for the SCRIBNER prize for wood-engraving—which, by the way, is to be continued under the CENTURY MAGAZINE. Mr. William A. Crafts, one of the Railroad Commissioners of Massachusetts, has a paper entitled "A Plea for Railroads," somewhat in reply to Mr. F. B. Thurber's paper on "The Railroads and the People," in the same magazine for December, 1880. Mr. J. A. Allen, the ornothologist, contributes a paper on the "Migration of Birds," of which he has long been a careful observer. Bear-hunting in the South, which is quite a different kind of sport from the Northern or Western varieties, is described in the October SCRIBNER. The writer is Col. James Gordon of Mississippi, who has a thirty years' experience of bear-hunting cypress swamp and cane break, and to judge from the striking illustrations which Mr. W. L. Shephard has made, there was no lack of excitement in the special hunt he gives an account of in the magazine. A paper that will be read with interest, in the light of the coming Yorktown celebration, is "Old Yorktown," by Thomas Nelson Page, a descendant of the founder of the town, as well as of Thomas Nelson, who was governor at the time of its capture and surrender by the British. Rossi, the tragedian, is the subject of a biographical and critical sketch by Junius Henri Brown. Richard Henry Stoddard and Edmund Clarence Stedman furnish the distinctively literary features to the October SCRIBNER. The title of Mr. Stoddard's paper, "The Sonnet in English poetry," is an index to its contents, while Mr. Stedman makes a valuable contribution to criticism in his second and closing paper on "Poetry in America." Mr. Theodore L. De Vinne, the printer of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY, in a valuable paper in that magazine for October on "The First Editor," speaks of the "bores and printing-house correspondents" that infested the office of Aldus Manutius in Venice, nearly four hundred years ago. Mr. Eugene Schulyer's serial history of "Peter the Great," in SCRINER'S MONTHLY, comes to a close with the October number. Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge. oontributes an interesting story of Colorado life, entitled "Trapper Joe," to the October number of ST. NICHOLAS, which closes the eighth volume of that magazine. The same number also contains a dainty poem by Celia Thaxter, some capital verses by Mrs. Annie Fields, wife of the late James T. Fields; an account of the pet cat of the famous romancer, James Fenimore Cooper (written by his daughter, and illustrated with silhouettes by Hopkins); another of the wonderful stories of Norse mythology, with other attractions for the girls and boys. The value of the practical articles in ST. NICHOLAS is amply shown by a a littte story contributed to the October number, telling how a boy was saved from drowning by the timely remembrance of instructions given in a ST. NICHOLAS article on swimming; and an editorial note is appended, recounting two other escapes from drowning, which have been due to the same admirable article. The magazine abounds in these practical papers, which are great aids in household life; this number contains a paper entitled "How to be Taken care of," which will give many hints and suggestions of use to ailing folk, both grown up and small.

A True Cause of Regret.
It makes the heart of every philantrophist sad to see so many worthless patent medicines put up and advertised for the cure of chronic diseases. Usually the remedy is some vile cathartic compound or alcoholic preparation, combined with buchu, turpentine or other severe diuretic that affords the invalid only temporary relief, but which has no lasting effect, and in truth generally brings on a complication of diseases arising from a state of worn out digestive and urinary organs that nothing but death can relieve. Invalids should trust more to nature for their recovery. A gentle medicinal tonic that stimulates enfeebled digestion and strengthens every part of the system by its soothing and refreshing effect on both mind and body, is nature's truest and best assistant. Such a remedy is Brown's Iron Bitters, a medicine surpassing the sale of all other remedies wherever its merits become known, for it acts in such perfect harmony with the laws of life and health, that all pulmonary, urinary and digestive troubles are prevented and permanently cured by its timely use. It contains no alcohol, and will not blacken the teeth. Physicans and ministers endorse and recommend it.

One moment please.
When winter is passing into summer and summer into winter again, your health should be especially looked to. A spirited discussion is going on in the columns of our town paper over the question: "was our late war a civil war, or a rebellion?" Brains and ink might be better employed in finding out for a dead certainty whether Billy Patterson was actually struck or not; and if so, by whom. Late writers have cast some doubts over this statement which has long been regarded as a historical fact.

Mr. Henry F. Durant, the founder and patron of Wellesley College, died at Wellesley last Monday night. At a period of his life he was one of the ablest and most successful lawyers in Boston, but left the bar many years ago to engage in other pursuits. His last case, as a lawyer, was a trial before referees in which Edward Everett sued the city of Charlestown for damages done his fine home and property in Winchester by the flowage from Mystic Pond. The case had long been in the courts, and was ended by this reference.

Important to Travelers.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is designed to meet the wants of those who need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Hood's Sarsaparilla. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy. $1 a bottle; six for $5.

Faded or Gray Hair.

gradually recovers its youthful color and lustre by the use of Parker's Hair Balsam, an elegant dressing, admired for its purity and rich perfume.

If it were possible

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA for debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which every one feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that Hood's Sarsaparilla contains more real medicinal value than any article before the people.

What a Man Did with Kidney Complaint

DRACUT, MASS.
MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.:
Dear Sirs—I have suffered from kidney complaint and biliousness for fifteen years. Have tried everything and never got any good. Last January, before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, everything I ate bloated me all up, pain in my chest and arms, headache and dizzy. I could not get up without feeling weary and all fagged out. Many mornings I was obliged to lie down on the lounge. To do any work seemed almost impossible. Have taken two bottles. The backache, dizziness, pain in my chest and arms, and that feeling of intense weariness are all gone. I can eat anything and it does not press me at all. Feel just like work; in fact, like a new man. Can heartily recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and hope all who desire to know anything about it will come to me and ask what I think of it. Very truly yours,
JONATHAN J. COBURN.

INTERNATIONAL LESSONS.

Fourth Quarter.

BY REV. HENRY M. GROUT, D. D.

OCTOBER 9.

Lesson 2:

The Tabernacle.

Exodus 40: 1—16.

GOLDEN TEXT:—"Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the Tabernacle." Ex. 40: 34.

So enthusiastic were the people in their gifts and work that the elaborate preparations for the tabernacle were soon completed. In less than six months all its parts were finished. It was now ready to be set up, and in this lesson we have the divine directions for doing this, and for consecrating the priests.

The very first question likely to occur to either teacher or scholar relates to the purpose of the tabernacle. What was it for? It was intended to be God's dwelling place among his ransomed people; his earthly house or home; his royal residence and palace of beauty; the place where he would show himself in his holiness and love. He would be seen of them not on his side of mercy only, for that was only a part of his character. He would be known as holy also, a being to be approached by sinners indeed, but only through atonement for their sin. Of such a God the tabernacle was to be the earthly home. "Let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them." "I will set my tabernacle among you, and my soul shall not abhor you; and I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people." It was called the "tabernacle of the congregation," or "tent of meeting," not, of course, such a meeting place as one of our sanctuaries, but a place at which, but not within which, God would meet with Israel. Only the high priests could enter the holy place, and only the high priest the holiest place of all. Within the tabernacle God received his people only through their annointed representatives.

It is hardly needful that we should here say much of the structure itself. Approaching it on the eastern side, one comes to a space, seventy-five feet broad and one hundred and fifty long, enclosed by costly hangings. Passing within, we are in the outer court. The tabernacle is now a little distance before us, a structure forty-five feet by fifteen, divided into the holy place, thirty feet by fifteen, and the holy of holies, fifteen feet square. Thus there are three parts—the outer court, into which the people may enter; the holy place, entered only by their representatives the priests; and the holy of holies, a secret place where God's face is the only light, and into which only the high priest once a year may come alone. In the outer court is the brazen altar and the laver; in the holy place, the table with the shewbread, the golden candlestick, and the altar of incense; and in the holy of the holies, the ark of the testimony surmounted by the mercy seat, above which rise, with outspread wings, and bending toward the centre, the two cherubim.

Now, the most interesting question in all the lesson relates to the meaning of all this. To this question it is easy to give a general answer. As a whole, it symbolized the majesty, purity, holiness and grace of God, and the way of access to his face and favor. As a type no doubt, it pointed to Christ, and his Church. But it is not so easy to speak with confidence of the meaning of every part.

Let us enter the holy of holies, for here our lesson takes us first. Here, within the veil, is the ark of the testimony, within which are the two tables of the law, and upon which are the mercy seat and the bending cherubim. This is the secret chamber of God; it is the symbol of heaven itself. The tables of the law testify to his own rectitude, and to the righteousness he ever requires of his people. At the mercy seat, as, once every year, the high priests enters to sprinkle the blood of the appointed propitiation, God accepts the offered atonement for his people's sins. Thus mercy and rectitude go together. The former rests upon the latter. The law can never be abrogated and yet, approached through the atoning blood, God is able to forgive; mercy is his delight. The cherubim may symbolize adoring intelligences, or the waiting messengers of God's holy and gracious will.

The table, the candlestick and the altar of incense are in the holy place. There are those who interpret all these as symbolizing what passes from us to God, not what passes from him to us. In this view, the shewbread would represent our offerings to God, particularly the fruits of grace produced in the heart and life, and the candlestick would symbolize the spiritual light, shed abroad by the believer, and the Church as fed by the oil of the Divine Spirit. But, in another view, the table, with its loaves, signifies the heavenly food with which God gladdens and sustains his people, and points to Christ, the Bread of Life; and the candlestick the never-slumbering guardianship of God, and the divine knowledge with which, by the Spirit, he cheers and sanctifies his redeemed. The incense of altar signifies both the ascending progress of God's people and the fragrance of the believer's, consecrated life.

The two objects in the court of the tabernacle were the alter for sacrifices, and the laver for the ablutions of the priests. The principal sacrifices were the sin-offering for atonement, and the burnt offering, which emphasized self-dedication and praise. That these, with the washings at the laver, were without the tabernacle and in the court, is most significant. Does it not impressively remind us of what are, and ever were, the very first steps into the new life and, toward the heavenly rest?

Our first approaches to God are through some offering in atonement for sin, self-dedication to God, and that moral cleansing which God offers through the Divine Spirit. Thus the sinful soul starts on its heavenward way. By the alter and laver we enter the divine paths. Through these we make our way to the holy place, or Church on earth, and thence, at last, into the holy of holies, or heaven above.

The remainder of the lesson relates to the consecration of Aaron and his sons to the priestly office, by which the preparations for the services of the tabernacle was made complete.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. The Old Testament way of life and the New Testament way are not two ways, but one. The study of the one helps us to understand the other. The Bible is thus seen to be a unit. In every part it is from God.

2. Nevertheless ours is the fuller revelation and the clearer light: for us to mistake the way will be to be without excuse.

3. Our meeting place with God is wherever the heart desires and seeks him; yet God is pleased to honor his own sanctuary; to despise his ordinances which centre there is to trample his wisdom under foot.

4. The one central truth of our religion is that of salvation through the blood of Christ; never to be forgotten, never to be obscured.

5. God's way to the holy of holies above is the one sure way. To turn from it to any other is proud defiance. To choose it with all the heart is to be safe here and blest forever.

Mr. Walter F. McCune of Pittsburgh, Pa. writes: "My age is 28 years. I was born with an excellent constitution, but at the 19 having just finished my collegiate education, I fell into habits of dissipation. After six years of fast living I felt my constitution broken down. I put myself under the care of one of our best physicians. His treatment seemed to do me no good. Finally he said at best I could live but a few years, that my bowels, kidneys and lungs were all threatened with consumption and were fast wasting away in certain decay. I tried everything advertised, hoping to gain relief. Finally I drifted into a state of melancholy and hopeless despair, suffering excruciatingly from dyspepsia, short breath, and urinary catarrh. A year ago, I saw Brown's Iron Bitters advertised. I used them and they acted like a charm. I soon began to enjoy dreamless slumber—and now I feel myself a man once more, and have gained 54 pounds since using the remedy. I feel very strong and can hold out a 45 lb. weight. Brown's Iron Bitters saved my life.

For the Journal.

The Lesson of the Hour.

"O there are germs of God-like power
In the trials of this hour."

The last bell has tolled, the last requiem been chanted, and the sod has been tenderly laid upon the Nation's beloved dead.

We have learned, as an American people, how noble and pure a politician, and how grand a man can be the outgrowth of our peculiar institutions. We have seen, with an honest pride, the unbounded energy, and the inexhaustible resources of our country in her effort to smooth the downward pathway for her smitten chief.

And now the current, with equal strength, should set in a different direction. From pulpit and platform and press comes the persuasive "Let us emulate his virtues." 'Tis the popular cry from Maine to California—but there lies the danger. In the great demand for civil service reform we are looking to the new Executive, and the occupants of the various chairs of State, and the ballots of the masses, forgetful of the fact that reform, of every name and grade, must begin with the individual. With us, then, severally and separately, lies the weal or woe of the nation. Garfield's life "had received the inspiration of a high moral purpose." He was in sober, solemn earnest in the furtherance of all elevating enterprises, and the dormant and phlegmatic ranks opened to give room to his energized self-sacrifice. Just so the masses of our every-day live are waiting for your individual leadership in all that is honest and straightforward and of good report.

We need at home in our own streets less of the grasping for the tiny spoils of our brothers' pence; less striving for the pitiful mastery of self; and more of the large charity that magnifies a brother's virtues while it minifies his vices. We need to be forgetful of our own petty burdens and sorrows, and mindful of those about us more heavily laden than we.

It will help us to call often to mind that grand statement of the immortal Garfield: "The worst days of darkness through which I have ever passed have been greatly alleviated by throwing myself with all my energy into some work relating to others."

As little children grasp and carry only one idea at a time, so in the hurry and rush of business competition, let us learn well one lesson in the hour of our grief:—

"Who counts his brother's wellfare
As sacred as his own,
And loves, forgives and pities,
He serveth Me alone."

M.

This enterprising firm have added much to the stock of good novels by the introduction of the Round Robin Series. It has well been asked "What magic wand have these publishers used to produce so many good works of fiction in so short a time?" And readers often enquire, why cannot we have the names of these splendid writers? Patty's Perversities is good enough to make a whole series of itself, while the list of the comical sayings and doings is so large that any attempt to add to them would be useless. The indomitable will of Patsy enabled her to overcome all obstacles, and to say that she would or would not do a thing settled it at once. Several other characters hold prominent places in the story, not less than three of them finding chosen companions with whom they enter on the labors, joys and sorrows of wedded life.

Nearly all the ills that afflict mankind can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in perfect working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as quickly and surely, without interfering with your duties, as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See ad.

Which will Remove All Your Doubts—A Good Investment—One that Yields "AN HUNDRED FOLD."

The world is full of charlatans asking public attention to patent inventions for the mitigation of suffering. Everything claiming the power to do good should come from a reputable source, otherwise it is open to suspicion. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., affirms that his medicine, "Kennedy's Favorite remedy," is the best article of its kind ever produced. Hence it is only just to the public that he refer to his record as a physician and surgeon. Among the capital operations performed by him are: Amputation of the thigh-bone in the case of Abraham Ellsworth, Port Ewen, Ulster Co., N. Y.; amputation of the arm, case of Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and the operation of lithotomy (removal of stone from the bladder), in the case of Simon Tietsell, of Kingston, and the removal of the eye for Oscar Craigg, of Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. These are a few of many. All these persons fully recovered, because Dr. Kennedy prescribed "Favorite Remedy" (which has unequal powers of purifying the Blood). Owing to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after-treatment of his surgical cases, not one has died; all are living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. $1 per bottle.

The Woburn Journal

ANNUAL ADDRESS.

BY ALBERT P. BARRETT.

MR. PRESIDENT AND MEMBERS OF THE OLD 39TH:—Under the blessings of Divine Providence, which has brought us safely through the fiery seas of battle in war, and which has since preserved our lives in these days of peace, we are permitted to meet together once more, in joyful reunion, to grasp each other by the hand, to renew old associations formed amid scenes of mutual suffering and danger, and to revive the glorious and precious memories of the past—memories that we would not let die if we could—could not if we would—they may slumber for a while, but at these fraternal gatherings they come to us unbidden, and crowd upon us so thick and fast that time and speech are totally inadequate to give them even a feeble expression. We meet upon this, our Crystal Reunion, not merely as friends or associates, but as comrades, a distinction peculiarly our own, and which conveys a meaning far deeper and far more significant than any other endearing title can possibly express, no matter what the ties may be which binds humanity together in different associations and brotherhoods. Only those who have passed through the fiery furnace of war, aye, stood even at the very gates of death are entitled to be hailed as Comrades. Only those who have marched together, side by side, stood shoulder to shoulder in the deadly line of battle, or shared one another's burdens and pleasures, in camp and bivouac, can realize the strength or appreciate the beauty of the tie which binds all true soldiers together. Comradeship signifies an unsullied record of duty faithfully performed, sufferings cheerfully borne; self-sacrifices heroically made; honor untarnished preserved; patriotism, pure and unselfish evinced; and loyalty, even unto death, to one country and one flag, and, more than all else, it is the practical exemplification of that Fraternity which unites us together in bonds never to be severed while life shall last.

It is not my purpose at this time, to enter into a detailed history of our regiment, although, as it has been jocosely remarked that "the 39th put down the rebellion," I might be justified in so doing. No, comrades, our faithful and genial Secretary, Comrade Porter, so ably and eloquently filled the position of historian at Somerville, that it would be presumption on my part to attempt to add to its completeness as a record, or its undoubted accuracy as a true and impartial history. But it is well on these occasions to review the past, however cursorily, bring our busy memories into line, concentrate our thoughts, and revive reminiscences long ago forgotten. In those days, we often lived years in moments, and event followed event with such startling rapidity, that we failed to realize their significance, much less understand their true bearing in carrying to a successful issue, the glorious work in which we were engaged. We were but blind agents in its prosecution, controlled by a master-mind, though often by circumstances, and directed by genius, though alas, too often by incapacity, to say nothing worse. We thought much, but said little, and obeyed orders, though sometimes certainly justified in growling. Though inwardly conscious of the stern realities and stubborn facts connected with the events of those days, yet our participation in them, seems to us, after the lapse of so many years, almost a dim and shadowy recollection of the distant past. "The dread battle-sounds have died away; the black-mouthed cannon are dumb: in the furrows once ploughed by cassion-wheels, the daisy or tender violet springs; no longer the hills echo the roar of artillery, and the plains resound with the clatter of hoof-beats, and the clink of sabres; a four years' story seems like a fearful dream that is gone. But, as the fancy kindles, lo, the ghastly scars of the earth reopen, and again the field is peopled with embattled armies,—the dim pall draws back over the landscape, and out of its depths rise the cheer of the victors, and the cries of the wounded,—the tattered ensigns, blazoned with glorious legends, epitomes of history, toss once more in the battle-smoke, the clangor of arms goes up." So we, as we lay aside the usual avocations of life, and assemble together as comrades once revisit in imagination those scenes of suffering, conflict and death, into which we voluntarily entered nineteen years ago.

Again we "don the blue," and full of youthful enthusiasm and patriotic inspiration, exchange the implements of peace for the weapons of war. We experience the petty trials and stern discipline of the camp; the hardships and exposure of the march and bivouac; the excitement of the skirmish, the life and death struggle of the battle-line, when with every nerve strained to its utmost tension, we advance shoulder to shoulder upon the enemy's line; and never to be forgotten or forgiven, the terrible torture, misery and living death of the prison hells of Libby, Belle Isle, Andersonville and Salisbury. We hear the peculiar zip of the death-dealing bullet of the sharpshooters, sure of his victim; the scattering shots of the skirmish line, precurs or of the deadly conflict; the singing minie, the unearthly shriek of the shell, the rattle of the volleyed musketry, emphasized by the deep, sullen roar of the cannon; the heart-rending cries of the wounded and dying, and the hearty cheer mingled with the shrill yell, as the blue and the gray meet in furious charges and counter-charges. We see our colors proudly advancing through the fire and smoke, our ranks decimated by shot and shell, still firm and solid pressing on to the assault; the intervals and woods crowded with dead and dying, constantly increasing in numbers at the expense of the living; the sad procession of the wounded passing to the rear: the long lines of ambulances, freighted with agonized and shattered humanity; the field hospitals, where the ghastly effects of war are most vividly realized, with its scenes of suffering and anguish, borne, thank God, with true American fortitude and heroism; and most significant of all, as the costly price to be paid for Liberty and Union, the numberless mounds, scattered over the length and breadth of the "sacred soil," now truly sacred, if never before, which unmarked and unknown, betokens the last resting-place of comrades, tried and true. We listen with bated breath, to catch at roll-call the familiar voice of comrades near and dear, but we listen in vain! the have gone down before the fell-destroyer—we may perhaps follow on the morrow, and our response be heard no more. Day by day our ranks become smaller and thinner, as the campaign drags its slow, terribly slow length along, through summer heat and winter cold, with alternate victory and defeat, advance and repulse, with hope deferred, but with heart still undismayed, until but a remnant of the long and magnificent array of which was wont to be seen so proudly on review or parade, now not a company line confronts for the last time its brave and gallant antagonist, at Appomatox. We hear with doubt and incredulity as we advance to the charge, the report, flashing along the lines, that "Lee has surrendered," and our hearts thrill with emotions of exultation, and joy, too deep and intense for utterance, as the glorious news is confirmed. Victory at last crowns our labors, victory final and complete, not to be robbed of its fruits, as in the past, by subsequent defeats; victory which brings relief to us from the toils and sufferings of the soldier's life, and triumph to the cause of Liberty and Humanity, for which our comrades have died, and died not in vain. But we were not the only conquerors. "Ten thousand gallant hearts lay cold in soldiers graves, since a twelve month gone, the army crossed the Rapidan; ten thousand heroes, scarred and maimed, were far away in the cities and villages of the North; and tens and tens of thousands more, poisoned by the deadly swamp-breath, or worn down by the toils of the campaign, had dropped by the way side, languished long on hospital pallets, or deserving quick death in victory, had yielded to the torture of disease. Not only those who fell in the Wilderness, at Spottsylvania, along the North Anna, at Cold Harbor, in the trenches on the environs of Petersburg,—but the heroic dead who slept on the ridges of Fredericksburg and Gettysburg, whose rude beds lay hid in the gloom of the woods of Chancellorsville, or adown the Shenadoah Valley, or along the banks of the Chickahominy, or dotting the the plains of Manassas, or whose baptisimal blood rained on the pavement of Baltimore. These all were conquerors on the ninth of April; and a vast host, silent, invisible, tasted the triumph of the day.

As we take up our line of march once more, it seems to us that a change of base or another move to the left is in progress, rather than that we are homeward bound. And it is so strange, after all, that we fail to realize that "the cruel war is over," and that peace has dawned, at last, to bless alike the victor and the vanquished, when, but a short ten days since, the Army of Northern Virginia, stood firm and defiant as of yore, in our path, unconquered and seemingly unconquerable? Is it strange that the heroic immortal Army of the Potomac, so often doomed to bitter dissapointment in the past, with its history written in the blood and agony of unavailing sacrifice, should fail to conceive the possibiliy, much less comprehend the reality, that the goal was won at last, their last battle fought, their old, tried antagonist defeated and scattered, the Confederacy crushed and our glorious Union preserved? Respect for the bravery of the vanquished worthy of a better cause tempers our rejoicings, half-starved ourselves we share with them our our scanty rations and as penniless and destitute, they depart in groups for their desolate homes if perchance they were spared from the ravages of war feelings of pity for their condition present and future, fill our breasts, victims as they were to false teachings and the unholy ambitions unprincipled men, who were careful to be placed where they "could do the most good" for themselves, securing safety and fortune combined while their deluded followers tasted death and poverty. No personal enmity actuated the rank and file of either army but were enemies only in defence of their respective irreconcilable principles.

We continue on our homeward journey our march unmolested by day, and our bivouac undisturbed by night, for now, all is peace, a vivid contrast to our daily experience the past twelve-month; we make our triumphal march through Petersburg where we greet our old Commander with an ovation such as love and devotion alone can inspire; through Richmond, the once proud Capitol of a now defunct Confederacy, laying in desolation and ashes, a far from adequate retribution for her Libby and Belle Isle; through Virginia with its hundreds of battle-fields, not a shot breaking the silence of its woods and vales, once so resonant with the crash of arms and cries of combatants, our former foes, so vigilant and wary now unseen and unfelt; we reach at last the heights of Arlington and view, with hearts filled with emotions of pride and gratitude, the Capitol at Washington, reaching upward in all its majestic proportions, a fitting symbol of the grandeur, strength and integrity of a Nation, preserved, purified, regenerated; we participate in the Grand Review of the immortal Army of the Potomac "the nobles legion of the brave and true," a fitting conclusion to its long and heroic career "that saw the first and last of the war," unshaken in defeat, steadfast in peril, magnanimous in victory; but alas! how few were permitted to follow those torn and tattered battle-flags in that glorious pageant, every shred fluttering proudly in the breeze evoking sad yet glorious memories of the eventful past; "proud memories of many a field; sweet memories of fraternal strife; tender memories of heroic virtues sublimed by grief; exultant memories of the great and final Victory of our Country our Union, and the Rightous Cause, immortal memories with immortal honors blended twine around those splintered staves, weave themselves along the warp and woof of those familiar flags war-worn, begrimmed and baptized with blood." How beautiful and sublime are those tattered remnants, robbed though they may be, of their pristine brightness and purity. Dimmed by battle-smoke torn by shot and shell, the white blended with the red by the blood of those who fell beneath its folds, every fibre is an invisible link, which connects the triumphs of the present, with the struggles of the past, the living victors with the martyred dead. What would we not dare and suffer for the sake of those precious relics, emblems of a Country's honor unsullied and a Nation's glory undimmed! What is that piece of bunting worth? Worth? It stands for home for fireside, for country, for honor! Men will be struck down before they will part with it. Consecrated hands grasp it as it falls from stiffening fingers for it mut not be trampled! "What deeds of heroic daring, what examples of unselfish devotion illumine the pages of History of all ages, in defence of the Flag!" The loyalty and patriotism of our comrades, who, on land and sea, sealed their fidelity to the Flag in their life's blood rather than its starry folds should touch the ground or grace the enemy's triumph have made forever bright and glorious the annals of our civil strife; the memories of their heroism and valor are embalmed in the hearts of posterity and will inspire them to realize, as they did, that a country worth living for is worth dying for.

"Mustered out" we are soon on our journey Northward, and a triumphal journey it proves to be, as we witness all along the route, the enthusiastic and magnificent manifestations of a people's gratitude toward those who had dared all for country and flag, bringing back to them the one undivided, the other unsullied. Who of us can forget the enthusiasm and intense excitement of that homeward trip, and often was it remarked "that it was worth a three year's campaign to receive such a royal reception," so hearty, so sincere, so universal, were the greetings which were showered upon us. But how insignificant are these emotions of pleasure and gratitude, evoked by this continued ovation, when compared those of joy and thanksgiving, deep and unutterable, which fill our hearts, when we meet at last, our loved ones in that long looked for yet hardly hoped for reunion, the family circle once more unbroken, the vacant chair once more filled—a scene of happiness too tender, too pure, too sacred to be described by mortal brush or pen. Truly it is a blessed and sanctified moment not only to those whose soldier days are over, but twice blessed to those women of the war, who, after the long, terrible years of mingled hopes and fears, watching and waiting in silent agony for the war to cease, the lips ever uttering words of cheer and encouragement, while the heart was heavy with gloomy forebodings, and the mind distracted with anxiety, welcomed to their hearts and homes, the loved husband, father, son and brother; purified by trial, strengthened by suffering sanctified by self-sacrifice, a new and higher life seems to open to all alike, and home, so nearly lost forever, with all its untold blessings and happiness becomes doubly dear and precious as never before.

Yet, comrades, in the midst of a nation's joy and thanksgiving, there are thousands of once happy homes again filled with mourning, as, to tens of thousands of bereaved and stricken ones, these scenes bring only bitter memories of the past with its agony and tears, its shattered hopes, and fond anticipations never to be realized. The eye dim with tears, the lips quivering with emotion, the pallid countenance, silently, yet how eloquently expressing the utter despair and heartfelt grief, which meet the gaze throughout the land, gives sad proof, if such were needed, that of those who went bravely down into the conflict in the pride and strength of manhood, all did not come back. We sympathize, as comrades alone can, with those whose grief is reopened, as others rejoice, who weep as others shed tears of happiness and joy, who watch and wait in vain, for the coming step, as others are blessed with the safe return of loved ones, victors, crowned with the victor's wreath, and greeted with the joyful acclamations of a grateful people, with triumphal procession, music and cannon.

"Be pitiful, O women! with pity softly kind;
You clasp your war warn veterans—there are mothers eyes tear-blind,
"Oh! hear the music dying, dying on the wind.
And still my eyes are seeking for the one I cannot find.

To us also, these days are not wholly free from grief and sadness, as the mystic chords of memory bring back to us the old familiar forms and faces of comrades, whom we had come to love with a brother's affection, now missing from their accustomed place in line. We had marched side by side many a weary mile, slept under the same blanket in many a camp and bivouac, drank from the same canteen, and divided the last ration on many a campaign, shared alike the pleasures and trials, the hopes and fears of our soldier life, making its burden less heavy by mutual sympathy and kindly acts, and looked forward with fond anticipation to the time, when, the war over, we could share together the blessings of home and peace, as we had shared together the toil and hardships of war. Alas! to those noble comrades the war was soon, far too soon over, as mustered out by grim Death, they have but gone before us to that eternal home, where all is beavenly peace and joy. "Their last battle is fought, their last mareh ended; their last bivouac made; they sleep well, in that deep slumber, from which no bugle call or sound of any kind shall awake them, until the loud reveille, which shall shake not the earth only, but also heaven." Yes, comrades, they sleep well, among the hills of Maryland, along the slopes of the Blue Ridge, in the dark, deep recesses of the Wilderness and Spottsylvania, along the banks of the North Anna and the Tolopotomy, on the plains of Petersburg, in the crowded trenches of Belle Isle, Andersonville and Salisbury. We had seen them waste away day by day, in hospital tent, victims to dread disease; seen them fall out by the wayside, worn down by fatigue and exposure; seen them fall as the leaves fall, with their faces to the foe; seen them bear with heroic fortitude, the pain and agony of shattered limb and mutilated body, on battle-field and field-hospital, soon to sink away into the eternal slumber; seen them stricken down by our side, tenderly held them in our arms, as the life-blood fast ebbed away, received their last dying message to loved ones far away, and reverently and sadly closed their eyes in death, knowing full well that they would have done as much for us had we, in their stead, fallen the sacrifice to country and flag; seen them mere wrecks of humanity, through a systematic scheme of starvation and exposure, ourselves helpless to succor, powerless to save, welcome death with a smile, the only smile that visited their wan and haggard faces dering those terrible days and months, as the only relief from untold agony and tortue, both of mind and body; and, as if rebel hatred and barbarism could not be satisfied with visiting upon the living their ingenious cruelty, the unfeeling wretches wreaked their vengance upon the lifeless bodies, throwing them like logs of wood into shallow trenches, already too well filled with their victims, with all the indignities and brutality, their chivalrous nature was capable of conceiving.

Our comrades suffered, starved and died, without a crime.

We read in history, when barbarism and ignorance were the chrracteristics of nations, and war waged in its most relentless form was their principal occupation and pastime, of the terrible torture and wholesale tortures which marked the treatment of unfortunate prisoners of war, the only redeemine feature being that death soon released them from prolonged suffering; but it has been reserved for the refined, educated and chivalrous leaders of the so-called Southern Confederacy, in this civilized and enlightened nineteenth century, to conceive and carry into a too successful execution, that hellish scheme whereby 30,000 prisoners of war were deliberately and systematically starved to death, and scores of thousands are still suffering from the effects of their inhuman treatment. No language, however eloquent or descriptive, can give the slightest conception of the sufferings and torture to which our comrades were subjected, when, dying by inches, with no hope this side the grave, they slowly and surely reached that condition of body and mind, when, if surviving, they would be no further benefit to their flag, if haply they were to themselves, or if dying under the merciless ordeal so much the better for the Confederacy. It was the last crowning exhibition of the barbarism of slavery, which in peace consigned to the auction block, or doomed to debauchery thousands of helpless human beings, and when war had thrown down all restraints of society, and torn off the cloak of hospitality and refinement which concealed the real instincts of the heart, transforming the gentleman into ruffian, gave to the world the damning proof of the legitimate outgrowth of that institution. We may recognize the sencerity of mistaken zeal and honor the bravery of a misguided foe, when engaged face to face in honorable warfare, but when we bring to mind these terrible scenes, it is too much to expect of us that we can clasp hands across the death trenches of Southern prison pens,

The Woburn Journal

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

THE SPECIAL SESSION.

The Senate met in special session last Monday, and after being called to order, and the usual prayer offered, Mr. Pendleton introduced a resolution declaring Senator Bayard President pro tem. This was resisted by Mr. Edmunds, and a lively debate followed. The upshot of the matter however was what we predicted last week it would be, the election of a Democrat to fill the chair, and Senator Bayard was the fortunate member on whom the choice fell.

As David Davis and Mahone voted with the Republicans, had the three new members been qualified prior to the vote for President being taken Mr. Bayard would not have been chosen; but the course of the Democrats is sustained by the weight of precedents, and no very good reason is seen why they should not have taken advantage of their legal rights to select one of their number to preside over the Senate.

OHIO AND IOWA.

General elections were held in the above States on last Tuesday, and the Republicans made a clean sweep in both. Foster's majority in Ohio is not less than 20,000 and the Republicans elected a majority of the Legislature, which was considerably better than was feared. The Republican majority in Iowa is hard on to 40,000. These are very bad States for Democratic office-seekers to pitch their tents in.

☞ The New England Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Institute Fair has been in successful operation in Boston since early in September, and at no time since its opening has the interest in it been so strong and general nor the attendance so large as at present. Each day and evening the immense building on Huntington Avenue, which covers ground enough for a respectable farm, is filled with people from all parts of New England, who are interested and delighted with the thousand-and-one strange, curious and beautiful things to be seen there. One may spend a whole day pleasantly and profitably among the rare products of mechanical skill—the world of ponderous machinery, the manufacture of boots and shoes—a wonderful sight!—rich fabrics of the looms, and the looms in full operation that make them; elegant carriages, exquisite marble works, electric lights—and all and singular the immense collection of art and mechanical products which the spacious rooms and galleries contain—and then want to go back the next day and finish up his sight-seeing. To enumerate even the principal objects of interests to be found in this great and successful Fair would require more space than we can spare; therefore we close with the advice that every one make sure to attend for a day, or evening at least, and see for himself what the mammoth building contains.

☞ Efforts to discredit the letter of Mr. Blaine, written last December in reply to an invitation from the President elect to take a place in his Cabinet, have not so far amounted to much. The letter was printed without Mr. Blaine's knowledge in the Philadelphia Press last week, and made an impression on the public mind which his enemies immediately attempted to counteract by asserting the letter a forgery, or, if not that, a political trick; but the explanation of the Press and the proved genuiness of the document have rendered their work fruitless. If anything was wanting to show the real greatness of the man and the nobility of his nature, that letter supplied it. Mr. Blaine is the ablest statesman in the country today. Not only the ablest but the cleanest among America's men in public life. At no past period has he been so popular as now. The people are fast finding out that he is something a great deal more and better than the mere politician that he has been accounted, and even Massachusetts acknowledges his pre-eminent intellectual strength and purity of character. If a National Republican Convention was in order next week Mr. Blaine would be nominated for the Presidency by acclamation.

☞ Mr. Henry D. Cushing presided at the meeting of the Prohibitory State Committee held in room 19, 28 School street, Boston, on Wednesday afternoon. Appropriate resolutions on the death of their candidate for Lieut. Governor, Timothy C. Earl, were adopted. Subsequently Mr. Amos Cummings of Woburn was elected Chairman of the State Committee; C. A. Hovey, Secretary; and Henry D. Cushing, Treasurer. John Blackmer of Springfield was chosen to fill the place made vacant by the death of Mr. Earle. Messrs. Amos Cummings and Henry D. Cushing were selected as delegates to the National Reform Conference to be held in New York on Oct. 18 and 19. Plans for the campaign were discussed and measures taken to make it a lively one.

☞ Messrs. Thomas Marsh & Co., 919 Washington street, have recently published a complete Map of Boston, which will be found of great utility to people, especially strangers, visiting, or desiring a knowledge of the New England metropolis. It is highly spoken of by the Boston Press, and generally certified to as correct and full. The map is folded into a cover just suited for the pocket, and is sold for twenty-five cents.

SHALL WE PRAY? The Christian world's answered prayer for Garfield will be discussed by Rev. V. M. Simons at the M. E. church on next Sabbath afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock. All are cordially invited to hear the discussion.

— Mr. E. O. Soles's six-year old stallion, Glendower Patchen, took second premium at the Middlesex County Fair lately held at Concord. He is a very fine animal, clean limbed, full of sinews, of graceful and rapid movement. He deserved the honors won.

— One who was present, and a competent judge, by the way, informs us that the singing by Sallie Clough-Phinney at an entertainment given at Stoneham last week, was a great artistic success. She sang splendidly, and delighted a large and appreciative audience.

— Mr. A. Cummings announces the date of his fall opening in another column of this paper. Everybody knows what an opening of millinery goods at Cumming's means, which obviates the necessity of our saying anything about this one.

— A new road is being built and the grounds prepared for the new soap manufactory at Walnut Hill, and the general appearance of things seem to indicate that it is to be a pretty sizable concern. With proper encouragement it would bring 300 or 400 people into Woburn.

— Misses Hayford & Adams have in this issue of the JOURNAL the announcement of their fall millinery opening, to which attention is directed. Having purchased a very fine stock of fall goods in the latest styles and best material they respectfully invite the ladies of Woburn and neighboring towns to attend their opening and examine the handsome things for sale, believing that it will be for their interests to do so. Their rooms have been pleasantly fitted up, and, with the nice goods they contain, are very attractive. Don't forget the date of opening.

— The patriotic ladies of Woburn have organized an auxiliary aid society to the Soldier's Home Bazarr to be held in the Mechanic Fair building, Boston, in December, in which it is proposed to have a Woburn table. The officers of the auxiliary are: President — Mrs. A. M. Winn; Secretary—Susan Edgell; Treasurer — Mrs. John S. True. A committee has been chosen to canvas the town for aid, and as the object is a very worthy and commendable one it is to be hoped their applications will be liberally responded to.

— We have reasons to believe that the dramatic entertainment to be given by the Mark Allen Combination at Lyceum Hall next Wednesday evening, will be a very fine one, and worthy a generous patronage by our people. The piece is a capital one, in which Mr. Mark Allen takes the leading part, supported by a company of first class dramatic talent, accustomed to the boards and the very best audiences. Although several other entertainments are set down for that evening we shall be surprised if "The Last Man" does not bring out a full house.

— Circumstances over which the Court had no control have had a somewhat depressing influence on business before His Honor this week. It is expected that affairs there will assume a livelier appearance as autumn advances: James Grear came from Somerville in a how-come-you-so state, and after floundering around doing much damage with his team, was pulled in by officer Welch, and the team placed in the care of Jones & Doyle: verdict, d'k, $1 and cost. — Mr. Frank H. Leathe met with a serious accident at Ham's grain mill on Thursday morning. While oiling the gearing of the elevator his left hand became caught in the cogs and so terribly was it crushed that the thumb and forefinger had to be amputated. Done by Dr. Bartlett.

— Mr. Frank B. Pierce has an advertisement in this paper which contains a good many things very interesting to the people of this town. Please glance over the list of prices, and then say whether you don't think they are lower than Boston figures for the same quality of goods.

— On day before yesterday a terrible accident occurred at Walnut Hill. Some time during the day Mrs. John Fitzgerald fell down stairs and received injuries from which it is thought she cannot recover. When taken up it was found that her nose, both arms, and her back were broken, besides being badly cut and bruised about the head. It was found also that the poor woman's body was entirely paralyzed from the chest down. It was one of the worst accidents that has recently happened here. Mrs. Fitzgerald was taken to the Mass. Gen'l Hospital by Dr. Bartlett.

— Rev. Leander Thompson, Nathan Wyman, T. H. Hill, Leonard Thompson and G. M. Champney are the committee on preparing papers to be read before the Rumford Historical Association this winter. Dr. J. P. Elliot and James L. Fowle were made members at the last meeting. A vote of thanks were given to Mr. Leonard Thompson for the present of a printed Constitution and Record. At the meeting Mr. Marshall Tidd recounted his efforts to secure Count Rumford's violin. A China bowl, once the property of Count Rumford, was presented by Miss Harriet Chandler of Fisherville, N. H.

— The National Band gave its final concert on the Common last Saturday evening by adjournment. Frequent light showers of rain interfered somewhat with the enjoyment of the entertainment, notwithstanding which the full programme was given. It was a splendid one too—the best of the series—and there was a large audience out to listen to it. The Nationals have given a first class course, and ended up in a manner that will make their future concerts more of an object with our citizens than ever before, even. The selections on Saturday evening were not only very fine, but they were admirably executed, thus rendering the closing concert a grand success.

— The attention of the regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoon was occupied with the consideration of the efficiency of prayer. The different speakers held that the prayers of the faithful are always answered. The prayer of the world for the life of our beloved late president is to be answered,—not as we had hoped by restoration, but in the great and good results which we expected would follow that event. The speakers deprecated what they seemed to believe a present season of spiritual drouth, yet are looking through faith for the freshening dews, may it be, which glitter not transiently in the morning sun—that manifestation of things spiritual which, like a perennially flowing river, springs by divine favor from the silent reclaiming influence of every day Christian acts. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord" saith the prophet, "and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed." *

— The Medical School of Harvard University has conferred upon Dr. Geo. S. Dodge the degree of M. D. under circumstances which make it no small compliment, as only two others have received it under like circumstances in ten years, or since Harvard raised its standard of scholarship. Such an honor from old Harvard now means something—that a man is a practical chemist both in general and medical chemistry. It means that he has passed a very rigid examination in twelve of the allied branches of medical science, and it is an acknowledgement from the highest medical authority in the land of one's competency to treat all diseases, either medical or surgical, in accordance with all that modern science can teach of the art of healing. And Dr. Dodge is every way worthy of the exceptional honor conferred on him by the famous school.

There Statements Indorsed.

A strong statement unqualifiedly indorsed must induce confidence. In this connection we note the following from Dr. Louis Bock & Son, Sheboygan, Wis.: We have been handling St. Jacobs Oil and are pleased with the large demand. Hardly a day goes by without hearing from some one or another of our patrons having used it with entire satisfaction, saying it is the best thing they ever tried, and we join them in so saying.

ders never came, thanks to the judgement of Gen. Warren, who, nobly preferring to sacrifice himself rather than his command, assumed the responsibility of suspending the attack. Gen. Meade, convinced that his judgment was correct, ordered the army to fall back across the Rapidan, the 39th being the last to cross. Moving to Kelley's Ford, our Corps was soon ordered to Culpepper, and beyond, our Brigade being eventually stationed at Mitchell's Station, the extreme outpost of the army. Here we remained four months, during which time, the 39th attained its highest efficiency in drill and discipline, while our camp was concluded by all to be the handsomest in the A. of P. In the reorganization, the old historic First Corps passed out of existence, but never from our memory, and consolidated into two divisions, became the 2nd and 4th of the Fifth Corps. Our Brigade still retained its designation as the 1st Brig. 2nd Div., with our old Division commander, Gen. Robinson, while Gen. Warren was assigned to the command of the Fifth Corps.

May 4th, 1864, the 39th broke camp, mustering 485 rank and file, and on the morning of the fifth the campaign opened in earnest in the terrible Wilderness and for forty days and nights we were not out of sound of rifle or cannon. During this time, the regiment was engaged in the Wilderness with its fierce contest with unseen foes; Alsop's Farm, May 8th, where our Brigade, far in advance of the army, led by Gen. Robinson in person, made that brilliant charge upon the enemy's works. Outnumbered and flanked we fell back, and here our gallant Robinson received his wound while rallying his men; I am proud to say that the 39th with colors under command of our brave "little Colonel," were the last to fall back, and then, only when we saw our beloved commander stricken down; well did he earn the title of the "Hero of Spottsylvania" that day and only that we were asked to perform impossibilities, he would have won the victory which would have thereby changed the entire campaign; in the hearts of everyone who followed his old Division flag, the remembrance of his thoughtfulness for, and earnest attention to, the welfare and comfort of his men whether in camp, field or bivouac, will be forevor cherished. Laurel Hill, May 10, "that hell on earth," with its terrible slaughter pen, Spottsylvania May 14 to 19, with its continual picket-fire, North Anna, with its "pretty little fight," and glorious victory; Tolopotomoy Creek, with its sharp skirmish; Cold Harbor, where, as the "Flying Brigade," we were continually under fire; White Oak Swamp, where we covered the march of the entire army, with our Division; all historic names, vivid reminders of that terrible campaign unparralleled in history. To this date, June 16, the losses in the Fifth Corps were 13,930, of whom but 1120 were missing.

Crossing the James, the operations of the army consisted of flank movements to the left, until the capture of Five Forks sealed the doom of the Southern Confederacy. The old First Corps was now consolidated into one division, the 3d under Gen. Crawford, our Brigade still remaining the First. June 18, our Corps took the advance—assaulted the enemy's lines at Petersburg, were repulsed with heavy loss, fell back and threw up works near the Marshall House; Gen. Warren being certainly correct in believing "that charging was about played out," when he protested against that intended midnight charge. Soon moving to the left to the Jerusalem Plank Road, we there remained until Aug. 18, being occupied in picketing the lines, and building earthworks, being principally engaged upon a large fort called Fort Davis, so named in honor of our Colonel who was killed by a shell, July 11. In his death the regiment met with its greatest loss, being a commander wholly devoted to the wellfare and interests of his men, while the service could then illy spare an officer equalled by few, unsurpassed by none. Aug. 18th, the 5th Corps was ordered to gain possession of the Weldon Road, former attempts having disastrously failed. "Gen. Warren always got what he went for, and kept what he got," and this occasion was no exception. This was a disastrous field for the 39th however, its losses being 285 killed, wounded and missing, 72 answering at roll-call the night of the 19th. Here Col. Pierson received what we feared was a mortal wound, but through kind Providence he recovered, but was unable to rejoin his command. Another reorganization took place owing to our severe losses, and all the old 2d Div. was assigned to one small brigade under that brave but unfortunate officer, Gen. Henry W. Baxter. From this time until December the brigade was principally occupied in garrison and guard duty along the lines, taking part, however, in the engagement of Peeble's Farm, and making several rocconnoisances in which the loss was slight. During this time Col. Tremlett joined the regiment, though hardly a full company in numbers, a vivid contrast to its appearance when he left us the year previous. Dec. 7, the Corps started on the famous Weldon Raid, in which the 39th took the advance, and covered the retreat, returning to camp with but slight loss. Dec. 23, the regiment went into winter-quarters near the Jerusalem Plank Road, but not for the winter it decidedly proved. From the Adjt. Gen. Report of Mass. regiments, we find that the losses of the 39th aggregate 515, from May 5, to Dec. 31, 1864, unmistakable evidence of hard service.

Feb. 4, 1865, the Corps moved to the left, and from the 5th to the 8th was fought the battle of Hatcher's Run, in which the 39th suffered heavily, losing nearly half its number. On the 7th the regiment deployed as skirmishers, took the lines of rifle-pits and took more prisoners than the 39th mustered for duty, for which gallant action it received, even from Gen. Crawford, unqualified praise and commendation. Falling back, new quarters were built near Hatcher's Run, where the regiment remained until the final campaign, May 29, 1865, on which day it took up its line of march numbering 120 muskets. It soon became engaged in skirmishing, but steadily advanced until on the 31st the enemy made a massed attack, with 15,000 men upon our somewhat isolated corps. But Lee's old game did not work this time, thanks to the genius of Gen. Warren in the disposition of his troops, and although two divisions attacked by a rear and flank fire fell back, the First Division was ready for them, ane drove them back from whence they came. This engagement of Gravelly Run was of short duration, but the 39th lost nearly half its number in killed and wounded, Col. Tremlet and Capt. Kinsley receiving mortal wounds, the former of whom had endeared himself to his men, in the short time he commanded the regiment, while of the latter it can be truly said, "none knew him but to love." April 1, the Fifth corps moved to the left, and at 4 p. m. an attack was made upon Five Forks in conjunction with the cavalry, which veiled the advance. Though hardly a handful with but fifty men in line, and with hard work ahead, as evidenced by the captain taking the name of every man, the 39th nobly did its duty in that glorious contest, and rightly rejoiced in the victory won. When the lines hesitated under the terrible fire, and Gen. Warren dashed to the front, calling upon his devoted men to follow, the old white flag of the 39th borne by Sergt. Whitney was the first to respond, and with one grand, irresistable charge, we swept over the rebel lines like a whirlwind, and the Rebellion was smashed to pieces. Referring to this incident in the battle, a distinguished historian says: "The history of the war furnishes no equally splendid illustration of personal magnetism. Warren led the van of the rushing lines; his horse was fatally shot within a few feet of the breastworks, and he himself was in imminent peril, when a gallant officer, Col. Richardson of the 7th Wisconsin, sprang between him and the enemy, receiving a severe wound, but shielding from hurt the person of his loved commander." All honor and gratitude to that noble officer, but comrades, he did no more than every man in the old Fifth Corps would have done if the occasion required the sacrifice. It is far more honorable and glorious to be the recipient of such love affection and self-sacrifice, than to receive the honor and glory of winning victories when won at the expense of another. As long as a soldier of the old Fifth corps survives, so long will the memory of our "Little Corporal" be kept green in their hearts. The pursuit of Lee was immediately commenced, Richmond and Petersburg, having fallen, and on Sunday, April 9, Lee surrendered, and "the cruel war was over." Marching overland to Washington, the 39th took part in the grand review, was mustered out June 3, reached Readville, June 6, formally discharged June 14, and the regiment, with its glorious record, passed into history. Whether its record of 19 battles and 28 skirmishes was hardly one or not, let the following statistics of the experience of one company which was but that of all, be a sufficient answer: Whole number on roll, 142; number transferred, but never joined company, 13; actually in service, 129; number died or discharged previous to joining A. of P., 20; number on duty in A. of P., 109. Of these six were killed, 6 died of wounds, 3 died of disease, 13 died in prison, 11 were discharged on account of wounds, 30 were wounded but returned to duty, and 29 were taken prisoner in addition to the 13 who died, making a total of 98 comrades out of a total of 108, who suffered to a more or less extent the casualties of war. Is not this a record worthy of the 39th, of the old A. of P., of the old Bay State? Comrades, may this this occasion, with its glorious memories of the past, bind us still stronger together in that fraternity which kept us united in those days of trial, and inspire us with still more fervent devotion to the cause of Liberty and Humanity. Let us so live, that when we shall be mustered out by the Great Commander of us all, those we leave behind us may say above our graves, "Here lies the body of a true-hearted, brave and earnest defender of the Republic."

Great dissatisfaction still exists on the part of business men here concerning the fares on the B. & L. R. R. They claim that the tickets are higher than on most roads running into Boston from towns eight miles out, as Winchester is, and insist on a reduction. I think there is justice in the claim of these gentlemen. I think also that the R. R. Company would make money by a fair reduction, and if the tickets from Woburn were fifteen cents instead of eighteen it would be likewise advantageous to the Company.

An Old Woman's Advice.

Aunt Ratchel, writing to the Cincinnati Enquirer, says: "When you feel unwell and think you must take medicine, for goodness' sake 'get the best.' If you need a remedy that will make you regular in your habits, give you a good natural appetite, make your skin clear and smooth, and remove all blemishes that indicate ill-health; if you wish to be free from mental depression, fretfulness, peevishness, wakefulness and other disorders, use Brown's Iron Bitters."

Schools.—Miss H. E. Adams, teacher of the South school has gone to teach in Hyde Park. Miss I. H. Page of the North school tades her place, and Miss Edith Walker has been appointed to fill the vacancy at the North.

Harvest Concert.—A very interesting concert was given at the church last Sunday evening. A dialogue "crowning the year," was recited by the young ladies and children, and songs and recitations appropriate to the Harvest season were given by members of the Sunday School. The exercises, without exception, were well and promptly rendered. A tasteful motto, "Harvest Home," framed with vines and clusters of grapes, was placed on the desk, and the church was decorated with flowers, fruit and grain.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Has "decided" claims upon the public. This is positively proven by the immense good it has done to those who have been cured of diseases from which they have suffered intensely for years, as verified by the published testimonials, every one of which is a positive fact.

CHELSEA, Vt., Feb. 24, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.: The 6th day of last June I was taken sick with a swelling on my right foot, and with an awful pain. The swelling went all over me. My face was swelled so that I could with difficulty see out of my eyes, and I broke out over the whole surface of my body; my right foot up to my knee was one raw, itching mass, and my ankle and foot so lame and sore I could not step on it, and it would run so as to wet a bandage through in an hour. In this condition Mr. W. F. Hood (of the firm of A. R. Hood & Son, druggists, of this town), handed me a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and told me to take it. I did so, and by the time I had taken one bottle I found that it was doing me good. I have since taken five bottles more. After I had taken three bottles my soreness began to leave me, and I have been growing better every day, so that to-day I can walk without going lame. I have no soreness in my ankle and it has healed all up, and does not run at all. I owe my recovery to your Sarsaparilla. I write this to let you know that I think it deserves the confidence of the public, especially those who are troubled with humors.

Yours most truly,
JOSIAH PITKIN.

P. S. Every person that saw me said that I never would get over my lameness without having a running sore on my ankle; but thank God I have. J. P.

No other Sarsaparilla has such a sharpening effect upon the appetite. No other preparation tones and strengthens the digestive organs like HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Price one dollar, or six bottles for five dollars. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

with the cowardly inhuman apologies of humanity, who exhibited their bravery in shooting down like dogs, defenceless, starving prisioners "as their sweet will might dictate," willing tools of those high in authority, whom we trust his Satanic majesty will not disown as his apt pupils. But what less could be expected of them, when they were encouraged to continue their work of death, by promises of reward and preferment at the hands of the rebel authorities. Biographers may deny, historians may palliate and excuse, but it has been conclusively shown, especially from the testimony of rebel officials, that, primarily, the responsibility of this barbarous treatment of prisoners rested upon Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee, the one as chief executive, the other as commander-in-chief. One word from them would have given our unfortunate comrades, at least, food and shelter, and spared to them their terrible sufferings and agonizing deaths, but that one word was never uttered. They could not plead ignorance of the ill treatment of prisoners, for Libby and Belle Isle were at their very doors. Remonstrances and petitions from rebel surgeons and prison officials were alike coolly ignored at Richmond, officers, actuated by feelings of humanity, endeavoring to better their condition were summarily removed to make way for fiends in human form, who would improve, if possible, upon the hellish plans already being carried out; guards who have met us on the field of battle and knew how to treat a fallen foe, were relieved and sent to the front, their post of duty filled by picked ruffians, who exhibited so much zeal "in getting rid of the damned Yanks," that they earned their 30 days, furlough, over and over again. Starving in the midst of plenty, dying from exposure to summer heat and winter cold, surrounded by forests, compelled to drink liquid death, with pure, life giving water within rifle shot—all this seems incredible, yet, it is a fact, it is history, and its existence can never be blotted out from the record. Condign punisment it is true, has been visited upon the principal agents in its prosecution, yet the principle instigator and abettor still lives unhung. What punishment remains in store for him we know not, but "the mills of the gods grind slow," and the "man without a country" may yet learn that "they grind exceedingly sure" and receive the reward due to his treachery and crimes; but if not this side of the river, we trust that justice untempered with mercy, will be meted out to him according to his just deserts, on the other, and while we may respect the noble character as a man, and recognize the undoubted genius as a soldier, of Robert E. Lee, yet his deliberate treason to his Flag and silent approval, if not active participation in the diabolical plot, leaves a stain upon his otherwise brilliant record never to be effaced.

Extended reference has thus been made to this sad phase of our civil strife, from the fact that the prison pen with its infamous record of suffering and death furnishes a very important chapter in the history of the 39th. One hundred and twenty-five of our comrades in the very bloom of health and strength, never better fitted to withstand the hardship and exposure of active campaigning, were there starved and murdered guilty of no crime, unless fidelity to Country and Flagg be considered such; and one hundred and twenty-five more spared to leave the abode of wretchedness and disease brought home with them firmly seated in their systems, the effects of their inhuman treatment some of whom have since died therefrom and others are still suffering. Too well the infamous wretches performed their alloted task, but, if the could destroy the body they could not subdue the spirit and manhood of their unfortunate victims. Though freely offered food shelter and life if they would but acknowledge allegiance to the Southern Confederacy they spurned with contempt the base temptation, preferring starvation to plenty, exposure to shelter, despair and death to hope and life, thus furnishing to the world the grandest exhibition of fidelity to principle and loyalty to Flag ever witnessed forever sickening the aspersions of our enemies at home and abroad that the Union army was composed of mercenaries, whose patrioism was measured by dollars and cents. To these noble comrades, true heroes all, the highest honors of a grateful Nation should be awarded to the dead, the immortal memory of their devotion, and heroic self-sacrifice,—to the living, a substantial and worthy recognition of their patriotism and loyalty, while the authors of this infernal scheme will be consigned, by all true men, to everlasting intamy and disgrace, and the scenes of their atrocities will remain imperishable monuments of rebel hate, barbarity and cruelty.

With our "final discharge," the 39th ceases to exist, as an organization, and passes into the realms of history, and our career as soldiers is now ended. We lay aside the well-worn suit of blue, and released from the duties of citizen soldier in war, assume the responsibilities of the soldier citizen in peace. The one has better fitted us for the other, and the lessons of discipline, self-reliance and obedience, so hardly learned, exercise controlling influence in our civic life. In the spirit of true American mahnood which had so nobly stood the test of war's trials and temptations, the returned soldiers throughout the land, quietly reassume their former pursuits of life and merge imperceptibly into the great body of society, putting to flight the base insinuations and shameless fears indulged in by many, that the return of the volunteer soldiery would be the signal for confusion crime and violence, with property unsafe, lives imperilled, and all the nameless outrages of which their Copperhead imaginations could conceive. Little could they understand the patriotic fervor, entirely wanting in themselves, which animated the American volunteer, "with a heart and mind trained to a fine sense of justice, and to a resolution equal to a sacrifice of life itself, in behalf of right and duty." Little did they know of that loyalty of heart to home, and dear ones far away, which kept them unsullied by the demoralization of army life, through those long terrible years. Around their distant homes clustered their thoughts, their hopes, their affections; true to these inspirations, they could not but be true to themselves, to honor, to country,—faithful in war, law-abiding in peace. Symbolized in heroic statues of marble and bronze, immortalized in history, the American volunteer will forever stand forth as the personification of manly courage, heroic self-sacrifice, and pure patriotism, loving peace better than war, and only loving war as a means of pence."

Such, comrades, are among the leading characteristics of our army life, being the events which are most vividly impressed upon our memories, and which, in the aggregate furnish the material for history. But these, after all, are but incidents in our army experience, and experience common to all, yet differing according to individual temperament, character and impulse. Mental trials and sufferings, as well as physical hardships and privations formed no inconsiderable portion of our army life, and we soon found that whatever might suit our personal convenience and notions were consequence. These are entirely lost sight of in the glowing pen-pictures of the "pomp and circumstance of war," but, none the less, are stern realities of which those who did not bear the heat and burden of the day can never know much. We could bear hardship, privation and even death without a murmur, but it was hard, very hard to surrender unconditionally, our individual manhood and identity, to become a part of that living machine—the army. That we did so, the incomparable discipline attained by the Army of the Potomac, unequalled in any other army, conclusively shows. The sterling common-sense and high intelligence of the Volunteer, together with his patriotism lifted him up above all individual preferences, realizing full well, that without that discipline the army would be but an armed mob, more dangerous to itself than to the enemy. How well we, as an organization learned the stern lessons of war, let the history of the 39th bear witness. With a brief reference to its well-earned record, worthy of itself of the glorious old Army of the Potomac and of the Old Bay State, I will close.

The 39th was recruited under the call of July 4, 1862, for 300,000 men, for three years. Leaving the state Sept. 6, 1862, for the seat of war, at that time dangerously near the capitol, the second battle of Bull Run having been fought and lost. Our departure was decidedly a hurried one, and upon arriving in Washington, narrowly escaped our baptism of fire at Antietam, but being without tents and wagons and undrilled and undisciplined, we were assigned to the defences of Washington, in which department we remained until July 9, 1863. The first seven months may well be termed "our school of the soldier," and if any regiment became thoroughly conversant with the preliminary lessons of war, the 39th was certainly one. Col. P. Stearns Davis proved to be a strict discipilarian and thorough soldier, and under his unceasing efforts, the regiment from the first took the highest rank for excellence in drill, neat and soldierly appearance, and faithful discharge of duty, being subject to the most severe and exacting discipline, to but few regiments so intolerable. Edwards Ferry, Conrad's Ferry, which just missed being our first battle-ground, Seneca Mills, and Big Muddy Branch on the Potomac, Offutt's Cross Road and Poolesville, were familiar names and places to us then, and linger in our memory still as the scenes of our unceasing round of picket, camp-guard, and fatigue, company, and batallion drill, and inspections without number. April 15, 1863, the 39th was detatched from the Brigade consisting of the 14th N. H., 10th Vt., 23d Maine, and 10th Mass. Battery, and left our winter quarters at Poolesville en route for Washington, where after a little delay, again narrowly escaping being transferred to Norfolk, Virginia, we were officially detailed as Provost Guard. The three months here passed were the hardest and most trying of any during our service. The duties were of a disagreeable nature at the best, and the discipiline enforced was harsh and cruel. We here won new laurels, receiving the highest enconiums from the highest military officials for strict attention to duty and excellent conduct, and the unqualified respect and friendship of the citizens for gentlemanly deportment, and soldierly bearing. We eagerly looked forward to active service in the field, and when on July 9, 1863, we received orders to "pack up," and move to Harper's Ferry, no regrets were expressed that our "soft job" was summarily ended. We left the 750 strong, thoroughly drilled and disciplined and in the best of health and spirits, but few regiments being better fitted physicand morally to meet the trials and dangers of the "front."

Accompanied by that magnificent regiment, the 34th Mass., we moved over the B. & O. R. R. to Maryland Heights, where we reported to General French. Still again we came near missing active service, but the 34th were sent to Harper's Ferry in our place, and a Mass. Brigade being organized consisting of the 8th, 46th and 51st, nine months' regiment from No. Carolina and the 39th, under the command of Gen. Briggs, we were ordered to report to the Army of the Potomac. Reaching Frankstown July 13, we were extremely gratified upon learning that our brigade had been assigned to the 2nd Div., 1st A. C., then under command of Maj. Gen. John C. Robinson, under whom we had the pleasure and honor of serving until that unlucky 8th of May, 1864, Gen. John Newton, commanding Corps. From this time we followed the fortunes of the old First Corps, until its consolidation with the 5th Corps the following March. Soon after crossing the Potomac, in pursuit of Lee, the Brigade was broken up, owing to the departure of the nine months' troops, and the 39th was attached to the 1st Brigade, consisting of the 13th Mass., 16th Me., 97th and 104th N. Y., and 107th Penn., under command of Col. McCoy of the 107th, a noble man and gallant officer—a brigade of immortal memory. In the Fall campaign of 1863, so aptly termed a Campaign of Maneuvres, reaching its climax at Mine Run, we took part in the advance to Rappahannock Station, and later to Rapidan, in the retrograde movement to Centreville and the subsequent advance in which, though not engaged in battle, our duties were no less arduous and responsible. But two divisions of our Corps took part in the movement to Mine Run, where we held the centre of the line, awaiting orders to essay the hopeless task before us. These or-

QUAKER BITTERS.
What are QUAKER BITTERS? An old Quaker remedy that has done more to relieve suffering humanity than all other medicines combined.
These celebrated Bitters are composed of choice Roots, Herbs and Barks, among which are Gentian, Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Juniper and other berries, and are so prepared as to retain all their medicinal qualities. They invariably cure or greatly relieve the following complaints: Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Loss of Appetite, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Rheumatism, Summer Complaints, Piles, Kidney Diseases, Female Difficulties, Lassitude, Low Spirits, General Debility, and, in fact, everything caused by an impure state of the Blood or deranged condition of the Stomach, Liver or Kidneys. The aged find in the Quaker Bitters a gentle soothing stimulant so desirable in their declining years.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

OLIVE'S ENGAGEMENT.

"It's a shame, that's what I think! Olive is worth a dozen like her!" excitedly exclaimed a young girl.

"A dozen like Cora Sardis? That is small praise, Edna, for every one knows Cora is a flirt of the deepest dye, as Harold Chestney will find to his cost, some day."

It was Edna LeMasters and her friend, Madge Lorton, who were speaking as they sauntered slowly over the grassy lawn and entered the parlor of Mrs. Dering's handsome cottage at Long Branch.

The slanting rays of the afternoon sun streamed through the long French windows, falling in golden bars across the gorgeous Turkey carpet and rich Persian rugs which covered the floor. Mrs. Dering's guests were gathered in groups here and there, in the parlors, on the piazza, or strolling back and forward on the grassy shaded lawn—all but one, that is, for Olive Drexel was in her own room, crying as if her heart would break.

She knew the girls were in their gayest costumes down stairs, laughing, talking and flirting with their respective admirers. And she knew also, as well as if she saw him with her own eyes, how Harold Chestney was devoting himself to Cora Sardis, watching the color come and go in her bright, pink-tinted cheek, bending his head to look into the dark-lashed, down-cast eyes, or to catch the softly spoken words that fell from the coral-red lips.

Olive knew, as well as every other woman in the house, that the varying color in the smooth cheeks, and the low, half-whispered words, were but the practiced art of a finished coquette. But what man could be made to believe this, unless, indeed, he had already been made the victim of those innocent wiles himself.

Not Harold Chestney, at all events. You might talk yourself blue in the face in the vain attempt to persuade that deluded mortal that Cora Sardis was anything but an angel in disguise, and so he hung over her in the gay parlor, showing his admiration in every word and look, while Olive Drexel, his promised wife, sat alone in her darkened room, sobbing her heart out over her wrecked life and broken hopes.

But Olive Drexel was not one to wear the willow in public, whatever she might do in private; and though Chestney's conduct was openly criticised and condemned by all, no one ventured a word in her presence.

"Strange," remarked Dudley Carrol, "that Miss Drexel puts up with it. I should think she would call Chestney to account or break with him at once. But that's the way with these spirited girls; the more outrageously a man acts, the more they cling to him."

"Don't deceive yourself, Dud." Will LeMasters smiled cooly as he answered the other's remark. "If Miss Drexel puts up with such conduct as that, you may be sure she has some reason for it. There is lurking mischief in her eyes that bodes no good to Harold Chestney, or I'm a false prophet for once in my life."

And while herself and her affairs were thus affording theme for conversation, Olive sat mourning over the present, and recalling the happy past. She thought of the time, only a few short months ago, when Harold Chestney had besought her to be his wife, and with that thought came the memory of another who had sought her hand also, but in vain. She remembered with a pang of regret, how she had brought trouble and sorrow into Kent's Southers' life, and a thrill of admiration filled her heart as she remembered how nobly he had borne his disappointment, and at parting he said, holding her hand a moment in his:

"Olive, if you ever feel that you have made a mistake in—in your feelings, or in the one you have chosen, or if you need a friend, I want you to promise that you will write to me. Will you promise me this, Olive?"

She had promised, and then from behind the jalousied window, she had watched his tall figure slowly disappearing down the stately avenue of lime-trees that shaded the lawn in front of her Southern home.

Olive remembered also how Harold had been jealous of his rival, and had even required her to give up his acquaintance.

"He will not come again, Harold," she had said, half sadly, after the last interview.

"Oh, then you have refused him?" he returned, with an exultation that showed his lack of magnanimity.

Olive had never been able to account for her lover's dislike of Kent Southers, but she was forced to admit now that it was on account of his own inferiority.

"Olive! Olive Drexel! we want you."

It was Edna LeMasters who called, and the clear, ringing tones reached Olive's ears. Hastily springing from the couch on which she had been lying, she opened the door a few inches.

"Coming, girls, right away," she cried, in a gay, clear, voice that seemed the very echo of a careless, happy heart; and half an hour later she walked lightly across the broad hall and into the long parlor in a trailing dress of clear snow-white mull, with a set of torquoise jewels matching the color of her eyes, and her hair drawn back from her face and fastened with a jewelled comb. The pallor had disappeared from her complexion, and some concealed excitement had brought a blood-red flush to her cheeks and lips, while a sudden lustre sparkled in her eyes.

"Tableaux vivants!" she cried in a gay voice, while a shout of laughter greeted her words, for a sudden breeze had swept aside the curtain which draped one of the low French windows, thus revealing Dudley Carrol half kneeling to look into Madge Lorton's averted face.

The detected couple bore the raillery which followed very good naturedly, and soon strolled off across the lawn to finish their-love making less publicly.

As Olive had foreseen, Harold was devoting himself to Cora Sardis, but both looked up as she stood in the open doorway near which they sat.

Harold rose and placed a chair for her.

"Won't you join us," he asked carelessly.

"Thanks—no. I'm tired of sitting."

A Olive spoke she walked leisurely out on the piazza. Harold made no effort to detain or join her, but Will LeMasters followed, and offered his arm.

"I am tired of sitting, too," he said.

"Suppose we promenade for the good of our health?"

She took his arm, and they promenaded back and for some time, then paused at the farther end of the piazza.

"Olive," said her companion, in a low voice, "we have been friends for a long, time, and by that friendship I claim the right to ask you one question. Do you care for that man?"

"Care for him? No!"

There was a world of scorn in Olive Drexel's voice, and a flash in her eyes which showed she spoke the truth.

"Then why do you tolerate such conduct? Why don't you break with him at once?"

"Yes, and be accused of jealousy by himself and everyone else! No, no; let the 'mills of the gods grind slowly, for they grind exceedingly fine,' you know."

Later in the evening, Will came up to where Olive was standing, and giving her a look which signified that he had something to say in private, gave her his arm and led her out of hearing distance of the rest.

"You know," he said, "there is to be an excursion next week to Ocean Grove."

"Yes."

"Had you intended to go?"

"Yes—that is—"

She blushed and hesitated.

"Harold intends to take Miss Sardis," said her companion, interpreting her confusion correctly.

Olive bit her lip till the blood started. Her eyes flashed, but she made no reply. This was a slight she had not expected.

"Shall I take you, Olive?" asked Will, kindly and respectfully.

"No!" She spoke emphatically; then looking at her companion, added, more gently: "But you may do something else for me, Will."

"I will tell you in time but not now."

* * * * *

The morning of the excursion arrived, and Harold assisted Miss Sardis to a seat in his handsome turnout.

Olive stood on the piazza, waving a smiling adieu to each party or couple as they drove off. Seeing that she was prepared to remain at home, Harold had gone to her before Miss Sardis made her appearance.

"I thought you were going to the grove with Will," he said, looking down and tapping his boot with a light switch he carried.

Olive made no reply.

"I know he asked you," continued Harold, "but of course you would rather stay at home and pout, because I chance to have another engagement. Wouldn't you?" he persisted, determined to make her say something.

"No, I wouldn't." And Olive walked calmly away and left him.

It was the nearest approach to a rupture they had had, and Harold could not repress some feeling of self reproach; but he hid them, and drove gayly off with Cora by his side.

* * * * *

The picnic party met with the usual adventures which beset such excursionists. They had wandered through the leafy woodland, swinging on grapevines and waking the echoes with song and laughter. The girls had shrieked with terror at the horrid bugs and spiders, and exclaimed with rapture over the wild flowers and delicate mosses and lichens; and decorated themselves and their cavaliers with rustic chaplets, woven of glossy oak and hickory leaves, and now hampers were being opened, cloths spread, and rapid preparations made for lunching as speedily as possible.

Madge Lorton, with Dudley Carroll's broad brimmed straw hat on her head, was slicing a frosted cake, while Dudley sat close beside her, dilligently fanning her during the operation.

Edna LeMasters was slyly appeasing the pangs of hunger by hastily devouring a sandwitch behind the screening back of a broad-shouldered lady in a brown linen ulster, who was dishing chicken-salad from a huge china bowl.

Mrs. Dering herself had been superintending Will LeMasters and the Haliburton girls, who were pretending to spread the impromtu table with the china dinner service which had been brought, packed in sawdust, but she finally lost all patience and bade them get out of her sight.

"For if we have to wait for your pranks, we'll have nothing to eat till midnight," she declared.

Amid all the confusion Harold Chestney was still the devoted cavalier of Cora Sardis, sitting attentively at her side, or strolling with her under the tall trees, fanning her or bringing her drinks of water or lemonade. But, somehow, he had begun to find his companion a little insipid, perhaps. Her eyes were just as expressive and downcast; her cheek just as bright, but someway the spell was broken. Harold had grown tired of her prettiness. If she would only be lively and spirited like Olive, or even wild or hoydenish like Edna LeMasters! He was getting out of patience with her blushes and gentle ways.

In the meantime, everything was prepared for a bountiful repast. The chicken salad was dished, sandwitches spread, cheese cut, picklels, cold fowl, ham, pie, crackers, and cake graced the impromtu dinner-table. Lemonade, ice cream and water-ices were also lavishly provided.

"What on earth is Will staring down the road so for? Are you looking for anyone, Will?" cried Edna LeMasters to her brother.

"O, he's looking for Olive Drexel," said Lou Haliburton, mischievously, at which the girls all tittered, for Will's devotion to Olive was a standing joke among them.

"Why, it is Olive!" cried Edna, rushing forward to meet her.

Olive had never looked handsomer than now, as she came forward with sparkling eyes and crimson cheeks, the dark blue of her riding-habit setting of her fair complexion to great advantage. Walking leisurely at her side was her escort, a tall, handsome man, with easy, self-possessed manner.

"Why, if it isn't Kent Southers!" exclaimed Mrs. Dering, extending her hand; and the new comers were received with great cordiality by all—all but Harald Chestney, who turned on his heel and walked to the farther end of the table without a word.

"Mr. Southers came after you were all gone," explained Olive, in answer to some enquiry of her hostess, "so we concluded to ride out and take luncheon with you."

Olive gave a sly look at Will LeMasters as she finished her remark, but neither of them thought it necessary to explain that the business which took Will to the city a few days ago was to carry a letter to Kent Southers and to bring an answer to Olive Drexel.

* * * * *

Olive and Kent stood in the moonlight on the broad piazza, the sultry air heavy with the rich perfume of the crimson June roses. When they parted, Olive's hand was clasped close in his, and the low, softly whispered words that he spoke brought the swift color to her cheeks.

With soft light still shining in her eyes, she entered the hall and started up the broad stairway, but a strong arm barred her progress.

"Olive!"

It was Harold Chestney who spoke, standing at the foot of the stairs, while the girl stood a couple of steps above him.

"Olive, I've been a wretch for the last few weeks, I know, but I have suffered enough to-day to make up for it, to repay a thousand fold every pang I have caused you to suffer. Can you—will you—forgive me Olive?"

She hesitated for a moment and then said:

"Yes, I do forgive you Harold, and—good night."

She held her hand toward him, and as he reached forth his own hand to clasp it, she dropped something into his outstretched palm, and hastened swiftly upstairs.

Harold stood as if stupefied, for in his hand lay the gold engagement-ring that he had placed on Olive's hand scarcely six months ago.

He knew then that she was lost to him forever.

There is a city of some 16,000 people on a bluff point at the junction of the Colon and Sabata rivers, about 32 miles, N. E. of the city of Naples, containing more remains of antiquity than perhaps any other in Italy, outside of Rome. In fact the present Bonevento has been built of material from the old place whose site it occupies. The arch of Fragan is in a good state of preservation. Here in the latter part of the third century of our era, was a good Bishop of the church named Inuarius, and although nearly 16 centuries have passed since he was gathered to the "noble army of martyrs," the people take pleasure in perpetuating the memory of the good man. His name is a monument of that awful year of persecution of Christians under Diocletian, when sacred books were collected and burned, churches destroyed and thousands suffered martyrdom, and among them was our Saint Inuarius. Taken from his Episcopal residence at Bonevento away 7 miles S. W. of Naples, to Puggudi, a place of great trade at the time St. Paul passed some days with the brethren there A. D. 63, if not a resort for invalids since the temple of Jupiter, a sort of religious hydropathic institution, now standing, was there, and where the costly residences of city merchants looked out upon the calm bosom of the west bay, his head was taken from his body, Sep. 19, A. D. 303. It is said that his body lies under the cathedral at Naples, of which city he is the patron Saint, and his head in another church. And to this day, on the first Sunday in May, every year, pious Catholics go to see the two vials supposed to contain some of the martyr's blood saved by an aged woman, at the time of his triumphant passage to the paradise of God.

Exhaustive diseases that lead to insanity, consumption, and a premature grave, are quickly cured by using Brown's Iron Bitters. It strengthens every part of the body.

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1881.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

THE BOOK TABLE.

Boston publishers are very busy this fall in issuing new works. The season promises to be one of unusual briskness and profit. Many beautiful and valuable books are being turned out by the great publishing houses, chief of which are Lee & Shephard, and Houghton, Miflin & Co., the products of whose presses for the coming holidays are rich in matter and dress. From the former house we have received, Our Little Ones, Up the River, Punctuation, and Insects, all fine works; and from the latter house, Friends, Leaflets from Standard Authors, Philosophy of Carlyle, Arne, and A Gentlemen of Leisure, each of which is interesting reading. All of the above books will receive a more extended notice in next week's issue of the JOURNAL.

☞ The Sixth District Democratic Senatorial Convention was held at Armory Hall, this village, on Tuesday afternoon. Most of the towns were represented, and as much interest in the proceedings was manifested as could be expected under the circumstances. John G. Maguire Esq., of Woburn, was called to the Chair, and presided over the deliberations with great fairness. Mr. Josiah Hovey of Winchester was chosen Secretary. Mr. E. H. Walton of Wakefield, who has been there on several former occasions, was unanimously nominated candidate for Senator, and received the honor with modesty and grace. The place on the State Central Committee was filled by the choice of Mr. Thomas Salmon of Woburn. The following gentlemen were elected a District Committee: E. H. Walton, Wakefield; James Chandler of Tewksbury; H. S. LeClair of Reading; Gustavus Parker of No. Reading; G. L. W. Dike of Stoneham; Walter Babb of Melrose; Josiah Hovey of Winchester; J. G. Maguire of Woburn; Henry Ames of Wilmington; Thomas Costello of Billerica; Stephen Carter of Burlington, and Thomas Salmon ex officio. The Bedford committeeman will be chosen hereafter.

☞ It is said that the Republicans of Woburn will, with his consent, nominate E. D. Hayden, Esq. again this year for Representative to the General Court. We trust our information is correct, for if he is nominated his election will follow. In the two years of his services in the Legislature he has discharged the duties of the post faithfully and with marked ability, in consideration of which, and his sterling qualities as a man, the voters of Woburn, irrespective of party, find that it is but right and proper that he be returned this year. Certainly our town has been honored by his representation, and her interests have been carefully looked after and watched over by him, and not to re-elect him would be ungrateful and wrong.

☞ We can assure those of our readers who have not tried it, that the pleasantest place to spend an afternoon or evening is at the "Old Mechanic Fair," now in full blast on Huntington Avenue, Boston. It is a point of great attraction for people from country and town, and is visited by thousands daily. It has been especially thronged this week, and will be to-morrow, the attraction being Gilmore's Band from New York, to hear which is richly worth one's time and money. Besides this, the exhibition is a grand one, every department being filled with the best and rarest products of the arts and mechanics. The Art Gallery is filled with superb works, and ought to be seen by every lover of the beautiful.

☞ Correspondents of the Arlington Advocate are giving among old time things of a local character which is very interesting reading. The old fire engine "Friendship," "Foot of the Rocks," Monotony Pond, and other subjects are being raked up to the pleasure of old people and profit to the present generation. [illegible] some of Woburn historians give the JOURNAL a lot of pleasant readings of the nature furnished by the Advocate correspondents?

☞ The names of several prominent Woburn Democrats are mentioned in connection with the nomination for Representative to the General Court. It is believed, however, that Mr. Thomas Hill has the inside track, and will probably be the Democratic candidate.

☞ Many rumors are set afloat by Washington correspondents concerning Mr. Arthur's Cabinet, but up to date nothing is definetly known concerning it. It is said that he will make the changes this week, but that is hardly probable.

☞ The election in this State takes place in a little over two week—on the 8th of November—and yet for anything that is seen or heard one would hardly dream of the important event being so near at hand.

☞ Last Friday the Senate adjourned over a week to give everybody an opportunity to attend the Yorktown celebration. It expects to get through the business of the session at an early day

— Hon. Charles Choate, who has been sick at his residence for some weeks, is rapidly getting back to his usual good state of health.

— Patrons of the Woburn Water Works have largely increased in numbers during the past year, and added to the labors of the Registra.

— Mr. E. E. Thompson is considerably under the weather from an attack of rheumatism. A little rest will set him on his feet again.

— On numerous evenings this week ulsters have not been bad to take, and yet, take it by and large, it has been lovely autumn weather.

— Mrs. Fitzgerald, who was so terribly injured by falling down stairs at Walnut Hill last week, died the next day at the Mass. Gen. Hospital.

— The chaps who have been stealing street lanterns of late on the lower end of Main street will soon come to grief if they do not stop the business.

— The price of milk has gone up, but as far as the Woburn article is concerned the drouth has nothing to do with the advance in figures. Our milkmen are not that kind.

— Next Friday evening the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx have a social assembly at Armory Hall, and a real good time is expected. The tickets are put at the low price of fifty cents.

— The new dress recently donned by the forests is very pretty indeed. A little too utterly gaudy, perhaps, for the eye of an aesthetic, and abundant in colors; but the common artistic optic would pronounce it beautiful, and so do we.

— Political matters are exceedingly dull and quiet hereabouts, as they are all over the State. At this time last year things were booming, and torchlight processions, bands, and all that sort of jolly thing was of almost nightly occurrence.

— It is coming to a fine pass when men can't hitch their teams on such a busy thoroughfare as Main street in this village is without having them stolen. Mr. Hanson's was taken one evening last week by a young man by the name of Hood, who must be a bold, plucky chap to commit such a deed under such circumstances.

— It is something to be proud of when people say they want to come to Woburn to live on account of the excellence of our schools. It is the best recommendation a town can have, and there is nothing that will draw the better class of people to it like educational institutions of a high character, as ours in Woburn, are.

— On yester[illegible]

— Yesterday morning we received a brief but very pleasant call from Mr. Israel Kimball of the Internal Revenue Department, Washington, and brother of Messrs. William and George Kimball of this place. He is the father of the Internal Revenue system, and is the oldest in years of continuous service in the Department. An old townsman and early friend of ours, and many years having elapsed since we saw him last, his visit to our office yesterday was just as pleasant to us as anything could be; in fact, we were delighted to meet and greet our old friend once more before descending into "the vale."

— People, who pretend to know what they are talking about, inform us that a large number of good tenements would find responsible renters immediately here in Woburn were they here to rent. Twenty dwellings worth about twelve dollars a month, and as many more at twice that figure would be snapped up quickly by outside people who want to come here and become permanent citizens. It is quite a surprise to us that men of ample means do not put some of their money into nice, suitable houses, and thus contribute to the more rapid growth of our flourishing town.

— It is probable that a great many people are unaware of the extent and beauty of the carved work to be seen in the rooms of Mr. Harry Leach on Beacon street—the products of his own skillful hands. The public ought to be better acquainted with his collection, and we should think our rich citizens would take pride in adorning their parlors, drawing and dining rooms with the exquisite work which Mr. Leach's chisels have wrought. His house is a real museum of beautiful things, which, if better known would draw crowds of visitors. Nearly all his carvings are done in black walnut, and for delicacy of cut and exquisite finish they cannot be surpassed. They are as beautiful and desirable for ornaments as the best bronze, from which some of them can hardly be distinguished except by weight. The collection consists of a great variety of heads—deer, caribou, cattle, sheep, boars, bears, other animals, and human; of birds, fishes, coats of arms, shelves, etc.—all the former wonderfully true to life, and beautiful for ornaments. There are several splendid groups, among them the Three Graces, and a "Dream" piece, that show the highest degree of skill and taste. We can enumerate but a few of the carvings, nor any of the numerous paintings and fine prints with which Mr. Leach's rooms are filled, and only pen this item to acquaint our people of the existence, right here among them, of this museum of the carver's and painter's art.

— Information respecting a very nice furnished tenement may be obtained by addressing Box 729 Woburn P. O.

— Mr. E. E. Thompson was elected a member of the State Committee at the Y. M. C. A. State convention held at Spencer last week.

— We call attention to Mr. Frank Pierce's card in this paper. He is selling boots and shoes at lower figures than anybody else in Woburn.

— There is to be a meeting of the Woburn Branch of the Irish Land League at Emerald Hall tomorrow evening, to which a general attendance is desired.

— The Gilcreast Hook & Ladder Co. held their first assembly last Wednesday evening which was a grand success. The presence of Foreman Leathe was greatly missed.

— An assembly is to be given this evening at St. John's Institute under the auspices of the St. Charles Total Abstinence Society. No doubt it will be largely attended.

— Crystal Fount Lodge, I. O. O. F. had a real good time at their pleasant hall on Wednesday evening. It was anniversary night, and so, besides the entertainment, there was a pleasant dance, making a merry time all round.

— At the regular meeting of the selectmen last Tuesday evening B. B. Brown was appointed special policeman without pay for duty at the Baptist church. The revision of the list of voters was referred to Messrs. Skinner, Hill, Reade, Bancroft, Trull and Ham.

— Major Richarson's dancing school will open in Armory Hall on the first Wednesday in November, with a class of nearly, or quite, fifty couples. From the character of the attendance and well-known efficiency of the teacher it is safe to say that the term will be a very pleasant and successful one.

— We not only call special attention to the advertisement "Stoddard Lectures" in this paper, but can recommend them as among the choicest entertainments to be given in Boston this season. Our people should avail themselves of the opportunity and secure season tickets at once.

— A strong push will be made to put an end to the disturbances made by the hoodlums at Lyceum Hall on evenings of entertainments. Such conduct as theirs should not be tolerated and will not be much longer. The boys are bright, active and know how to behave well, and if they won't do so voluntarially should be made to toe the mark.

— The dramatic entertainment given at Lyceum Hall on Wednesday evening by the Mark Allen Combination was a real good one. "The Last Man" is a very interesting play, and its production afforded great pleasure to all present. There was a fairly good audience—very good considering the number of other attractions on that evening—and we have no doubt the entertainment was a financial, as it was a dramatic, success. It is to be hoped that Mr. Allen will put on other plays during the season.

—The following are the tidings of the week from the Police Court: Two young boys were locked up Wednesday night for making noises around Lyceum Hall: placed on probation. Mr. P. G. Hanson left his horse tied to a post on Main street and about 10 o'clock in the evening it was taken away. Prompt notice was sent outward, and team and taker were rescued at Lowell. Peter Crosby, a. & b., $5 and costs. John Wilson, Thomas J. Snow, single d'ks, $1 and costs each. Harry Hood, illegal driving horse, $10 and costs. Bridget Smith, com. d'k, 4 months House of Correction.

— The stock of overcoats and suitings at Hammond's clothing store is worthy of special mention. A tour of inspection, guided by Mr. Thompson, the gentlemanly salesman, satisfies one that the stock is unsurpassed in size, variety, style and fabric by any in Woburn; and it is made equally apparent that now[illegible]

— Mrs. Ann Wentworth Cooper, wife of Mr. Eli Cooper, died at her home on Wade Place, early last Monday morning, after an illness of two or three weeks, at the ripe age of 78 years. She was born in Sudbury, Mass., her maiden name being Ann Wentworth Bussy, and married Mr. Cooper at Lowell, in 1828. In 1830 she united with the Episcopalian Church in Lowell, of which Dr. Edison, now nearly ninety years old, was then the rector. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper formerly resided in Winchester, but have lived in Woburn many years, esteemed and respected by all. The funeral of Mrs. Cooper took place in the parlors of the Unitarian Church on Wednesday afternoon, the exercises being conducted by Rev. Mr Hussey, pastor of the Unitarian Church at Billerica, who employed in part, the services of the Episcopal church. They were simple and very impressive. A large number of the old friends and neighbors of the departed were in attendance, many of whom followed the remains to their last earthly resting place under the trees in the cemetery. Mrs. Cooper was a very worthy woman—a good, true wife, a devoted mother, and a friend to everybody. She was greatly esteemed especially by the old people with whom she had lived amicably for so many years, and enjoyed the respect of all. Her death will be sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends and acuquaintances. In his deep bereavement Mr. Cooper has the hearty sympathy of the people of Woburn.

— Mr. William B. Doyle of Woburn, and Miss Minnie E. Cann of Somerville, were united in wedlock at Somerville, on last Wednesday evening, by Rev. Daniel March, D. D., pastor of the First Congregational Church of Woburn. At the close of the interesting ceremonies the bride and groom repaired to their beautiful residence on Church Avenue, this village, where they held a reception from 8 to 10 o'clock in the evening, which was a very pleasant affair. About one hundred friends were present, for whom a rich and elegant repast was spread under the direction of Mr. Lee Hammond, landlord of the Central House. The waiting was done by numerous regulation colored gentlemen, and everything connected with the spread was creditable to the experienced caterer. The two hours were delightfully spent. The presents were numerous, rich and beautiful and made a very handsome display. The happy pair left the same evening for an extended bridal trip, which will include New York city, the Hudson river, Niagara and other points of interest. We wish them much joy.

— In a sharp review of the "Memoirs of Madame de Remuset," edited by her son, M. Paul de Remuset, by the editor of "Culture and Progress" in the October number of THE CENTURY (SCRIBNER'S), we find the following bit of reading respecting an old time citizen of Woburn, whose house, with all its ancient surroundings, still stands at North Woburn, and is used by the Rumford Historical Association as a museum and library:

But as to his (Paul de Remuset) qualifications as editor, it looks, to say the least, singular that he should allow himself so gross an error concerning the Yankee school-teacher and Tory partisan of the Revolution, Benjamin Thompson, as is involved in this note (page 85): "Count Rumford, a German, born in America, was paying his addresses to Madame Lavoisier, whom he afterwards married." Any good cyclopedia ought to have shown him that he is as wrong about the nationality of the inventor and humanitarian as his grandmother was about his real merits. A special bitterness against Thompson, Count Rumford, appears to have been nourished by Madame de Remusat and her mother. Perhaps it was merely because he was supposed to be a German, having had his title from the the Archduke of Bavaria, and having introduced improvements in hygiene and the preparation of food for the German masses, besides publishing his political, economical, and philosophical essays in German as well as French. They seem to have been unaware that he was an Englishman by conviction and adoption, and one of the founders of tue Royal Society for the Advancement of Science. Under date of January 10, 1806, the lady in waiting to the Empress Josephine writes to her husband then at Vienna, in attondance on Napoleon:

"I am requested to ask you to make inquiries at Munich about Count Rumford. I heard such an extraordinary account of him that I am curious to know the truth. It would seem, if I may believe my informant, that this 'man of science' is a mere philosophic charlatan, without fortune or position, and mixed up with several unpleasant stories. * * * * * * * * My mother wants you to get full particulars, and desires me to tell you that since the wedding a recipe for economical marriages has been discovered. They are called Rumford marriages."

To this scurrilous and malignant passage Paul de Remusat adds a note which contains two important misstatements, namely, that Rumford was obliged to leave Paris, and that he lived on an allowance from his wife. "The allusion here," he explains, "is to cheap soups and Rumford stoves. The rumor then prevalent regarding that learned man may have been exaggerated. The marriage, however, ended in a separation, aa may be seen in the Memoirs, and Count Rumford was obliged to leave Paris and reside in Germany, on an allowance made by his wife." A minor matter, truly, but perhaps not unimportant as a hint of what oredence is to be put in other statements of the Rumusats. The letters themselves show plainly one source of this direful gossip about Rumford. Madame de Remusat does not spare the philosophers and writers who found warm corners at the dreside of the Widow Lavoisier until dispossessed by the elderly lover. She seems to be bearing malice against that worthy lady for having so attractiue a salon. [illegible] pears in the cha[illegible] Madame [illegible]

LITERARY NOTICES.

The discussion of "The Christian Religion," by Col. Ingersoll and Judge Black, which was commenced in the August number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW, is continued in the November issue of that publication. Col. Ingersoll now replies to the strictures of his opponent, and presents much more fully than he has ever before done the logical grounds for his opposition to Christianity. The article will be received with interest by those who have read the first part of the debate, as well as by all those who believe that the cause of tauth is best advanced by free discussion. An early number of the REVIEW will contain an exhaustive reply. In a Symposium on Presidential Inability, four of our most eminent jurists, Judge Thomas M. Cooley, the Hon. Lyman Trumbull, Prof. Theodore W. Dwight, and Gen. B. F. Butler, discuss the several weighty problems arising out of Article 2 of the Constitution. "England's Hereditary Republic" is the title of a significant paper contributed by the Marquis of Blandford, and Senator George F. Hoar writes a statesmanlike article on "The Appointing Power" of the President of the United States.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE is on our table for November, ahead of all others, and better ever. It leads off with a charming steel engraving, after Meyer Von Bremen, "Half Afraid." This is followed by one of those double-size, steel fashion-plates, superbly colored, only seen in this unrivaled lady's book. Then comes another engraving, "Lacy Hall," illustrating an exquisitely told love-story; and then some fifty wood-cuts of dresses, patterns in embroidery, &c., &c. There is also a superb colored slipper pattern, for braiding, in crimson and gold. The principal article is "A Day at Canterbury." With this number appears the Prospectus for 1832, when six original Novelets will be given, and, in addition, a hundred shorter stories. A series of brilliantly illustrated stories, and articles like "Canterbury," will also appear. Also a Paper Pattern for a Dress, every month. The price of PETERSON is Two Dollars a year, postage free. To clubs, 2 copies for $3.50, with a superb engraving (size 20 inches by 16) or a handsome photograph album, as a premium. Or four copies for $6.50 and an extra copy of the magazine itself as premium. Or five copies for $8.00, with both an extra copy and either the engraving or album for premium. Specimens are sent gratis if written for. Address Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. The advantage of this compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered palatable. The offensive taste of the oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime," but the fact that it is prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. Sold by A. B. Wilbor, Chemist, Boston, and all druggists.

Rev. George W. Cook of West Dedham will fill the Unitarian pulpit next Sunday. This society have not yet decided on calling any particular minister to the pastorate.

The first entertainment of the Good Will Club was last Tuesday evening in the Unitarian Church. It was a real good one, consisting of readings, "Who Killed Cock Robin?" and other interesting exercises.

It may be gratifying to your readers to learn that our able and efficient Police Magistrate, George S. Littlefield, Esq., is the Hon. Chairman of the Sixth District Councillor Committee—an honor worthily bestowed.

In the opinion of the correspondent of the Woburn Advertiser Winchester ought to have, and would liberally support, a good hotel. Mebby. But, then, just exactly where its patronage would come from is not so clearly apparent to the writer of this item as it might be. However, if newspaper correspondents didn't write they wouldn't say anything.

The portrait of the late Rev. Mr. Metcalf, which was painted by our talented artist, Mrs. Cowdrey, has been presented by the generous ladies of the Unitarian society to the widow of that lately greatly esteemed divine. It is a very fine picture, and, I have no doubt will be highly prized by Mrs. Metcalf.

Miss Ellen Bradford, member of our Committee, has given her hand in marriage to ex-Alderman Stebbins of Boston, consequently there is a vacancy in the Board. If the good lady discharges the duties of wife as well as she has those of a School Committee, Mr. Stebbins will very soon conclude that he has won a very valuable matrimonial prize. Bride and groom have the best wishes of the JOURNAL correspondent.

Those enterprising young gentlemen in this village who, taking time by the forelock, are raising a purse of money with which to keep the ice clear of snow and in a skatable condition next winter, are meeting with signal success. They have already secured subscriptions to the handsome tune of $1.10, with a prospect of very nearly doubling that sum before the ponds freeze over. At that rate, the fair damsels and handsome gallants of Winchester have a nice prospect for a clear field (of ice) for the exercise of their skill and agility next winter.

Rev. J. F. Fielden was duly and regularly installed pastor of the Winchester Baptist Church on last Thursday evening week. The exercises were very interesting. Rev. F. M. Ellis, D. D. of the Tremont Temple church, Boston, delivered an eloquent address; he was followed by Rev. J. P. Abbott of Concord, N. H. I think it may be safely said that the Winchester Baptist Church has secured an able and excellent pastor. He appears to be a gifted gentleman—learned in the scriptures and eloquent in their exposition.

Regular meetings of the Backlog Club (why dont some of the young people organize a "Forestick Club?") will be held on every other Friday evening during the winter, and if all signs don't fail, a great deal of enjoyment is in store for its members and friends. It is very strongly officered, and a revival of interest in it has recently taken place. The officers are: President—Charles A. Cutter; Vice—E. D. Bangs; Secretary—Miss Mary A. Carter; Treasurer—Mr. J. W. Skillings. That last name means success in anything undertaken.

The careful and intelligent correspondent of the Medford Mercury writes that, "at least one prominent citizen" of Winchester "is said to have announced his home for sale" because the Boston, Lowell & Concord R. R. Company decline to give us lower fares. This is probably an error; but if there is such a citizen in Winchester, I should think, considering the desirableness of our village as a residence, and the sacrifice in money he would be obliged to make, should he persist in selling, his case would be very much like that of the other man, who bit off his nose to spite his face. It would be very much more sensible and satisfactory for him to do what the other Winchester citizens threatens, namely, to "hire a barge" (is this anything like "hiring a hall?"), and ride in it to Medford to take the B. & M. train.

Mr. Charles B. Wayman, Erie, Penn., writes: "My physicians had given me up to die. They told me my lungs and liver were all decayed and gone. I was very weak, pale and emaciated. By chance I saw Brown's Iron Bitters advertised. I immediately realized that without Iron in the blood, life could not exist. With trembling anxiety I sent a servant who procured for me a bottle. I must have taken it with great faith, for almost immediately I felt its beneficial effects. Soon all dyspeptic symptoms disappeared, my lungs grew strong, pains in the region of the heart vanished, my urine became free of sediment, and in a word, I have regained perfect health. Now I feel able to thrash the doctor that attended me, and really believe I ought to do it."

Women are everywhere using and recommending Parker's Ginger Tonic, because they have learned from experience that it speedily overcomes despondency, indigestion, pain or weakness in the back and kidneys, and other troubles peculiar to the sex. —Home Journal. See ad.

Mr. Isaac L. Hart, Superintendent, No. 3 Ashton St., says: I have used that superior remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, in a severe case of rheumatism in my arm, and its effect was wonderful, having banished, after a thorough trial, all pain, leaving my arm as well as ever.

If it were possible

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA for debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which every one feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that Hood's Sarsaparilla contains more real medicinal value than any article before the people.

What a Man Did with Kidney Complaint

DRACUT, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—I have suffered from kidney complaint and biliousness for fifteen years. Have tried everything and never got any good. Last January, before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, everything I ate bloated me all up, pain in my chest and arms, headache and dizzy. I could not get up without feeling weary and all fagged out. Many mornings I was obliged to lie down on the lounge. To do any work seemed almost impossible. Have taken two bottles. The backache, dizziness, pain in my chest and arms, and that feeling of intense weariness are all gone. I can eat anything and it does not press me at all. Feel just like work; in fact, like a new man. Can heartily recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and hope all who desire to know anything about it will come to me and ask what I think of it. Very truly yours,

JONATHAN J. COBURN.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Lesson 4:

A Peace-Offering.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Offer unto God thanksgiving, and pay thy vow unto the Most High."—Psalms 50: 14.

Of the various Jewish sacrifices the most important were three—the sin offering, the burnt-offering, and the peace-offering, which is the subject of our present lesson. All these had points of resemblance. In each there was the sacrifice of animal life. In each the offerer made the victim his own representative by laying his hand upon his head. And in each there was the pouring or sprinkling of blood on the altar, round about, and a portion at least of the offering was to be burnt. But, besides these points of resemblance, they had also others of difference. In the burnt offering the entire animal was consumed on the altar. In the peace-offering the sacrificial meal was the point of chief importance. A portion, after being waved to and fro, or lifted upward, in token of its presentation to God, was set apart for the officiating priest, and the remainder was carried away by the offerer, to be eaten by himself with his household and friends.

It should be observed that the unleavened cakes and the wafers with oil were rather accompaniments of the peace-offerings than parts of it. These were of themselves a "meat" or food offering, expressive of thanksgiving and praise. The leavened bread was not placed on the altar, but was added to make the meal palatable.

The peace-offerings were either public or private, for all the people, or for the individual. The two lambs offered at Pentecost were a public offering. So was that which Solomon made at the dedication of the temple, when "he offered two and twenty thousand oxen, and one hundred and twenty thousand sheep." Private peace-offerings were, as our lesson indicates, of three kinds,—the "sacrifice of thanksgiving" for mercies received, the "vow" or fulfilment of some promise to God, and the "voluntary offering" dictated by a glad and loving heart. The Psalms are full of allusions to these, as where it is written: "Thy vows are upon me, O God; I will render praises unto thee;" "I will freely sacrifice unto thee; I will praise thy name, O Lord, for it is good;" "I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon thy name, O Lord; I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all the people.

The peace-offering was a joyous sacrifice, the most so of all. As the burnt offering specially expressed consecration, this signified reconciliation and communion. Of this there could be no more impressive symbol than the meal in which God himself was supposed to share. There was in this feast a fitness to promote human friendship and family affection, as there is in our own thanksgiving reunions. But the purpose in it was higher than this. It was to express and promote fellowship with God, and how significant is is that atonement always went before, as if to prepare the way for the joyous meal! Does it not remind us that there can be no really happy fellowship with one another, much less with a covenant-keeping God, until the conscience is relieved of the burdening sense of guilt? We cannot praise God truly until we are at peace with him through the one sacrifice of Christ. "By Him, therefore, let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually."

It is to be remembered that in this sacrifice the whole was first given to God. Therefore, the portion which went to make up the sacrificial meal was in reality given back by God to the offerer. Thus it was God who spread the table. It was he who prepared the feast, just as it is he who spreads and furnishes every joyous board. And his condescension to share the feast was the fulfilling before hand of the Gospel promise, "I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

Of this peace-offering there are many antitypes. There is a delightful one in the act by which the sinner closes with the Saviour and takes him to be his atoning sacrifice, and in the great joy which sometimes fills the soul in its new sense of reconciliation and oneness with God. There is one in the table of communion, at which we commemorate the dying love of Christ for our pardon and life. and then, with emotions of grateful love, feed upon him as the "living bread." That is a glad feast, and never is God more sensibly with us. Indeed, any expression which brings God, as our pardoning and covenant-keeping God, near to the heart, and in which we feel that he it is who is loading us with benefits, or granting to us great deliverance, or gladdening us with good things, is of the nature of this feast of peace. And such high joy it is God's good pleasure to renew to his people every day.

It will be noticed that in the "sacrifice of thanksgiving" (v. 15) the flesh was to be all eaten the same day. But in the others any remainder might be eaten on the morrow. Would this indicate that the offering of praise was the more sacred, and so to be exhausted by generosity to the poor on the day of its offering?" But in no case could anything be kept to be eaten after the second day. It would then be corrupt and unfit for a feast at which God is to share. "It shall be an abomination."

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. Since the mercies of God are abundant, should not we offer the sacrifice of praise continually?

2. All the Jewish sacrifices somehow pointed to Christ. To understand them fully we must go to the New Testament for its added light. On the other hand, to understand Christ, to see the fullness and many-sidedness there is in him, we need to approach him sometimes by way of the ancient symbols described in the Old Testament. The most intelligent faith and richest experience come of study of the whole Bible.

3. Again we are taught the absolute dependence of all human hope and true good on an accomplished atonement for sin. But for it there could be no acceptable consecration on the sinner's part, nor acceptable offering of praise, no flowing together of the human and divine heart. Never can we express all the gratitude we owe for the great sacrifice made for us on the cross.

4. Religion is not all self-denial and struggle. The pardoned soul has a right to be glad. God provides for his reconciled ones a daily feast. Even the fulfillment of vows is attended with joy. We are to watch and to be faithful, but we are also to "sing and give praise."

5. The table of communion ought to be a place of humble joyfulness.

6. It is impossible to estimate the happiness of being included in the company of God's accepted people. Into this blessed fellowship God has himself opened the door. We have no victims to offer, but only to accept the one sacrifice provided in Christ. Thus coming, and making to him an honest self surrender, we are in the of peace. Our portion now is much gladness here, and an everlasting feast above.

A Noble Revenge.

The coffin was a plain one—a poor miserable pine coffin. No flowers on the top; no line of white satin from the pale brow; no smooth ribbons about the coarse shroud. The brown hair was laid decently back, but there was no crimped cap with the bow beneath the chin. The sufferer of cruel poverty smiled in her sleep; she had found bread, rest and health.

"I want to see my mother," sobbed a poor little child, as the undertaker screwed down the top.

"You cannot; get out of the way, boy; why don't someone take the brat?"

"Only let me see her one minute!" cried the helpless orphan, clutching the side of the charity box, as he gazed upon the coffin agonized tears streaming down the cheeks on which no childish bloom ever lingered. O! it was painful to hear him cry the words, "only once—let me see mother only once!"

Quickly and brutally the heartless monster struck the boy away so that he reeled with the blow. For a moment the boy stood panting with grief and rage—his blue eyes distended, his lips sprang apart, fire glistened through his eyes as he raised his little arm with a most unchildish laugh, and screamed:

"When I'm a man, I'll be revenged for that!"

There was a coffin and a heap of earth between the mother and the poor forsaken child—a monument much stronger than granite built in the boy's heart the memory of the heartless deed.

* * * * * *

The court-house was crowded to suffocation.

"Does any one appear as this man's counsel," asked the judge.

There was a silence when he had finished until, with lips tightly pressed together, a look of strange intelligence blended with a haughty reserve upon his handsome features, a young man stepped forward with a firm tread and kindly eye to plead for the friendless one. He was a stranger, but at the first sentence there was silence. The splendor of his genius entranced, convinced.

"May God bless you, sir—I cannot!" he exclaimed.

"I want no thanks," said the stranger.

"I—I—I believe you are unknown to me."

"Sir, I will refresh your memory.—Twenty years ago this day you struck a broken-hearted little boy away from his dead mother's coffin. I was that boy."

The man turned livid.

"Have you rescued me, then, to take my life?"

"No I have a sweeter revenge. I have saved the life of a man whose brutal conduct has rankled in my breast for the last twenty years. Go, then, and remember the tears of a friendless child."

The man bowed his head in shame, and went from the presence of magnanimity, as grand to him as it was incomprehensible.

"The Old Man Wants Them Guns."

During the siege of Nashville a Confederate battery placed upon a hill was seriously annoying a part of Pap Thomas' line. Riding up to Col. James Brownlow, the old man said: "Col. Brownlow, I want them guns, and I want them bad," at the same time pointing with his sword at the offending battery. Drawing his sword and stepping out in front of the line, Col. B. stepped out in front of his regiment and said: "Men, the old man says he wants them guns, and wants them bad!" Everybody was silent for a moment, and then a six-footer in the ranks sung out, "Boys, if Old Pap wants them guns he oughter have them. Let's chip in and buy them for him, for it looks mighty unhealthy up that way." A perfect storm of laughter swept along the line, and then the boys started up after the guns, and got them for the old man, though many a poor fellow who started for them never got back again.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

Flower Offering.

RESPECTFULLY INSCRIBED TO MRS. CHRISTOPHER FRANCIS.

BY M. W. W.

A chaplet of flowers, ah me, this is kind;
A boquet of flowers so choice, so refined;
I hold converse with flowers whom none can control,
Their language is pure as it enters the soul.

Sweet flowers that blossom in garden and glen,
I have learned your soul teachings which I could not from men;
I have bowed at your shrine as I knelt on the sod,
Praising good mother Nature and Great Father God.

Then crown with asphodel the donar, I pray;
Let the laurel wreath whisper I never decay,
When the early gates open where no mortals control,
May you enter the new life, flower-land of the soul.

WOBURN, 1881.

Woburn, England, and the President.

The following poems have been sent to me by our worthy friend Mr. Castleden. They appear in the Leighton, (Eng) Observer in two different issues. They express in forcible and sympathetic words the deep feeling aroused in England by the sad and untimely death of our late President. This case of Gen. Garfield's is one of those singular instances of rapid elevation, by which a man springs as it were with a single bound into the realm of the universal. Two years ago he was known only as an able and industrious member of Congress. Today his name and fame are the property of the civilized world.

This great achievement of securing so large a space in the eyes of mankind is partly due to the "deep damnation of his taking off," yet more to the heroic patience and endurance with which he bore the pain and suffering of his long struggle with death, but more than all to the revelation that had been made of his intellectual supremacy, his sterling honesty, his warm affection and the innate nobleness of his soul. These were brought out and intensified by the sympathies of a world that watched his bedside with the interest of a mother bending over the couch of a suffering child. In the second of the "tributary verses" by Mr. C, it is a marvel to see how a sturdy Englishman, full of loyalty to his beloved Queen, can place beside her in his affection the simple-hearted yet noble woman who but a few months ago was the unknown companion of a man whose fame was only in the bud. Truly he says, "One touch of death makes the whole world kin." And will not this community of sorrow bind still more closely together the two great nations who speak the same language and in whose veins flow the same blood?

G. M. C.

Tributary Lines on the Death of General Garfield.

Poor Garfield! gallant was thy strife with Death!
The fight is o'er! Still now the struggling breath.
In luster deep went down thy mortal sun;
Good, just and kind, these virtues leave a light
To gild America's sad, mournful night,
While the world drops the sympathetic tear
And gives departed Worth its grief sincere.
Yet out of gloom, which shrouds our kinsmen's skies,
May help and peace come forth, and light arise.
Amid the mourning homage let me tell
Our Gracious Queen's all womanly farewell.*
God bless her for kind words—words sweet to sound
And, while the curse of Sin sheds ebon night,
Love's sunshine gilds and cheers with warmth and light.

*"Words cannot express the deep sympathy I feel with you at this terrible moment. May God support and comfort you as He alone can."

Queen Victoria, to Mrs. Garfield.

GEORGE CASTLEDEN.

WOBURN, Sept. 24, 1881.

The Sister Queens.

One touch of death makes nations kin!
This month has proved it so;
America and England sigh,
And weep in mutual woe.

Two Sister Queens upon this day,
Though dwelling far apart,
Bow to the destiny of death
And feel the mourner's smart.

In deep heart-grief our gracious Queen
Responsive weeps at home,
Yet sends the hallowed diamond tear
Across the Atlantic foam.

The Sister Widow feels the grace
By Queenly goodness shown;
This beam of love reflects, returns,
Gilds, cheers, each sister's home.

Our kinsmen, homed in that vast land
See friendship, peace, good-will—
A proof, if sad, that hand in hand,
Love holds the Britains still.

If death seals amity, we win
From Sorrow's loss a gain;
Mercy a compensation gives
For Separation's pain.

September 26.

NOTE.—"Among the flowers about the coffin was a wreath sent from the British Legation having the inscription:—Queen Victoria, to the memory of the late President Garfield and the American nation."

Add lines written on the funeral day:—

Poor Garfield's death unites two realms apart,
From Her who gems Great Britain's royal Throne
To Greater Britian's sons, all swell the tribute tone

NEW BOOKS.

A GENTLEMAN OF LEISURE. By Edgar Faucett. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., pp. 323.

The hero of this picture of New York society which shows some of the lights and shadows of the great Metropolis is an Englishman of leisure, who, after a short residence there, during which he enjoys the society of the upper circles, secures as the partner of his joys and sorrows, one well worthy of the confidence bestowed by him who had crossed the ocean seas to find in this rival of cities of the old world his future happy home. As a novel it ranks high in comparison with many which have preceded it.

ARNE. By Bjornstjerne Bjornson. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., pp. 200.

The American translator, Prof. Rusmus B. Anderson, has shown rare fidelity to his work and the most gifted of Norwegian writers is fortunate in securing one so well qualified for the somewhat difficult task of translating so as to preserve the force and beauty which are found nowhere more abundant than in the Norse language. This is thought by many to be Bjornson's best story; be that as it may, it will compare favorably with the others. In Norway, the works of this writer are eagerly sought for by all classes, and in this volume for the songs which have a national reputation, melodies have been composed and the reader has the advantage of seeing them in the same notes and rhyme as the original. This will prove one of the most interesting books of the season.

PHILOSOPHY OF CARLYLE. By Edwin D. Mead. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., pp. 140.

Some may think that enough has already been written of this eminent Englishman, but future history will show that not half has yet been told of hat living force which dies not with the man, but goes on and on adding to what is noble and good and removing much of the criticism which in the present day is cast upon him. Great men and deep thinkers are not abundant enough that we can afford to dispense with the good they have done but shall find it far better to treasure whatever was ennobling and praiseworthy and profit by the short comings and failures shown. We commend this book to all who would know the true record so far as yet written of one of England's most prominent notables.

We have in sheets and paper covers copies of the above designed for the home libraries and schools. In the attempt of the publishers to aid in the developement of a love for the beautiful thoughts, the noble and elevating sentiments that pervade the choicest literature they have done a noble work which deserves the thanks of all who would see the art of reading in our institutions of learning raised to the high standard it is capable of attaining by the use of the best means at the command of those who have control of them. In the home and the library also these fountains of noble thought and purest breathings will have an influence that will tell on all the surroundings of daily life.

OUR LITTLE ONES. Lee & Shepard, pp. 384. $1.50.

There are very few so little acquainted with the many publications for the wee ones as not to have seen some numbers of the monthly which bears the above title. Our Little Ones at home and in school is now presented in a volume so perfect that it would seem that the art of arts had attained had attained its highest point. With an extended list of the best stories enriched by 350 illustrations on beautiful paper in a cover of the most bewitching attractions the little ones will insist on hearing every word read and examining every picture.

The general use of such pure literary food as this would tend to remove one half of the troubles of the nursery and show its good influence through all future life.

UP THE RIVER. Yachting on the Mississippi. By Oliver Optic. Lee & Shepard, pp. 364. $1.50.

This is the sixth and last volume of the Great Western Series and many a youth will sigh as he reads the announcement that this is the last of them, and hope that the author whose fame has gone a much greater distance than the fifty thousand miles which he has traveled in procuring material for the seventy-five books which he has added to best reading in the country will go on and add many more. Captain Boomsby, the hero of all the volumes in this series, after some of the most thrilling experiences on the sea, the Great Lakes and lastly on the Father of Waters, returns by a route not often taken by tourists, returns to his home in Michigan. That he has grown wiser and better none will doubt, and the reading of his eventful career will incite many a noble youth to follow the straight and narrow path of duty which leads to honor and success.

PUNCTUATION. By Marshall T. Bigelow. Lee & Shepard, pp. 110. 50 cents.

For the persons for whom this volume was intended it will be a great help. Discarding much of the stiff and formal punctuation of other treatises the author a most thorough and accomplished printer and proof reader of nearly fifty years experience at the famous University Press has presented plain and practical rules for compositors and proof readers brief enough to be kept in mind and easily understood. Authors, teachers and scholars and business men who write any for the press will find it a good thing to have constantly at hand.

FRIENDS. A duet. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., pp. 255.

The gifted author of "Gates Ajar" and the story of "Avis," needs no introduction to our readers in assuring them that it will prove equally interesting. The scene is laid on the banks of the beautiful Charles river and in the staid aristocratic city of Salem and the characters portrayed, show the inwardness of the most refined circles, with a free hand evidently at home amid scenes of wealth and fashion. The devotion of a true hearted woman who shrank from the attention of a noble minded man for fear of showing a want of respect for the memory of one taken from the scenes of earth is creditable to her devotion to him who had shared her first love and the severe struggle it cost her to decide to accept an offer too good to be refused shows that a woman of the purest motives and unselfish attachment never bestows her love without considering the case in all its bearings.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for November, concluding the sixty-third volume, is a number of rare excellence. It opens with a very interesting article, by W. H. Rideing, entitled "In Conwall with an Umbrella." Mr. Rheinhart illustrates the article with quaint pictures of the people and of the country. W. W. Thomas, Jr. contributes a graphic account of two week's recreation and sport in the woods of Canada, beautifully illustrated. We are reminded again of the Yorktown Centennial, by Mr. Howard Pyle's "Tilgham's Ride from Yorktown to Philadelphia." In his second installment of his "Journalistic London," Joseph Hatton describes the London Times building, and gives a history of that paper. One of the most entertaining things in the article is the biographical sketch of Henry Labouchre—the editor of Truth. The article is profusely illustrated. A very interesting chapter in the pioneer history of Ohio is contributed by Alfred Matthews, under the title of 'Ohio's first Capital"—referring to Chilli, cothe. The article is illustrated by portraits of Massie, Tiffin, Worthington, and Allen, and by sketches of old historic mansions, etc. John Habberton gives an entertaining abstract of Paul Du Challu's travels in Scandinavia, illustrated with fourteen wood engravings from that work. Thomas Huges contributes an interesting sketch of the late Dean Stanley. A full-page and very impressive portrait of Dean Stanley is given in the number. The serial novels—"Anne," by Constance Fenimore Woolson, and "A Loadicean," by Thomas Hardy—are continued. John A. Dillon contributes an important and timely article, with illustrations, on "Tehauntepec, and the Eads Ship Railway." Short stories are contributed by John Esten Cooke and Virginia W. Johnson, and poems by Lacy Larcom and Adelaide Cilley Waldron. The editorial departments are full of entertaining and useful matter; and the Prospectus of the magazine far the coming year shows that the forthcoming volumes will be even more interesting and beautiful than the number just concluded.

Sold by S. Horton at the Woburn Book Store.

THE CENTURY (Scribner's Monthly) for November is received and found, on examination, to be a very fine number. Its illustrations are numerous and superb, while the general high character of its literary contents is fully maintained. The size of the magazine has been enlarged by the addition of about fourteen pages, while the large plait type has been retained. The number opens with an admirable full-page contents portrait of George Elliot, and the are as follows:

A Diligence Journey in Mexico.
Christophe.
A Curious Experience.
The Portrait of George Eliot.
George Eliot.
When the True Poet Comes.

Topics of the Times—Home and Society—Literature—The World's Work—Bric-a-Brac.

THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY FOR NOVEMBER, 1881.—Mr. Spencer opens this number of the Monthly with an article on "The industrial Type of Society." It sets forth in a strong light the great fact that social improvement, to be most rapid, permanent, and complete, requires the largest possible freedom of the individual—a condition only to be reached by the development of the industrial at the expense of the coercive pursuits of society. "Deterioration of American Oyster-Beds," by Lieut. Francis Winslow, of the U. S. N., follows next, and is full of useful information. "Volcanoes, their Action and Distribution," is a profusely illustrated paper correcting many popular errors concerning volcanic phenomena. Dr. Oswald's papers on "Physical Education" are continued, the special topic in the present number being "Hygienic Precautions." "A Half-Century of Science" is the first part of Sir John Lubbock's presidential address at the last meeting of the Association fifty years ago. People interested in the constitution of "other worlds than ours" should not fail to read Mr. Francis Birgham's article on the discovery of "Organic Remains in Meteoric Stones." Sir William Thompson's opening address before Section A of the British Association on "The Available Energy of Nature" is given; and is followed by a paper on "The Duration of Human Life," in which the writer, M. De Solaville, reaches the conclusion that centenarians are not uncommon, and that, on the whole, the length of human life is increasing. Anybody who may be ambitious in this direction will find it profitable to read the next article, entitled "Worry," which disagreeable habit, according to Dr. J. Mortimer Granville, the author, is a far more common shortener of life than the so called overwork we hear so much about. There is an article on "American Climate and Character," by E. C. Towne, and the body of the magazine closes with a sketch of Geo. J. Brush, Professor of Mineralogy in the Sheffield Scientic School, and President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Lack of space prevents extended reference to the departments, which, however, are always filled with a large variety of instructive and useful reading.

New York: D. Appleton & Co. 50 cents per number, $5 per year.

A Very Beautiful Premium Engraving has been issued by PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for 1882, to reward persons for getting up clubs. The plate is large, 20 inches by 16, and would ornament even the most refined parlor; for it is executed in the highest style of art. It is entitled, "Hush! Don't Wake Them," and represent a little girl, seated at a bedside, where he. two sick dolls are, and she is holding up her finger warningly, as she speaks. It is really one of the most charming pictures possible; all the little ones, especially, will be delighted with it. Any one can secure this beautiful engraving gratis, by getting up a club for "Peterson." Only the enormous circulation of the Magazine can explain why the proprietors can afford to give such premiums. "Peterson" is the best and cheapest of the lady's books, the price being but two dollars a year, with great deductions to clubs. Specimens of the Magazine, to assist in getting up clubs, are sent, gratis, if writtten for. Now is the time to get up clubs for 1885. No one should subscribe to any magazine until they have seen a copy of "Peterson," and compared it with others. Address,

Charles J. Peterson,

Open Defiance.

Proprietary specialties have played an important part in the history of human lives, and the long and brilliant reign of St. Jacobs Oil is its own best recommendation. People no longer stand and moan over their inability to fulfil the duties of their various occupations, because of crippled and distorted limbs, or prospective pleasures that cannot be enjoyed. They no longer stand aside musing upon the recollections of former games and pastimes involving energy, strength and musele. Now they can fling defiance at all competitors because of their friend St. Jacobs Oil, who has risen to be their champion in the race; but listen to the voice of one whose words fall into harmony with the sentiment of all outsiders. Mr. Geo. Stringfield, of the Manhattan Cloak and Suit Company, whose offices are at 53 and 55 Worth street, New York, thus spoke to a representative of the Brooklyn Eagle: Sometime ago I was called to the City of Schenectady on business of importance, which required personal and prompt attention. On reaching that city late in the evening, I was suddenly attacked with violent rheumatism in my hips, knees and ankles, and by the time I was preparing to retire for the night I was scarcely able to disrobe, so intense were my sufferings. I had my business engagements to attend to next day and there was no time to lose, so I had the servant rub me well with St. Jacobs Oil for fifteen minutes, until I felt as if I were enjoying the delightful and exhilerating sensation of a Russian bath at a temperature of 148 degrees. In the course of a half hour the pains had subsided and I went to sleep. In the morning I was astonished to find myself as active and lively as I had ever been.

Mr. Walter F. Adams, of Westboro, Mass., writes: "For years I suffered the horrors of dyspepsia and indigestion. They seemed to weaken every organ of life, and completely shattered my nervous system. At night when I lay down I felt I could not live until morning. Heartburn pained me most terribly. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters; it suited my case precisely, and now my stomach digests any kind of food, and my sallow complexion and other symptoms of ill health are all gone, and at night I enjoy most refreshing, dreamless slumber."

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

The Republican voters of Woburn are requested to meet at headquarters, 204 Main St., Tuesday evening, Nov. 1, 1881, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent the town at the next session of the Legislature. Also to transact any other business that may properly come before the caurus. Per order Republican Town Com.

WM. F. DAVIS, Secretary.

☞ If our memory serves us, the Middlesex Fells scheme—a noble enterprise—was first broached by our esteemed neighbor the Stoneham Independent. Not only so, but its eloquent and persistant advocacy has kept the project alive through many discouragements, and today it enjoys the proud satisfaction of witnessing the complete success (on paper) of its philanthropic plans. After reading the grand and soul-stirring resolutions passed at the Falls meeting last Saturday no one can reasonably doubt the near fruition of the fond hopes of the Independent.

☞ Hon. S. Z. Bowman, M. C., spent a part of last Friday forenoon in the JOURNAL office with the editor. He came over from Lexington, where he is stoppidg, to shake hands with his Woburn friends, who welcomed him cordially with a heart in it, for they were glad to see him. The visit was all the more pleasant for not being a political one. His head and heart and talk were not full and running over with politics—he came over to see how we were all moving along, to say he liked us, and to get spiritually refreshed. We have an idea that the visit did Mr. Bowman good.

☞ It is suggested to us by a Democratic friend that the Democratic nomination for Representative rightfully belongs to J. G. Maguire, Esq. We have no objections: Mr. Maguire is a good man and respected citizen; but some of the knowing ones pretend to say another prominent Democrat and town official will carry the caucus. However, it is not the JOURNAL'S funeral; and its interest in Democratic matters goes only to the extent of hoping that they will nominate somebody that Mr. Hayden can beat without much trouble.

☞ Last Monday Hon. Edwin D. Morgan, of New York, formerly Governor and United States Senator, was nominated by the President and confirmed Secretary of the Treasury. On Tuesday Mr. Morgan sent word to the President that he would under no circumstances accept of the position, and a man for it must be sought in some other direction. We think Mr. Arthur's plan is to keep on nominating men for awhile who will decline the office, and eventnally get round to Conkling who will become permanent Secretary of the Treasury.

☞ The Medford Mercury, the very best of our country exchanges, advises the voters of the Fifth Congressional District to spend considerable time at the State House this winter and learn what an excellent successor to Mr. Bowman Mr. Lodge would make. A redistricting of the State may deprive the Mercury of the pleasant privilege of working for Mr. Lodge next year.

☞ We print the prospectus of Harper's Young People in this issue of our paper, and cheerfully recommend it as one of the very best magazines for youth that is published. Indeed the name of the Harpers on a publication is a warranty that it is "the best."

☞ The Middlesex County Republican committee have organized by the choice of Charles H. Richardson, of Lowell, chairman; Henry W. Pitman, of Somerville, secretary, and E. F. Johnson, of Marlboro', treasurer.

— Strangers coming into town looking for tenements cannot find any to let. Many men who work in town are obliged to support their families out of town.

— The Supurior Criminal Court is now setting at Lowell. Woburn has a light docket—in fact Woburn has been very free from the higher grade of crimes.

— Tuesday last Miss Eveline Howard, of North Woburn was taken to the Danvers Hospital for Insane, by Chief Conn. There are 600 patients now at that institution.

— We would impress it on the minds of the people that those business men who advertise in the JOURNAL—every one of them—are reliable, fair, cheap in prices, honorable, and the men to deal with all the time.

— The Assembly which was to have been given by Post 33, G. A. R., on Wednesday evening, Oct. 26, was postponed until Thursday evening, Nov. 3d. Parties holding tickets will be entitled to admission on that date.

— Mr. F. P. Curran, editor of the Echo, and Knight of the Green Bag in embryo, is the Woburn business manager of The Evening Star, and is doing a rattling business in the sale of that lively and spicy Boston daily.

— Persons who intend to make unnessary noises in Lyceum Hall during performances, might just as well go at once and get into the lockup and secure a choice of cells, as to wait, for that will be the result of any such demonstration.

— Burglars are making things lively all around us. Quincy, Arlington, Malden and other places have suffered. Sleep with one eye open, or don't have anything on hand worth stealing; but in that case they may take your life.

— It is reported that T. J. Begley and Alex. McDonald had a team stolen from them last Sunday evening, at Malden. They hitched the horse by the side of the road to remain while they made a call on a friend, and in their absence the outfit was seized by a well-known person and made off with. It was found in West Medford.

— Men who have made advertising a subject of scientific investigation, and who have done the most at it, insist that the method of advertising that yields the best and surest returns, is that of the columns of respectable newspapers. No other way begins to compare with the newspaper; and you never see the men above alluded to employing the poster, the handbill, the dodger, the flyer, the gutter-snipe, or anything of that nature. Stick a pin here.

— At about one o'clock on Thursday morning a fire was discovered in the pickersheds of Baeder, Adamson & Co's glue factory at Montvale, and an alarm sounded. The firemen with their machines were promptly on hand, and succeeded in arresting the progress of the devouring element and saving much valuable property. The picker sheds were destroyed, together with valuable machinery and manufactured goods. Loss about $4,000.

— Local reporters of the Boston dailies complain bitterly of the dearth of local news. But the JOURNAL comes up smiling to-day, as usual, plum full of interesting and juicy bits for the delectation of its numerous intelligent patrons. By the way, did it ever occur to the reader of these few lines that the JOURNAL gives more reading matter than any other country paper within a circuit of ten miles, the soldiers' monument on the Common being the centre of the circle? It is so.

— There has been a remarkable dearth of important transactions at police headquarters this week. The Temple of Justice has worn the quiet repose and almost solemn silence of mid-dog-days. George Devine, a minor, was locked up by officer Welsh for indulging in profane language according to the unrevised edition, and was released by order of court on condition that he does not repeat the offense. Edward Dooley, d'k, second offence, $6 and costs, amounting to $10.55. Edward A. Pease, d'k, second offence, $5 and costs, $10.55. And His Honor, on wiping his gold-bowed glasses, heaved a sigh of relief that Woburn seemed to be growing so good and virtuous.

— Mr. George W. Kimball is building a house for Mr. B. T. H. Porter, on Franklin street.

— The election of officers of the St. Charles C. T. A. S. takes place next Tuesday evening.

— Wednesday was a plaguey cold day with a good deal more wind in it than comfort demanded.

— Mr. Michael Ferrin, who it was said, was stricken with paralysis last Saturday, is about the streets.

— Leeds's windows show a fine portrait of President Garfield. It is to be raffled for by the Woburn Brass Band.

— Last Friday afternoon the Woburn Phalanx joined its Regiment (5th) in Boston, to receive Gov. Long from Yorkton.

— A severe type of cold is quite generally prevalent here. It seems to be a bilious cold with considerable of a dash of "horse ail" in it.

— If we have got it right, and we think we have, there are continuous sidewalks and lines of street lamps from this place to Boston.

— Within a radius of five or six miles from Woburn Common there is a population of nigh on to 40,000. The census shows this.

— The Phalanx have their assembly this evening at Armory Hall. A good attendance is expected and an enjoyable season calculated on.

— Rev. Dr. March was sufficiently recovered from his late severe illness to preach last Sunday. He bids fair to soon be as well as ever.

— At this rate, banking-up houses will soon be in order. And yet nobody knows but that there will be weeks of warm weather before the ground closes up.

— Mr. George E. Parkhurst, engineer of the Water Works, has resigned. He will go to Russia on the 10th of next month to set up two large Blake pump engines in that country.

— A room-mate went through the habiliments of Dennis McCarty at Mrs. Lynch's on Main street, the other day, and left him quite destitute in the line of something to dress up in.

— Mr. John R. Carter, who was taken sick at St. Louis on his recent visit there, and has been quite ill since his return, is on the streets again, and, though not entirely well, is gaining.

— Benj. E. Bond, Esq., returned, last Tuesday evening, from quite a long-drawn-out vacation in regions north of here. His personal appearance indicates a pleasant time while away.

— Some very, very nice pears found their way into our porringer last Monday afternoon, but as the thoughtful donor (Mr. Nathan Wyman, P. M.) didn't wish to have his name mentioned, we decline to state from whence they came. We thank him all the same though.

— Attention is called to the real estate and insurance card of J. R. Carter & Co., in this paper. This is a good, strong, reliable firm (John G. Maguire, Esq., is the "Co.") and all business entrusted to it will be faithfully attented to.

— Mr. Porter, presiding genius at 139 Main street—a kind of sans-souci for lovers of the weed and social chat—was raised with Artemus Ward, once the best of American humorists, at Waterford, Maine, and belonged to Artemus's circus and other juvenile show companies. He holds the memory of his boyhood playmate very dear.

— The view from Horn Pond mountain just now is very fine. Besides the numerous cities, villiages, villas and farm houses to be seen from it, the groves, in autumn robes, are pleasant to look on, while the ponds and streams are always charming. Nor is Rag Rock an elevation to be sneezed at as respects views to be obtained from its summit.

— We are indebted to Mr. Warren Teel, Assistant Postmaster at Davenport, Iowa, of which our good old-time friend, Edward Russell, Esq., is chief, and has been for twenty years, for a copy of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, for which we return thanks. Mr. Teel is a native of this neighborhood—Arlington perhaps—but has been a resident of Davenport for a good many years, and is greatly esteemed there.

— A correspondent of the Arlington Advocate says: "Mystic Pond in Medford, Horn Pond in Woburn, and Spot Pond in Stoneham, are all shown under these names in Wood's map of Massachusetts, drawn in 1633, which proves that their present names were given at a very early date after the settlement of the country." By which it seems that our beautiful sheet of water has been called Horn Pond for 248 year at least.

— There appears to be quite a revival of interest in the Land League and Irish affairs here at present. Late events in Great Britain have stirred up the Celtic blood in this locality, and things may truly be said to be booming. Last Wednesday evening, James Walsh, Esq., of Clinton, addressed the Woburn Branch at Emerald Hall; next Wednesday evening Philip J. Doherty, Esq., of South Boston will deliver an address on Ireland's wrongs at England's hands; and the Wednesday after, Christopher G. Plunket, of Medford, will talk to the Branch. Generous sums of money are going over to Ireland from Woburn.

— Last Saturday evening, per notice, the Woburn Branch of the Irish Land League held a rousing meeting in Emerald Hall, to consider the critical state of affairs in Ireland. The Hall was filled, and the meeting was a very spirited one. Ringing speeches were made by John G. Maguire, Thomas H. Hill, Lawrence Reade, and other prominent citizens, which were roundly applauded by the audience. Strong resolutions of sympathy for the people of Ireland were adopted, also in condemnation of the attitude of England towards the Irish nation, and pledging aid and support to the Irish cause. Officers of the Branch were chosen as follows: President, John G. Maguire, Esq.; Vice Presidents, John A. Welch, Peter Kenney; Secretaries, Edward F. Cassidy, John C. Meehan; Treasurer, Lawrence Reade; Executive Committee, Thomas H. Hill, Michael Maguire, Francis P. Curran, Frank Thornton, John Shinquin.

— Edmand's Band of Boston has been engaged for the Phalanx Masquerade, Dec. 7.

— At the meeting of the Selectmen on Wednesday, permission was a granted to Curtis Davis & Co., to erect and add to buildings for soap making purposes at Walnut Hill. E. Prior was granted an auctioneer's license.

CABINET ORGANS.—A noteworthy instance of progression in the construction of this popular instrument, no less than 70,000 of which were sold during ths past year, is found in the "Baby Organ" just introduced by the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company, and sold for only $22. Every one knows that the organs made by this company stand at the very pinnacle of excellence. No one seriously pretends to make better organs than it; and few will claim to make as good. Yet in the little organ alluded to, such progress has been made in symplifying the construction, and so securing economy of cost without loss of quality, that they are now able to offer a really good organ, retrining their characteristic excellence, at a price which really seems rediculously low.

— Spaulding's renowned and popular troupe of Swiss Bell-Ringers will appear at Lyceum Hall, Woburn, on Monday evening, Oct. 31st, in a delightful musical entertainment. Georgie Dean Spaulding in remarkable harp and cornet solos. Maud Stanley the eminent songstress. Miss Rosalie M. Lucier, ocarina and cornet soloist. Miss Ester R. Stratton, elocutionist and staff bell player. The Werners, Maud and Edward, who will appear in their new society domestic and flirtation sketches. Mr. W. P. Spaulding, harpist and expert Swiss bell player. Mr. J. F. Holmes, violinist. Mr. Frank Johnson, pianist and organist. General admission 25 cents. Reserved seats 35 cents. Secure your reserved seat tickets at Horton's Bookstore. The Boston Herald says: "Their music delights all who listen to it." The Boston Journal says: "Everything good and in excellent taste." The Boston Traveller says: "It was a very fine performance throughout."

— The best meeting ever enjoyed by Division 3, A. O. H., of Woburn, was their 11th annual reunion at Emerald Hall, last Friday evening. The attendance was very large, and a deep fraternal spirit pervaded the assembly. The meeting opened with an excellent address by the president, Mr. James McMahon, in which visiting guests were warmly welcomed, the object of the Order lucidly explained, and patriotic and sympathetic reference to existing affairs in Ireland was made. The address was listened to with great attention, and roundly applauded. John McSorley, Esq., of East Cambridge, member of the Legislature, and County Delegate, delivered a handsome speech, which was well received. He was followed by John G. Maguire, Esq., of Woburn, whose theme was "Present Crisis in Ireland," which was an excellent production, and well delivered. The subject—the all-absorbing one at present in Great Britain—was ably handled by Mr. Maguire, who had evidently given his theme close and serious study. Lawrence Reade, Esq., delivered a forcible and most excellent address on "Why Irishmen should be united," which was supplemented by stirring remarks by Patrick Cohan, James Cogan, President of the East Woburn Branch A. O. H.; Peter Kinney, Thomas Kerrigan, John A. Doherty, Thomas Caulfield, Michael Clancy, Michael Golden, Timothy Sheehan, Patrick E. Tenny, William McDonough, James Downey, and others. The speech-making all through was fine. The lady friends of the Order provided a splendid supper which was highly enjoyed. The evenings exercises closed with a delightful hop.

— To a layman it looks as though the Woburn Y. M. C. A. had struck it just right. Professors of religion will doubtless agree with the layman in this conclusion. To make plain our meaning we jot down a brief item concerning a recent departure of of the Association in the way of a meeting, and what it was. The Devotional Committee conceived the plan—a most excellent and Christian one—of giving a certain class of the lads of Woburn, whom it was thought desirable to bring under good moral influences, an entertainment and supper, and proceeded to put it into execution. Pursuant thereto, invitations were sent out to about a dozen of our benevolent ladies to furnish supplies for the supper, to which they responded in the most generous manner. A liberal feast of really "fat things" was provided, for which may these kind ladies be abundantly blessed in basket and store. The entertainment was given at the Rooms of the Association on Wednesday evening, and proved to be an affair of great pleasure and profit. It consisted of two clarionet solos by Mr. John Brauer, two violin solos by Fred. Marion; harmonica music by Charles Evarts; recitations by Fred. Whitford and John Duncan, and the supper. The invited guests numbered about 50 youths from 15 to 18 years old, who enjoyed the whole thing with a keen relish. After supper, addresses were made by the Superintendents of the village Sunday Schools—Mr. Aldrich of the Unitarian, Mr. Clark of the Baptist, Mr. Copeland of the Methodist, and by Mr. J. H. Symonds, President of the Association. These were intently listened to by the lads, and at their close the meeting broke up. It was a good thing, and will bear good fruits. We trust these pleasant meetings will be continued. The dear lady manager of Boffin's Bower says a good supper is worth more than a bushel of tracts as missionary agencies.

HARRISBURG, PA., March 30, 1881.

Nothing is more charming and attractive than a thoroughly healthy, pefectly formed woman; a bright-eyed, rosy, laughing joyous happy-faced girl, one who finds keen pleasure in merrily living. An invalid wife or mother is a constant object of sympathy in an otherwise contented household. Happy the home whose women folks enjoy perfect health. In my practice I have always recommended sickly women to use Brown's Iron Bitters. In case of irregularites, dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, nausea, sour stomach, nervousness and exhaustive debility, I find it exceeds all other remedies as a true medicinal tonic. It never fails to gently soothe, refresh and strengthen the general system, and especially those parts made weak or continued distress; and what satisfies me most is, that the cures, although in some instances gradual, are always permanent.—M. D.

Important to Travelers.

Special inducements are offered you by the Burlington Route. It will pay you to read their advertisement to be found elsewhere in this issue.

He told the Truth.

I was troubled with Liver Complaint for years and suffered terribly. Lake, the Druggist, advised me to take Sulphur Bitters. I took three bottles and now I am a well man.—Manufacturer, Waterbury.

Humor in the Stomach.

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhœa and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases, with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statement of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

WOBURN CONFERENCE.

The Woburn Conference of Congragational churches held its regular semi-annual session at the First Church in Malden, Tuesday, Oct. 25. The programme announced it as a "Sabbath School meeting," and it proved to be one of the most important and interesting meetings held by this Conference for a long time.

The session opened with a half hour of devotional exercises led by Rev. Mr. Taylor of Melrose, after which the regular business of the Conference was transacted, with Mr. Stephen Lovejoy, of Melrose, in the chair as moderator for the ensuing year. The reports of the various committees were then made, including the report of the Sunday School Committee, by its chairman, Rev. Mr. Cutter, of West Medford, who stated the number of Sunday Schools connected with the conference as 21, with a membership of 4,746 scholars; 16 of the schools have a membership of 3,550, with an average weekly attendance 76 per cent. In this connection, Rev. A. E. Dunning, the Cong. S. S. Secretary, made some very interesting remarks on Sunday Schools in Michigan, as they were found by him in his recent travels in the West, and where in 80 schools he got reports of no books, no papers, and no conversions, presenting a great field for assistance from the thriving schools of the East.

The question of "How can the Sabbath School Concert be made most effective in the service of Christ," was very interestingly and earnestly discussed by Rev. Frank S. Adams, of Reading, after which a most bountiful collation was served by the Malden church, by the aid of a corps of young ladies and gentlemen who performed the duties of waiters with the precision of military drill.

In the afternoon the question box was opened by Rev. A. E. Dunning, and various questions bearing on the efficiency of Sunday School work very piquantly and appropriately answered. One of the most thrilling addresses of the day was made by the Rev. Dr. March, on the question of "What should the Church seek to accomplish by means of the Sabbath School, and what should the Sabbath School seek to accomplish by means of the Church and the House of God?" showing with much reasonableness that the Sabbath School has a claim upon the time and service of the members of the church, and that in the discharge of that claim the members themselves get a blessing. Inspiring addresses were also made by Rev. Mr. Peloubet, of Natick, and Rev. Mr. Buck who for fourteen years has been engaged in very successful mission work in Fall River. The Conference was very largely attended and cannot fail of producing good fruits in stimulating a new zeal in the churches in behalf of this most important branch of church work, the work of the Sabbath School.

Dr. D. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has been successfully used by thousands. It will build up a system which has been run down by overwork. It is the thing for the student and literary man to have at hand, and should be in the home of every mechanic. Favorite Remedy is economical, safe and pleasant. By it and try it; or, if you need advice as well, write to Dr. Kennedy, who is in active practice as a surgeon and physician at Rondout, N. Y. For sale by all druggists.

SOCIAL.—On Friday of last week, the Ladies' Sewing Society met at the house of Mrs. Silas Cutler, by her kind invitation. In the evening, a sociable time was held, to which old and young were welcomed by their generous hostess. A bountiful supper was provided for all present, and the company amused themselves with social conversation, music, and games. The occasion was much enjoyed by all who attended, and great credit is due to Mrs. Cutler for her efforts to promote sociability among the people of the town.

Mr. I. H. Russell bought of Mr. Joseph Stone, 7,500 feet of land on Swanton street, for $600.

The reservoir and Abajona river are getting quite low. There is water enough though for all necessary purposes at present and probably will be.

A Teachers' Institute will be held in this village during the second week of November, under the direction of the State Board of Education.

Leonard Nutter, Jr., son of Mr. Leonard Nutter, received severe injuries from falling twenty-five feet from a tree last Saturday. It is feared he received internal injuries.

Mr. Hiram Andrews, a respected citizen and very successful farmer, died at his home in the Hill district last Friday, at the ripe age of 89 years. He will be missed.

It will be seen by referring to the table at the top of this column that there have been some changes in the arrival and departure of trains on the B. L. & C. R. R. at this point.

Quite a number of names are suggested to fill the vacancy on the School Board, among them, Mrs. J. W. Huse, J. D. Twombly, S. H. Folsom, and J. H. Tyler—all good ones.

Rev. N. P. Gilman, of Cambridge, will preach at the Unitarian church, next Sunday. He was formerly profession in Antioch college, and is said to be a sound and eloquent preacher of the gospel.

Mr. Quinby is an efficient Street Commissioner. He is continually mending his ways, and looks sharp after bad places in the public thoroughfares. Everylhing is kept as nice as a pin by him.

The Congregational Church have received the new hymn books ordered, and, so far as I have been able to learn, like them. In precisely what particulars they differ from the old ones I am not enough of a hymnologist to decide.

Our esteemed and enterprising townsman, Geo. P. Brown, Esq., is painting and furbushing up his residence in nice style Mr. J. C. Stanton is doing likewise, and the Everett place is being subjected to the same beautifying process.

Mr. Greeley had his team badly used up at West Medford last Sunday evening by being run into by a Woburn team which an alleged thief had taken from the roadside in Malden where it had been temporarily left by two young men from Woburn who were visiting a friend there.

Some of our citizens want a change made in a certain part of Main street, and in compliance with their petition the County Commissioners will give them a hearing at the Selectmen's room in this village on Wednesday forenoon, November 16, after which the Commissioners will take the matter of change into serious consideration.

The young folks here just missed having a dancing school this fall, the proposed teacher having gone somewhere else. Perhaps your accomplished Major Richardson might be induced to come down here and instruct a class. I have an idea that a well regulated dancing school is a real good thing to have in a village of young people. It not only affords innocent and rational pleasure, but teaches deportment as no other kind of a school does. I trust a school will soon be established here, for I shouldn't mind "shaking a foot" myself once in a while.

I learn from pretty good authority that the tanners of Winchester are very much dissatisfied with the freight tariff of the B. L. & C. R. R., and that quite a stir is being made about it in a rational way. It is said that a large number of the tanners of Woburn have applied to the officers of the Railroad for a reduction in freights through a committee chosen for the purpose, in which they have the indorsement and sympathy of the Winchester tanners. It is also said that that the road unjustly discriminates against the business men and interests of Winchester and Woburn; but this is a matter about which I know nothing; only, if it is so, time and pluck will certainly remedy the evil. And who will undertake to say that discrimination against their interests may not, in the end, be a most excellent thing for both Winchester and Woburn? Stranger things than that have happened.

Our people are disposed to growl and find fault because the Star's local items are very nearly all "puffs" for our business houses. Not but that the business houses deserve them, but a good many citizens think, taking these puffs out, the Star's local columns are very dry and uninteresting. This is all wrong. The Star cannot make local news, and as it has a hard time enough of it to merely exist, fault ought not to be found with it for trying to eke out a few shillings weekly by writing and publishing little harmless puffs for the business men. These unreasonable, growling people—and if the world were a perfect paradise, and local papers were printed in letters of gold on a white satin surface, growling people would still be found—these unreasonable, growling Winchester people must remember that its village paper makes no pretensions to being a sun, or a moon—only a little twinkling star, and that of not a bewildering magnitude—and to exact of it whole pages of brilliant, sparkling, racy local items is unjust, not to say cruel, under the circumstances. I shall stand up for the Star, and take frequent occasion to rebuke the faultfinders in the columns of the JOURNAL, with its editor's permission.

The best people will vote for the best man every time. And we judge by the number of the St. Jacobs Oil constituency, that it is the best remedy for the rheumatism known. Prof. Tice, of St. Louis, among others says so.

The Royal beauties of Europe owe much of their personal attractiveness to the influence of Ayer's Hair Vigor, which keeps the hair fresh and bright.

Women that have been pronounced incurable by the best physicians in the country, have been completely cured of female weakness by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Send to Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, 233 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass., for pamphlets.

Dyspeptic symptoms, such as retasting of the food, belching, heat in the stomach, heartburn, etc., promptly cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

WE believe that nine-tenths of all cases of catarrh are constitutional. We also believe that a reliable constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, that strikes at the very root of this disease, CATARRH will cure a large proportion of all cases. In confirmation of this belief we offer evidence showing the effects of Hood's Sarsaparilla upon this disease. A city official says: "A lady who had suffered from catarrh for years, till it finally destroyed her sense of smell, was restored CURED BY to health and smell by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A mother says: "My boy had catarrh so badly that I could hardly keep him in clean handkerchiefs; he has taken one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and that terrible amount of discharge has stopped."

HOOD'S

Another case writes: "I have had catarrh four years. Last April, the dropping in my throat became so troublesome that I became alarmed, as it affected my right lung. I took two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and it cured me. My appetite, which was variable before, is first rate now." Very truly yours, Charles N. Griffin, 69 Summer Street, Lowell, Mass. We desire to say to all who try this medicine for catarrh, that probably the discharge will increase at first, then grow more watery and gradually stop. The odor disappears very soon in most cases. By continuing Hood's Sarsaparilla after all signs of the disease are removed, a more permanent cure is effected. Hood's Sarsa-

Lesson 5:

Nadab and Abihu.

LEVITICUS 10: 1—10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Ye shall be holy: for I am holy."—11: 44.

The Tabernacle had now been set up, and Aaron and his sons consecrated as priests. The services of the Tabernacle had also been inaugurated. And, to crown the whole, the glory of God appeared to all the people; and fire, descending from heaven, consumed the sacrifice heaped upon the altar. It was at, or soon after, this time that the painful events occurred which are narrated in our lesson.

Nadab and Abihu were the two eldest sons of Aaron. This fact alone would make them men of note and influence in Israel. But they had also been specially favored of God. It had been permitted to them to accompany Moses and their father into the sacred mount, and there to have a vision of God such as had never before been the lot man. Just now, too, they had been solemnly set apart to the priest's office, and called to assist in daily duties about the altar. It was these two highly favored men who now fell into great sin, reminding us that none are exempt from moral peril, that the most highly blest may transgress and perish.

Of the nature of their sin it is simply said: "They offered strange fire before the Lord, which he commended them not." The offence may have been an assumption of duties not belonging to them; an unwarranted intrusion into the most holy place; an offering of incense at the wrong time, or of other incense than that appointed. But the particular point of offence must have been the offering of other fire than that which had been divinely kindled on the altar. It had been commanded that that fire should be kept up, and that none other should be used for sacred purposes. The officiating priests were to fill their censers from this. Nadab and Abihu dared to disobey this so recent command. How they came to do it is not told us. Some have supposed that they were intoxicated at the time; and there is an intimation of this in the ninth verse. Or they may have desired to demonstrate their independence and importance before the people. The one important fact is that they trifled with God's sacred ordinances and set their wills above his command.

The punishment of their offence may seem severe. And so it was. It was similar to that which fell upon Uzzah when he put forth his hand to steady the Ark of God, and upon Ananias and Sapphira when they lied to the holy Ghost. A lightning flash devoured them, and they died before the Lord.

The reasons for such severity are indicated in the narrative. The great and central one was that God "might be sanctified in them that come nigh him;" that is, treated as holy and as having a right to command. Or it was that, if men would not reverence and obey him, he might at least be glorified before the people in the punishment of transgression. No doubt the offence was the greater for the dignity of the offenders, and the distinguished favors they had enjoyed. The more exalted the sinner, the greater the sin. Particularly offensive is the sin of those who serve in spiritual things. Then, the offence was against a solemnly ordained divine service. God is jealous of the manner in which he will be worshipped. He would have men follow his way, not their own. There is a sacred intent and meaning in his ordinances. We are not to despise them, or to seek to improve them. There is pride and rebellion in attempts to modify and mend his commands. God intended that the punishment of Nadab and Abihu should be a perpetual warning against such pride, and a perpetual proof that he will be served with fidelity and reverent fear.

The silence of Aaron was a rare exhibition of submission under the mighty hand of God. To him God's honor was dearer than his own flesh. It is reverence for God's laws which makes domestic peace and comfort possible. At any and all cost, the divine authority must be maintained. Therefore "Aaron held his peace."

The prohibition of mourning had respect to the priests, and not to the people. It would have interfered with their sacred duties; moreover, the priests, being nearer to God, were specially set to maintain his honor. It was incumbent on them to bear testimony that God's ways were just and good. "Aaron and his sons were in danger of being too much affected with the providence, and therefore they are forbidden to mourn; the house of Israel were in danger of being too little affected with it, and therefore they are commanded to lament."

There must have been some particular reason for the introduction, in this connection, of the prohibition against wine and strong drink. It is not unlikely that strong drink was the occasion of the offence of these two men. And it is note-worthy that the fact of their intoxication was in God's sight no extenuation of their guilt. It did not lessen the severity of their punishment,—a fact to be especially commended to modern judges and jurors. The reasons attached to the prohibition were that a difference might be put between things sacred and other things, and that God's appointed teachers might always be in a condition to discern and teach the divine statues; reasons which now apply not to ministers only, but to every Christian disciple as a servant and priests unto God.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. The children of good men do not always walk in right paths.

2. To be a minister in holy things, whether in the pulpit or out of it, does not exempt from temptation or weakness; it rather demands the greater watchfulness.

3. Sin in high places is at once more offensive to God and disastrous in its influence over fellow-men.

4. God demands reverence and obedience in our worship as well as work. It is for him to say when, where and how we shall appear before him. To neglect his house, or to be reckless in it, is an offence in his sight.

5. Both preachers and people may now offer strange fire on God's altar; he plainly does this who substitutes philosophy for the Gospel, or seeks by extravagances or eccentricities to command himself rather than utter God's truth; and so does he who sits in his pew with wandering thoughts and an undevout heart, or does any duty in the spirit of egotism and self-display.

6. If we will not honor God by willing service, he will glorify himself by showing in us the perils of disobedience.

7. It is a great sin to be brought under the power of wine or strong drink, especially in those who minister at the altar of religion, or in other ways appear to the world as religious leaders to teachers. No man can innocently indulge in that which so surely tends to destroy both body and soul. It is certainly right and safe to abstain.

8. It is a privilege and duty to be at our best for any kind of Christian work, and to shun whatever may make worship otherwise than intelligent, earnest, fresh and pure.

He Wrestles With a Bicycle.

"Now my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, hurrying up to his wife's room, "if you'll come down in the yard I've got a pleasant surprise for you."

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, "what have you got a horse?"

"Guess again," grinned Mr. Spoopendyke. "It's something like a horse."

"I know, It's a new parlor carpet. That's what it is!"

"No, it isn'n, either. I said it's something like a horse; that is, it goes when you make it. Guess again."

"Is it paint for the kitchen walls?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, innocently.

"No it ain't, and it ain't a hogshead of stove blacking, nor it ain't a set of dining-room furhiture, nor it ain't even seven gross of stationary washtubs. Now guess again."

"Then it must be some lace curtains for the sitting-room windows. Isn't that just splendid?" and Mrs. Spoopendyke patted her husband on both cheeks and danced up and down with delight.

"It's a bicycle, that's what it is!" growled Mr. Spoopendyke. "I bought it for exercise and I'm going to ride it. Come down and see me."

"Well, ain't I glad!" ejaculated Mrs. Spoopendyke. "You ought to have more exercise and if there's exercise in anything, it's in a bicycle. Do let's see it!"

Mr. Spoopendyke conducted his wife to the yard and decanted at length on the merits of the machine.

"In a few weeks I'll be able to make a mile a minute," he said as he steadied the apparatus against the clothes post and prepared to mount. "Now, you watch me go the end of this path."

He got a foot into one treadle and went head first into a flower patch, the machine on top, with a prodigious crash.

"Hadn't you better tie it to the post until you get on?" suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Leave me alone, will ye?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, struggling to an even keel. "I'm doing most o' this myself. Now you hold on and keep your mouth shut. It takes a little practice, that's all."

Mr. Spoopendyke mounted again and scuttled along four or five feet and flopped over on the grass plot.

"That's splendid!" commented his wife. "You've got the idea already. Let me hold it for you this time."

"If you'ye got any extra strength you hold your tongue, will yer?" growled Mr. Spoopendyke. "It don't want any holding. It ain't alive. Stand back and give me room, now,

The third trial Mr. Spoopendyke ambled to the end of the path and went down all in a heap among the flower pots.

"That's just too lovely fo anything?" exclaimed Mrs. Spoopendyke. "You made more'n a Mile a minute that time!"

"Come and take it off!" roared Mr. Spoopendyke. "Help me up! Blast the bicycle!" and the worthy gentleman struggled and plunged around like a whale in shallow water.

Mrs. Spoopendyke assisted in righting him and brushing him off.

"I know where you made your mistnke," said she, "the little wheel ought to go first like a buggy. Try it that way coming back."

"Maybe you can ride this bicycle better than I can!" howled Mr. Spoopendpke. "You know all about wheels! What you need now is a lantern in you mouth and ten minutes behind time to be the city hall clock! Don't you see the big wheel has to go first?"

"Yes, dear," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke, "but I thought if you practiced with the little wheel first, you wouldn't have so far to fall."

"Who fell?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "Didn't you see me step off? I tripped; that's all. Now you just watch me go back."

Once more Mr. Spoopendyke started in, but the big wheel turned around and looked him in the face, and then began to stagger.

"Look out!" squealed Mrs. Spoopendyke.

Mr. Spoopendyke wrenched away and kicked and struggled, but it was of no avail. Down he came, and the bicycle was a hopeless wreck.

"What'd ye want to yell for!" he shrieked. "Couldn't ye keep your mouth shut? What d'ye think y'are, anyhow, a fog-horn? Dod gast the measly bicycle!" and he gave it a kick that folded him up like a bolt of muslin.

"Never mind, my dear," conseled Mrs. Spoopendyke, "I'm afraid the exercise was too violent, anyway and I'm glad you broke it."

"I s'pose so," snorted Mr. Spoopendyke. "There's $60 gone."

"Don't worry, love I'll go without the carpets and curtains, and the paint will do well enough in the kitchen. Let me rub you with arnica."

But Mr. Spoopendyke was too deeply grieved by his wife's conduct to accept any office at her hands, prefering to punish her by letting his wounds smart rather than to get well, and thereby relieve her of any anxiety she brought on herself be acting so outrageously under the circumstances.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

IT MAKES NJ DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

SLEEP.

BY L. FRANK TOOKER.

In a tangled, scented hollow,
On a bed of crimson roses,
Stilly now the wind reposes;
Hardly can the breezes borrow
Breath to stir the night-swept river.
Motionless the water-sedges,
And within the dusky hedges
Sounds no leaf's impatient shiver.
Sleep has come, that rare rest-giver.

Light and song have flown away
With the sun and twilight swallow;
Scarcely will the unknown morrow
Bring again so sweet a day.
Song was born of Joy and Thought;
Light, of Love and her Caress.
Nothing's left me but a tress;
Death and Sleep the rest have wrought—
Death and Sleep, who came unsought.

THE GLOVE-HAND.

A dismal February night it was, with a grey fog above, through which the lamps showed like yellow dots of sickly flame, and a desolation of thawing snow and streaming gutters below. But Lilly was used to all sorts of weather—a degree more or less of dreariness and discomfort made but little difference to her.

Lilly Vennor was a "glove-hand." All day long she sat, with seven-and-twenty other girls, in a long, low-ceiled room, on the upper floor of a monster building in one of the grimmy, narrow streets that run parallel to Broadway, working at the machine, handling the curious shades of soft kid, buckskin and lambskin with deft, cautious fingers, piling up dozens of pairs on the shelf in front of her machine, until she vaguely wondered within herself if there were hands enough in all the world to wear out all these gloves. It was hard work, and it was poorly paid; but Lilly Vennor knew what it was to be out of work for weeks at a time, and she was thankful even for Mr. Murex's dollar a day, with the stipulation that, in case of extra haste, an hour or so over-time should not be objected to.

The poor are generally worsted in their bargains, nor was our little heroine an exception to the rule. But the machine was closed at last, the work delivered up to the sour-visaged forewoman, and Lilly was in the outer room tying her curls under the brown felt hat whose tasteful loops of ribbon had been sponged and turned so often, and folding her worn shawl across her shoulders; and, as she took up her dinner basket, she heard the gay voice of Mary Reid, one of her fellow workers, saying, merrily:

"St. Valentine's eve! You don't mean that you have forgotton it, Ida? Why I expect a dozen valentines at least, tomorrow."

Lilly Vennor glanced up at Mary Reid, as she spoke. A dozen valentines? Yes, there was every probability that she would receive as many as that. She was a dark eyed brilliant complexioned young beauty, with a pretty Greek nose, a dimple on the left cheek, and teeth as white as sliced cocoanut. She would be one to marry early, and escape from this bondage of toil and poverty; and, for a moment Lilly Vennor wished that she too, was beautiful.

And then came a second thought. St. Valentines eve; and she had promised Midge and Edith, the two little twin sisters at home a valentine for this year when Midge had submitted to the ordeal of vaccination, and Edith was docile at the task of learning to mend stockings; for Lily Vennor, girl though she was, had already been burdened with the care of life. Her father had married a second time and lost his wife, leaving Lily at his own death, with the charge of these two little ones, Edith and Margaret, commonly known as Midge."

It was a hard, hard task, but Lily never quailed. She had accepted it simply as she would have accepted any other decree of Providence, and the two little orphans had learned to love her with all their innocent hearts.

And now she paused in front of the brilliant shop-window, with her open purse in her hand, trying to decide upon some particular style of valentine which would be pretty enough to suit the children, and yet should not be too dear.

"I should like that gilt Cupid nestling in the roses," she said to herself; "or the pretty child who puts the bower of cut paper leaves aside, and holds up a tiny letter, or the velvet humming-bird on its nest. But they must be at least a dollar apiece and I have but five cents to spare."

So she went into the store, humbly waiting her turn, and bought the two five-cent valentines, which the clerk superciliously tossed toward her.

"I should like two postage stamps," said she meekly.

Lily pointed to a printed playcard, "Stamps for Sale Here," and the clerk, grumbling under his breath, reached down the stamps, and took the four pennies.

He did not like to do business on so small a scale especially while other customers were waiting at the counter.

"A valentine," said she, "for me? But I think you are mistaken, little Midge."

She opened the letter with a sensation of wonder as to whom it could possibly be from. For she got few letters, this gentle, drudging little creature, that the very sight of an envelope in a strange hand was a circumstance to startle.

"From Dr. Ingraham," she said to herself. "He will call here to see me this evening. Oh, dear, dear! I knew how it would be. He thinks it so strange that I haven't said anything about paying him for his attendance on Midge and Edie when they had scarlet fever. But he dosen't know how poor we are! And he dosen't know—how should he?—that I was going to his office this very week to ask him for the bill, and try and save up the amount little by little, until I had amassed the sum. Oh dear, what am I to do?"

She laid out the children's rations on the table—a bowl of milk, and two liberal slices of bread for each—and cautioning them not to go near the fire—which smouldered in a little cast-iron stove—went to her daily work with a heart which felt like lead within her bosom.

Mary Reid was talking in her high soprano voice, about the valentine she had received. Lelia Payne and Sarah Howell were giggling over gilt and tasseled epistles directed in masculine hands, but Lily went straight to the forewoman.

"Mrs. Dobbs," said she, "can you lend me ten dollars?"

"I?" said the forewoman, in sour surprise.

"I need it very, very much," said poor Lily; "and if you will lend it to me today—this very afternoon, I mean—I will pay you my next two weeks' entire wages as it comes in—and that you know, will be twelve dollars.

Mrs. Dobbs did a little mental arithmetic in the recesses of her brain, as she stood there staring with fish eyes on Lily Vennor.

Yes, the interest was not so bad. She thought it might "pay;" and so she lent the ten dollars for a term of fourteen days Sundays and holidays included.

"I won't give him the trouble to call," said she to herself; "for, of course it will be a disappointment to him to know that he can't get his whole bill. But I will tell him I will pay the rest as soon as ever I can. And I hope he won't be very much vexed; for, oh, he was so good to me when the little ones were sick!"

Poor Lily Vennor! None but the children of poverty can ever realize the agonies of distress and mortification which their wretched class have to endure as a part of their inevitable fate. Doctor Ingraham's pretty little gig was at the door when Lily went into the office, and Dr. Ingraham himself stood at the table in his fur-trimmed coat, pouring some mixture from one vial into another; a tall dark man, with eyes as black as sloes, and a beard as soft as floss silk.

"Sit down, Miss Vennor," said he, "I'm just through with my visits for the present. In five minutes I shall be ready for office practice."

Lily had turned pink and white by turns as she grasp the ten-dollar gold piece tightly in the palm of the hand within her worn little muff.

"I—I will not detain you long," said she; and she waited until he had prepared the pharmaceutical compound and sent it out by his man.

"And now?" he said, standing opposite to her, with folded arms and a height that seemed to her positively commanding.

"I received a note from you this morning," she said.

"Yes, and why did you not wait for me to call?" he quietly asked.

"I was ashamed to put you to the trouble," said Lily, in a low voice. "I knew, of course, the object of your call."

"Did you?"

He elevated his brows slightly.

"And I knew very well that I had not the money for you," she added in desperation. "But here is ten dollars, and if you will please let me know the whole amount I will endeavor to pay it in installments as best I can."

"You are mistaken, Miss Vennor," said the doctor, quietly. "My motive in calling had nothing whatever to do with the collection of my bill."

Lily looked at him with eyes of blue innocent surprise. She did not understand him.

"I had a question to ask you," said the doctor.

"About the children?"

"About yourself."

"A question!" she repeated vaguely.

"Yes," he said, "and I will ask it now. Miss Vennor, in those days when I came daily to your house and saw you stand like a ministering angel at the bedside of those little ones, I made up my mind that you of all women, came nearest to my ideal of sweet, womanly perfection. And I vowed within myself to ask you to be my wife. So, now, Miss Vennor—Lily you know why I was coming."

It seems like a dream of unreal bliss to Lily Vennor—that homeward walk through the twilight, with Bruce Ingraham's arm to support her—his beloved presence so near to her. She had been a toiler in life's shadow ever since she could remember; but she was coming into her heritage of happiness at last.

Little Midge and Edith were looking out for her, over the stairway, as she came home.

"It's Lily," cried Midge, in an audible stage whisper. "Our Lily! But she isn't alone. There's someone with her. Oh, Eddie, I guess it is her valentine! Old Mrs. Norris says that everyone has a valentine today."

"You dear little prophet!" cried Doctor Ingraham, catching up the child in his arms "You're right. It's Lily's valentine."

"Doctor Ingraham!" said Edith slowly. "Well, if I were to choose a valentine out of all the world for Lily, I should say Dr. Ingraham!"

And Lily, in a voice that was almost a whisper, added

LITERARY NOTICES.

OUR LITTLE ONES for November is a charming number. It will delight the small folks, and the old ones will not be entirely uninterested while looking over its beautiful pictures and reading its bright, sparkling stories. For the class for which it is designed OUR LITTLE ONES excels all other magazines published; and the price of it is so low ($1.50 a year) that few are so poor as not to be able to enjoy its monthly provision of rich things. The pictures in the November number are every one of them beautiful, and there is not a poor story between its covers.

ST. NICHOLAS for November is received. It is brimful and running over with good things. Perhaps we may serve the young people better by giving its contents, than in any other way. They are: Frontispiece—Miss Frances Harris—painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and engraved by Closson; A Birthday Greeting, Little Dancing Leaves, Old Fashioned Thanksgiving, Murillo's Mulatto, The Knights of the Extension Table, The Little Girl who tried to mind, All-hallow Eve Myths, Wallace of Uhlen, The Peterkins give a Fancy Ball, Slumber Song, Some Balloon Experiences, The Little Sisters Soliloquy, Sir Joshua and Little Penelope, Allie's Dream, The Verney Ancestor, The Carnivoristicous Ounce, How Johnny's Birthday was Kept, The Tearing Tandem, The Fairy's Gift, Little Tommy and the thanksgiving Collection, A Day on a Desert Island, Elberon, The Francklyn Cottage at Elberon, A Noble Life—James A. Garfield, ST NICHOLAS Treasure Box of Literature, Recollections of a Drummer Boy, For Very Young Folk, Jack-in-the-Pulpit, The Magic Pen, The Letter-Box, The Riddle-Box. These are all splendidly illustrated by the very best artists. Price $3 a year. Address "The Century Co." New York.

In all the discussions respecting prayer that have recently been called forth, nothing has been uttered by any clergyman that has touched the heart of the matter like these few sentences of the dead journalist and lawyer. —N. Y. Sun.

"Prayer—A Universal Instinct—There is just at present a particularly animated discussion going on as to the province and efficacy of prayer. It is very easy for unbelievers to ridicule prayer. The say 'does it rain when you pray for rain?' 'Does it stop raining when you pray for sunshine?'

Then they laugh at the idea that a universe which is manifestly governed by general laws should be influenced by special prayers.

In reply to this it may be stated that all spiritual and religious affairs are enveloped in mystery. We see them as through a glass darkly.

But what seems to us a very powerful argument in favor of prayer, and indeed unanswerable, is the universal instinct to fall down before a Higher Power and petition for relief under afflictions for which there is no human remedy.

By the deathbed of our beloved who would not pray.

Then it will not do to make light of prayer—to attempt to ridicule the whole world on its knees; for alike saint and sinner—the revered pastor and the pirate in a storm—supplicate the same God for forgiveness and preservation.

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1881.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

CITIZENS' MEETING.

By reference to our advertising columns and posters, it will be seen that a meeting of the citizens of Woburn is to be held at Lyceum Hall to-morrow evening to discuss matters of great importance to the people, and especially to the chief business, of this town. Distinguished gentlemen from Winchester, Wakefield, and other places vitally interested in the questions, will be present and address the meeting, together with several of our prominent citizeas. As all have a part and lot in the matter to be canvessed, the Hall ought to be filled with men of all political parties, and we think it will be.

WHY MR. HAYDEN SHOULD BE ELECTED.

It is an easy matter to give a plenty of good reasons why Mr. Hayden should be re-elected to the Legislature. Any intelligent citizen of Woburn could give a dozen of them off-hand if asked to do so, and not exhaust the list by considerable. They apply just as well to Democrats as to Republicans, too. He is a man of sterling ability: has had large legislative experience: is a gentleman: commands influence: has always taken a high stand among fellow members: is honest: is not a politician.

We might fill this sheet with enumerations of Mr. Hayden's merits as a citizen and legislator, but there is no need of it—he is a man among us—one of us—too well and favorably known for the JOURNAL to undertake to shed any light on his character, reputation or standing.

The particular reason, however, for urging his re-election at this time is his familiarity with a question in which Woburn has a vital interest, and out of which, unless properly handled, long, hot and expensive litegation will eventually come. We mean the drainage question and the alleged pollution of certain waters hereabouts, over which the Boston Water Board propose to fight. They fought last winter, but were handsomely worsted by Mr. Hayden, who met every move they made and finally put them hors du combat. A full history of the case is not necessary here. It will be given to-morrow evening at Lyceum Hall.

For this business particularly, and for all other that may affect the interests of our town, we want Mr. Hayden in the Legislature again next winter. As a member of the House he was a credit to Woburn. Democrats and Republicans alike felt proper pride in their Representative. Now, it is plain enough to be seen that the honor and welfare of the town demand his re-election, and if a due regard for the public weal, instead of partisanship, is allowed to influence the voters and direct their choice next Tuesday, he will be returned by a unanimous voice.

A NEW RAILROAD.

Having had our attention called to an article in last Monday morning's Boston Advertiser, in which was set forth a project to give Woburn and Winchester an additional railroad, we perused the same carefully, but failed to discover much comfort in it. It consisted of a succinct summing-up of fifteen hundred or two thousand rumors that have been floating through the at mosphere of the two towns for we do not know how many years; but to find anything tangible in its statements—anything that a hopeful soul could cling on to and get satisfaction out of—we utterly failed. To be sure the statements were made with considerable positiveness, and there was an air of business about them that at first blush might seem assuring; but when the article came to be simmered down it really didn't amount to much. To take stock in such kind of writing the public demand names and dates and hard-pan facts.

Now, it is reasonable to suppose that the business men of Woburn and Winchester know whether they want another railroad or not. Generally speaking they are a more than ordinarily intelligent people, and the JOURNAL is not vain enough to cherish the idea that it can instruct them in the conduct of their affairs. They know whether, or not, the Boston & Lowell Company acts oppressively towards them in the matter of freight and passenger tariffs, and they understand what their remedy is if it does. Not only so, but the business men of Woburn and Winchester have got a plenty of the wherewithal to secure a competing line of railroad, if they should make up their minds that a competing line of railroad is what they want. All they have got to do is to say the word, draw their wallets, and the evil, if there is one, will be speedily remedied.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

The Republicans of Woburn held a caucus on last Tuesday evening, at their Headquarters, 204 Main street, to nominate a candidate for Representative to the Legislature. Hon. J. G. Pollard was chosen chairman, and Nathan W. Eaton, secretary. The meeting was fairly attended considering the general apathy that prevails in political circles, and was quite spirited.

As was expected, E. D. Hayden was unanimously re-nominated for the post which he has filled so admirably for the last two years. After this business, good speeches were made by Col. W. T. Grammer, Benjamin Hinckley, E. N. Blake, P. H. Hanson, Postmaster Wyman, and others. All took strong ground in favor of the re-election of Mr. Hayden, believing that the interests of the town demand his return. Very important questions pertaining to the drainage and the Mystic nuisance will come up for settlement next winter, and as Mr. Hayden is perfectly familiar with the subject, and has the ability to handle it, it would be a piece of folly to elect him to stay at home.

☞ Editor Smythe, of the Medford Mercury, one of the triumverate that gives the Winchester Star so much trouble, honored the JOURNAL office with his presence last Saturday, and reported things at Medford as entirely lovely with the traditional goose at exactly the proper altitude. We can assure the Star, with our hand resting on that part of our waistcoat directly over the seat of the affections, that no plot or scheme was laid at the meeting, for the overthrow, or injury, of that most excellent and greatly prized bucolic journal.

☞ Gilmore's Band of forty pieces is giving concerts at the "Old Mechanics Fair" again this week, and thousands are flocking thereto, day and evening, to hear it. Woburn people ought not to allow this opportunity to listen to the playing of the best band in America to go by unimproved. This afternoon and evening, and tomorrow and tomorrow evening remain to attend in, and it is probable Saturday evening will be the best of the series of grand concerts. The Fair closes next week.

☞ The Arlington Advocate of last Saturday corrects an item which appeared in its columns the week before respecting Rev. E. Mills, pastor of the Baptist Church of Woburn. The item got into the Advocate by mistake, and the editor, who disavows any intention of injuring Mr. Mills, improves the earliest opportunity to correct the error. That is fair and honest.

☞ The Middlesex Prohibition party will hold their county convention at Stoneham at one o'clock tomorrow afternoon. It is expected to be a large and lively assemblage.

— The report current last week that the Mystic Valley R. R. had been sold was a little premature.

— The Democrats of Woburn will hold their caucus for the nomination of Representative at Lyceum Hall on Monday evening next.

— Smith & Son are selling a great many nice carpets to Woburn and neighboring people. They sell at less than Boston prices.

— Mons. De Seve, who is booked for the grand concert to be given in the Unitarian church on November 16, is violinist to Princess Louise, and is the best there is.

— The music of the stone-crusher is again abroad in the land. Having been repaired it is now engaged in crushing rocks at a great rate, and macadamizing will proceed as usual.

— Fred. W. Keyser, known here, who broke into the house of the late Mr. Hosford, in Lowell, was sentenced in the Superior Court at Lowell, last week, to 18 years in State Prison.

— Mr. Dennison, who is to take part in the grand concert to be given here on the evening of the 16th, is lately from England, in which country he ranks among the musical leaders.

— Ivers & Pond, of Boston, have something to say concerning pianos in this paper, which will be of interest to musical people. It is a sound establishment, and their instruments stand away up among the best.

— Attention is called to the professional card of Mr. F. H. Lewis in this paper. He is meeting with a good deal more than ordinary success this season as an instructor, and richly deserves the popularity which he enjoys.

— The L. W. Perham Hose Co. No. 1, have issued tickets for an assembly at their house on Winn street, on Friday evening, November 11. They will have the very best of music, and everything else to make up a glorious good time.

— On the evening of November 11, the Mechanic Phalanx will give a supper to the Fine Members, at the Central House Hall, for which preparations are being made. As usual it is expected to be a high-toned and very jovial affair.

— F H. Lewis, of Boston, who has so acceptably filled the position of organist at the Porter street church since the resignation of Mr. H. M. Dunham, has also resigned. It is not yet settled who will take his place.—Brockton Daily Enterprise.

— All the particulars of the musical event of the season may be learned by referring to our advertising columns. The array of eminent talent on the bill is an assurance that the Grand Concert is going to be worthy of a very liberal patronage by our people.

— Mr. R. W. Lucy, organist at the Unitarian church, and member of the Bay-State Concert Company, has made a long engagement with Camilla Urso, as pianist and accompanist. Next year he will travel with the company in Australia and other foreign parts.

— On Monday we buzzed for a few moments the directors or managers of the Telephone company, who are working their line in this direction, and will open an exchange here. They are now at work in Winchester. The head man has no fears of a plenty of patronage as soon as the line is in operation here, and feels very cheerful over the good prospect for business.

— The proprietor of Hammond's Clothing Store offers a new hat to the person who guesses nearest to the number of seeds in a mammoth sunflower that lies in his window. Some less than a thousand have guessed at it and had their guesses recorded in a book kept for the purpose, but it is generally thought that the JOURNAL reporter will take the hat. The guesses range from 750 to 15,000,000.

— Mr. Simon Blake, will move to Wakefield, N. H., next week.

— C. G. Plunkett will address the Woburn Branch Land League next Wednesday evening.

— "Bertha's Wooing" will be put on to the Woburn stage this season by Mr. Mark Allen.

— Hon. A. E. Thompson was chairman of the Democratic County Convention held at Lowell last week.

— Some young lads, who should have known better, took a sign from near Salem street on put it and the Episcopal church.

— The first promenade concert and dance by Quealey Court 32, M. C. O. F., will be given in Lyceum Hall on the evening of November 11.

— Mr. A. Cummings's millinery store fairly blooms with beautiful things—elegant bonnets, jaunty hats, gay ribbons, rich feathers, handsome flowers — everything sweet, beautiful and very cheap.

— Major Richardson opened his dancing school last Wednesday evening in Armory Hall, with a very large class—indeed, the Hall was full. This is going to be one of the best schools ever taught in Woburn.

— The JOURNAL hopes that Lyceum Hall will be filled with voters to-morrow evening regardless of party, to discuss matters of vital interest to them. It ought to be a citizens' meeting in the true sense of the term.

— Attention is called to the card of Mr. Robert Paul in this paper. He is an experienced and very skillful painter and frescoer, in proof of which the reader is referred to the residence of Mr. W. B. Doyle on on Church Avenue, the painting and fresing of which was done by him.

—The Police are co-operating with the janitor of Lyceum Hall, and the audience gathered on Monday evening to hear the Spauldings was as quiet as a June morning, except when a favorite retired behind the scenes. Spitting tobacco juice on the floor will next receive attention, and prosecutions will follow offenses.

— Mr. John L. Perham brought the axe down across two of the fingers of his left hand yesterday morning and gashed them bad. Johnny generally strikes for keeps, and if his axe had been decently keen, off would have gone the fingers.

— The Rev. Frederick W. Dennis, formerly of Woburn, has resigned his position at St. Matthews church, South Boston, and sailed for Europe November 3, from New York, by the steamer City of Chester, of the Inman line. He expects to travel on the continent from one to two years, and will visit Palestine and Egypt before returning.

— November 5 is Guy Fawkes Day, in commemoration of which the boys in olden times used to celebrate by punkin-lantern processions, beating drums, and general cussedness. We hope the Woburn boys will not do anything of the kind, but will behave themselves to-morrow evening like the good little boys they are. This sounds like a Sunday School picnic address.

— The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Selectmen was held in the Rooms on Tuesday evening. License was granted to Curtis Davis & Co. to render tallow at their works at Walnut Hill, and prosecute other business connected with their establishment. A petition was received from John Rhea for extension of Sturgess street, and referred to Committee on Highways. The monthly bills were passed upon.

— James McCool served a term in the State Prison, and on coming out last August, was taken by officer Welsh to answer to a charge of larceny committed four year ago at the laundry. In consideration of his long term of service, and on his representation and those of others, that he would do better, he was let off on payment of costs. Last week he was arrrested in Boston for burglary, and will again go to Concord. He is well known in Woburn.

— Business has been light in the Police Court this week. Patrick Haley, dis. peace, $3 and costs. Thomas O'Brien, dis. peace, $3 and costs. Thomas O'Brien, ass't and bat. $3 and costs, paid. Martin Connolly, drunk, 2d offence, $5 and costs, paid. Thomas Beaty, a lad of 17 years, stole goods from the store of W. H. Curtis, and on Tuesday was committed to the Reform School, from which institution he had been released on good behavior.

— The patriotic ladies of Woburn are wide-awake on the Soldiers' Home question, and are vigorously canvassing the town for aid in behalf of the Woburn table at the Soldiers' Home Bazaar, soon to be opened in Boston. They are meeting with excellent success, as they deserve to do, for the object is one of the very best, and should be contributed to by every person in Woburn able to give. Mr. William B. Harris is also canvassing the business houses, and is doing first rate. All patriotic people believe in a Soldiers' Home, and the Woburn ladies are greatly encouraged with the favorable reception they meet with on all hands. Help the cause along.

— A special meeting of the Water Board was held on Tuesday evening, mainly for the purpose of filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Engineer Parkhurst. The matter was discussed nearly the whole evening, but no appointment was made. It is important that "the right man for the right place" should be found, and hence the Board will not act hastily. The newly revised Rules and Regulations were also canvassed, after which the meeting adjourned over to yesterday evening for further proceedings in the premises.

— The JOURNAL's wealth says either Thomas H. Hill, Esq., or John G. Maguire, Esq., will receive the Democratic nomination for Representative next Monday evening. Of course, as is commonly the case, there are a score or so of other names mentioned, but none of them will get any votes to speak of, the real contest being between the two gentlemen named. This is so understood by the people generally. Which will win remains to be seen—courtesy favors Maguire; position favors Hill, and the longest pole will knock the persimmon. Both are good men, and in making choice of either the Democracy won't go far astray. But, of course, Mr. Hayden is to be our next Representative.

— Mr. H. E. Stront is still suffering from his bad knee, but will make it a point to be at his photograph rooms daily hereafter.

— Mrs. Burke fell down stairs at her home near the corner of Church and Main streets, last Tuesday, and received severe injuries.

— The new officers of the St. Charles C. T. A. S. are, Vice-President, James Burke; Treasurer, William H. Henchy; Fin. Sec'y, Thomas C. Quinn; Rec. Sec'y, Richard Terrett.

— Mr. Albert Thompson has taken a studio corner of Winter and Washington streets, Room 39, Boston, where he will give instruction in Drawing and Painting. Living model if desired.

— The tickets to hear Prof. L. L. Ryerson have been put by the Rumford Lodge, K. of H. 618, for their entertainment in Grand Army Hall, on the evening of the 9th inst., at 20 cents. Cheap enough, we hope.

— E. D. Hayden, Esq., has bought the Henry Dow place on Academy Hill. It is a very pleasant one and with the regeneratings which Mr. Hayden will probably bestow on it, it will make one of the most desirable homes in Woburn.

— Attention is called to the card of B. T. Mills & Co., in this paper. The proprietors are among the most reliable business men in Boston, and those of our people who patronize them will find everything just as recommended in their card.

— H. C. Sherburne, general manager of the consolidated Boston and Lowell and Concord railroads, has issued a circular announcing the appointment of Joseph S. Lincoln as general freight agent of the consolidated lines, Benjamin E Kendrick as general ticket agent, and John W. Wardwell as freight agent at Boston; and the offices of all these gentlemen will be in Boston. Mr. Lincoln will attend to all freight traffic, and Mr. Kendrick to all passenger traffic. These changes went into effect Nov. 1.

— Photographs make as nice and appropriate holiday presents as anything that can be had—more so, we think. Interchange of pictures at the joyous season of the year when gifts are in order, is pleasant to all concerned, and is growing more and more in vogue each year. Of course good pictures are meant. To secure this time should be taken by the forelock, for if it is postponed until the last moment the chances are strong in favor as disappointment. The present is a proper time to sit and order the pictures, and H. E. Strout's is heartily recommended by us as the best place to obtain first-class photographic work. He will be in his rooms daily hereafter and superintend the business, which is tantamount to saying that perfect satisfaction will be given. This advice should be heeded.

—Mesers. Bryant & King, a firm of Woburn tanners, in 1876 had their tannery in Clinton, this State, totally destroyed by the breaking away of a large body of water on the premises of the Bigelow Carpet Company and the Worcester & Nashua Railroad Company. The very heavy loss crippled the firm and they made an assignment, finally settling on 73 cents on a dollar, which their creditors thought was as much as they could do. Not succeeding in making a settlement with the Carpet company and Railroad, suit was brought against them by Bryant & King, which after being in court five years and a half, has recently been decided in favor of the plaintiffs. The court of arbitration was referred, a week ago, rendered an award of $78,123.30 with interest, the whole amounting to $108,000. Bryant & King have received a check for the sum. But the best of it is, that on receipt of the money, Bryant & King forthwith figured up the full amount with six per cent. interest due their creditors, and have sent each one of them a check for the entire endebtedness. They were under no legal obligation to do this, and therefore are entitled to all the more credit for the noble act.

— About the middle of last month, while absent in the West, Mr. Fred. Dow, of the firm of S. Dow & Co., tanners, was summoned to appear before the State Board of Health to show cause, if any he had, why the tanning establishment of the firm should not be proceeded against for polluting the waters of Horn Pond. As a friend, Col. Grammer answered the summons for Mr. Dow, and had the hearing postponed to November 5. On his return Mr. Dow, learning of this unexpecte d proceeding of the Board of Health, and seeing visions of possible lawsuits ahead, engaged the legal services of Gov. Gaston, of Boston, and is ready for the fray, if fray there is to be. Gov. Gaston visited Woburn a few days since and looked the ground all over thoroughly, the better to understand and prepare himself for any legal contests that may arise from this drainage matter. That there "is more to follow" is the belief of those best posted. The State Board of Health do not take this step on their own motion, but are put up to it and backed by the Boston Water Board, who were brought to the end of their tether last winter by the effective work of E. D. Hayden, Esq., our Representative to the General Court. The Dows had supposed they were to have no more trouble with this water question, as they had changed their system of drainage to conform to the orders and directions of the Board of Health; made everything perfectly satisfactory to them, who have entered no complaint nor found the least fault with the management of the Dows up to the 17th of October last. But this proceeding against the Dows means more than appears on the face of the papers. It probably means a long and expensive contest with the rest of our tanners and the town of Woburn. The Boston Water Board did not take their defeat at the hands of Representative Hayden last winter with good grace; the unexpected turn of affairs angered them; they ache to boss the suburban towns, and for months have had their agents out spying around Woburn, and seeking for a grip on our tanners. It is very clear that the Board have no case against the Dows, for everything about their tannery will bear the closest scrutiny; and it is quite as clear that the Boston Water Board will, in a contest with Woburn, come out at the little end of the horn. But this condition of things proves one thing clearly, and that is that Woburn must have a competent Representative in the Legislature this winter, and equally so that Mr. Hayden is the right man to send.

Mr. Michael McCann, a well-known and popular manufacturer, of Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "I felt generally debilited and my health failing me. I longed and prayed for an iron constitution, that I might be rid of the many annoyances of ill-health. But dyspepsia and urinary troubles, attended by nervous prostration, had gotten hold of me, and I felt my time had come. Nothing seemed to give me any permanent relief. Finally I happened to see an advertisement of Brown's Iron Bitters. 'Bless me,' says I, 'that's just the medicine for me precisely.' And so it was. By the powers of old Ireland, it has cured me of all my troubles and given me a constitution of iron."

Don't get discouraged because the doctors say you cannot live. I was troubled with dropsy and given up to die. But after using Sulphur Bitters for three months, I am well. It is the best medicine for all Kidney diseases I ever saw.—Mrs. B——, Bridgeport.

There isn't a place in Woburn where first class ready-made clothing can be bought at better bargains than at Mr. John C. Buck's. Not only clothing, but hats and caps, all kinds of gent's furnishing goods, underwear &c., are kept in stock, and sold equally low. Buck has a very desirable assortment of overcoats, and one peculiarity about him is he can always fit a customer.

There is neither rhyme nor reason in Woburn people going to Boston for their carpets. They ought not to do so. The fact is Smith & Son offer as good and stylish carpets at their store as can be found in the city, and it is a FACT that they sell the same quality of goods at LESS than Boston prices. This is true.

When any object is brought too close to the human eye it cannot be seen; for that reason we cannot see a fault in ourselves which we plainly see in others. P. S.—And lots of us don't want to.

The very best groceries that are on sale in Woburn are to be found at the popular and well-patronized store of Mr. A. E. Thompson. He sells very cheap too. Also, dry goods, and indeed everything that is to be found in a first class variety store.

Two neighbors were arguing. "How would it strike you if I called a policeman?" "To the old boy wid yer policeman! If I threw a brick at ye how would that strike ye?" "Faith, it wouldn't strike me, I'd dodge!"

Leeds has a neat, nice, genteel drug store, well filled and doing a good business.

An agreeable dressing for the Hair, that will stop its falling, has been long sought for. Parker's Hair Balsam, distinguished for its purity, fully supplies this want.

Richmond has no street sprinklers, but depends on Providence to send a shower every three days to keep down the dust. She not only gets credit for faith, but also saves a heap of money.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.—One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat any thing; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had taken it a week she had a rousing appetite, and did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. D. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has been successfully used by thousands. It will build up a system which has been run down by overwork. It is the thing for the student and literary man to have at hand, and should be in the home of every mechanic. Favorite Remedy is economical, safe and pleasant. By it and try it; or, if you need advice as well, write to Dr. Kennedy, who is in active practice as a surgeon and physician at Rondout, N. Y. For sale by all druggists.

The doctors are all liable to be mistaken, they were in my case. It cost me $200, because they said I had heart disease, and then told me I must die. Grandmother said it was liver complaint, and $2 worth of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Jennie P——, Rockport.

WINCHESTER.

Two fine houses are to be built on Church street by Mr. S. S. Langley.

Rev. Charles P. Lombard will fill the desk of the Unitarian church next Sunday.

Mr. Josiah Hovey is a member of the sixth Middlesex Senatorial District Committee, and a good one.

On Saturday evening of next week, the vacancy on the School Board will be filled by joint convention.

Mr. F. Loring is the committeeman with Woburn gentlemen to wait on the officers of the B. & L. R. R., for a reduction in freights.

There is pretty strong talk among the Odd Fellows here of instituting a Lodge. No doubt one would be well sustained and flourish.

The Backlog Club is stripping for real, earnest business this season. It is composed of many of the best people in Winchester.

Hon. A. B. Coffin goes to Woburn Saturday evening to discuss, with others, the drainage question in Lyceum Hall. He understands it thoroughly.

When Philip Phillips, the singing evangelist, comes here, as he soon will, it is expected many adjoining towns will be represented in the audience. He is a "sweet singer in Israel."

The telephone wires are progressing Woburnward with considerable speed. The men say Winchester is a hard town to set poles in, and that for a few days their progress will not be what they would like. They expect to get a good pntronage from the citizens of this town.

The lady members of the Unitarian Society propose a very commendable, thing which is, to place in the church a tablet to the memory of Rev. Richard Metcalf, their late lamented pastor. The idea is an admirable one, and as these ladies never fail in their undertakings the tablet may be regarded as certain to be erected.

The very close social and business relations which exist between the people of Winchester and Stoneham cause the former to regard the large amount of Stoneham local news in the columns of the Star in the light of a boon. They always read the the Stoneham items first and with the keenest relish; and not a few, it is said, have gone the length of declaring they would not think of keeping house without them.

A Winchester correspondent of the Medford Mercury writes concerning Congressional matters thusly: "Mr. Bowman's hopeless canvass will probably be abandoned after a few ballots in the convention * * * " etc, etc. I know nothing about what will occur in the Congressional convention next year, but the reader must not infer from the above that Mr. Bowman has not a large number of good warm friends in Winchester.

A very neat programme has been issued from the State House, by J. W. Dickinson, Secretary of the State Board of Education, for a Teachers' Institute to be held in Lyceum Hall, Winchester, on Thursday and Friday, November 10th and 11th. It will doubtless be a very profitable session. On Thursday evening Prof. W. H. Niles will give a lecture with stereopticon, on "Origin of mountain scenery"; and on Friday evening Col. J. W. Higginson will lecture on "How to Study History. The hospitalities of the citizens of Winchester will be extended to members of the Institute, and that means a good deal.

The terrible death in September 1880, of Mr. S. T. Sanborn, a prominent and greatly esteemed citizen of Winchester, caused by a train on the Boston & Lowell Railroad running into his carriage while passing the Carter crossing at Wilmington, has not yet passed out of the recollection of our people. It was a sad affair, the result of carelessness on the part of the railroad company. The company were indicted for the killing and last week the case was tried in Lowell. The jury brought in a sealed verdict of guilty, and the case will go up on exceptions. Mrs. Sanborn was severely injured by the train at the time, and for some time her life was despaired of.

My item in last week's JOURNAL concerning the excessive freight and passenger charges of the B. & L. R. R. company has stirred our tanners and other business people up to fever heat. They appear to be bent on having a competing railroad line at an early day, and a writer in the Boston Advertiser, of Monday last, evidently taking his cue from my article, says another road is to be built through Winchester to Woburn. The only question now, according to his statement, is the choice of routes—whether to adopt the suggested one from the Boston & Maine at Medford, or fall in with the proposition of the Fitchburg to build a line from Arlington to Woburn through Winchester. There is no doubt but that the business men of the two towns seriously contemplate some move towards bettering their condition as respects freight and passenger tariffs, and I have no doubt at all that, in less than eighteen months, Woburn and Winchester will have another line of railroad—they certainly will if the Boston & Lowell continue their unjust and stiff-backed policy towards those towns. If the Medford route can be built at the figures named by the writer in the Advertiser, it would be an easy matter for the heavy tanners, other business men and capitalists of Winchester and Woburn to construct it. The writer says, the amount paid the Boston & Lowell company for freight by Winchester and Woburn amounts annually to nearly $750,000, and if that is anywhere near the mark, as it probably is, it is easy to be seen that the business and moneyed men of the two towns would be largely in pocket, in a very few years, by building the new road. Our people are wide-awake on the subject, and I think something will be done to relieve them of their burdens right speedily.

George S. Littlefied has been appointed Trial Justice for another term, and received his commission. He makes an excellent Judge, and is a square man all the way through.

The Rev. Hewey Wood, of the National Temperance Society, will address the Reform Club meeting at seven forty-five o'clock next Sunday evening,in Livingstone Hall. Mr. Wood spoke very acceptably here a few weeks ago, and is a very able advocate of the good cause.

There is to be a town meeting on general election day to consider and act upon a few local matters, the most important of which is "to see if the town will instruct the Water Board to petition the next Legislature for an act increasing the amount of bonds or notes which the town may issue for the purpose of supplying its inhabitants with pure water," which the voters probably won't do.

[Quincy (Ill.) Daily Herald]

Speaking "by the Card."

C. H. Wood, Esq., of the C. & T. Ry., Port Huron, Mich., favors our correspondent with the following: After suffering for nearly a year with rheumatism, receiving treatment from most of the best physicians of Michigan and the West, I happened to try a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. Upon the first application I used fully half a bottle, and the effect was almost instantaneous. I immediately dropped all other treatment, and confined myself to its use alone. After the use of three bottles, instead of being driven to my business, or moving about on crutches, I walked from one to three miles daily about business, and have been free for over a year from this horrible disease for over a year, not haying the slightest twinge of it. Hence, I say that all medicines known to me are useless when compared with the Old German Remedy. Use this statement when and where it suits.

HEREDITARY SCROFULA.

ARE you aware that in your blood the taint of scrofula has a prominent place? This is true of every one. It is liable at any time, on the slightest provocation, to develop itself in some insidious disease. Consumption and many other diseases are outgrowths of this impurity of the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA has a wonderful power over all scrofulous troubles, as the remarkable testimonials we have received unmistakably prove.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—* * * My youngest son has always been troubled with Scrofulous Humor; sores in his head discharging from his ears, and a running sore on the back of his ear for two years; his eyelids would fester and ulcerate, discharging so that I was obliged to wash them open every morning, his eyelashes nearly all coming out; he was exceedingly dainty, most of the time eating but two slight meals a day. We were unable to find anything that had the least effect upon him till last spring, 1876, we gave him two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. His appetite improved at once. * * The back of his ear healed up without a scar, and not a sore in his head since. Sincerely yours,
MRS. N. C. SANBORN,
No. 108 Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.

"We do not as a rule allow ourselves to use our editorial columns to speak of any remedy we advertise, but we feel warranted in saying a word for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sarsaparilla has been known as a remedial agent for centuries and is recognized by all schools of practice as a valuable blood purifier. It is put up in forms of almost infinite variety, but Messrs. Hood & Co., (Lowell, Mass.) who are thoroughly reliable pharmacists, have hit upon a remedy of unusual value. Certainly they have vouchers of cures which we know to be most extraordinary."—Editors Lowell Weekly Journal.

Lesson 6:

The Day of Atonement.

LEVITICUS 16: 16—30.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"We also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement."—Rom 5: 11

Central Truth:—By his one sacrifice on the cross Christ has obtained eternal redemption for us.

In the round of the Jewish year the great day was the "Day of Atonement." The Feast of Tabernacles, the grand harvest festival, closed the festive circle, and—since rightly to rejoice in the gifts of God one must be at peace with him—the Day of Atonement immediately preceded that joyous feast. But there were special things which made it the greatest day in the year. The truths it taught and the lessons it brought home were of the very highest importance. It kept alive and impressed the supreme facts of the holiness of God, the evil of sin, man's need of atonement and pardon, and the completeness of the pardon offered. These things were more than hinted at in the other sacrifices; and in some of them were unmistakably taught. But in the rites of this day they were expressed with peculiar distinctness and force.

The day was one of "holy convocation," or solemn meeting. On it no work was to be done "from even unto even." From the command that every Israelite should "afflict his soul" it has been inferred that it was kept as a fast. On this day the sacred rites were all performed by the high priests alone, and there was something significant in the fact that he laid aside his usual splendid robes, embroidered with threads of god, for a garment simple white, thus impressively symbolizing the perfect purity with which one must enter the immediate presence of God.

The day began and ended with the usual morning and evening sacrifice, at which the high priest wore his ordinary dress. The morning sacrifice being ended, the high priest bathed his entire person, and put on his garments of white. First, with a bullock procured at his own cost, he made a sin-offering for himself and his associates in the priesthood. The bullock having been slain, its blood was left standing in a basin, while the high priest, with a censer of live coals from off the altar in one hand and handfuls of incense in a golden vessel in the other, proceeded to the Holy of Holies. Lifting the veil, he cast the incense on the coals, and at once the place was filled with fragrant clouds of smoke. Returning, he took the basin of blood, and again entering the most holy place, sprinkled first the mercy seat, and then before the mercy seat on the ground. This was his atonement for himself and the priests, and for the more sacred parts of the tabernacle in their relation to the priesthood.

Next followed the atonement for the people. This was a complex rite for which two goats were already in waiting. One of these was slain, and its blood was sprinkled, as was that of the bullock, on and before the mercy seat in the most holy place. This was the atonement for the people and for the tabernacle in its connection with them.

The next thing was the cleansing, with the mingled blood of the bullock and the goat, of the altar of incense in the holy place, and of the altar of burnt-offering in the fore-court.

The atonement was now complete, with the exception of a single rite, which was however most expressive and important. It was the part for which the other goat was in waiting. Laying his hands upon its head, the high priest made confession of all the sins of all the people, thus symbolically putting them upon the goat, which was then sent away to Azazel, supposed by some to be "the most desolate wild" of the wilderness. This was not a ceremonial by itself, but a completion of the atonement already made. The two goats were in effect one victim; the two being made use of to express a complex idea which could not be conveyed by one. Together they expressed the truth that sin, when cleansed by is not simply covered, but borne far away. It was the fulfilment of beforehand of the promise: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

The parts of the bullock and of the first goat, not destined for the altar, were now "burned without the camp;" and thus the ceremonies peculiar to the day were completed.

The great things signified by all this are too plain to be mistaken. God is holy, and man is a sinner. Save as his sin is covered, or atonement is made for it, he cannot enjoy the blessings of the divine favor. Nor is it enough to find an offering for special errors and transgressions. As a sinner in all that he is and does, he needs atonement pardon. To his ancient people God set this home by the special sin-offerings of this great Day of Atonement; assuring them, by means of these symbols, of pardon not less less complete than if he had "cast all their sins into the depths of the sea." And yet all these were symbols only. The real efficacy was not in them; it was in that greater sacrifice which they prefigured, in that one costly and precious offering made in due time on the cross. It is, and ever was, the offering of the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," that truly effects atonement and procures pardon. Of that offering the ancient Jew saw but the shadow; it is our greater joy to have seen the substance.

But there is one other special point not to be overlooked. It was "a statute forever," a solemn ordinance, that on this day every Israelite should "afflict his soul." This does not merely mean that he should fast. It is not all certain that in these words there is any allusion to fasting. It specially points to a humiliation of soul under the memory of sin; to that godly sorrow with which sin should ever be remembered. The plain and important teaching of this was, that needful as atonement is, and free as is the pardon offered through it, there is yet one indispensable condition of its benefits. Not only is it to be regarded with faith, there must also be true repentance. Rather, sincere faith is repentance, or has it for one of its elements. The faith which offered or appropriated the atonement was a humble faith. So must ours be if we would so rest in the one sacrifice of Christ as to be sharers in his eternal redemption.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. Sin is base and defiling. Not only priests and people, but the sanctuary and altar with which they had to do, had need of cleansing.

2. The very best men need an atonement, just as the high priest had first of all to make an offering for himself. This is to some a hard saying. Nevertheless it is a primary truth, of both the Old and the New Testaments, that as none is too bad to be accepted through Christ, so none is so good as to be ever saved without him; "for all have sinned."

3. We see how compassionate God is. So holy is he that he cannot save the least sinner without an expiation, and yet he has made ample provision for the greatest.

4. The Old Testament sacrifices were but shadows. In Christ we have the substance. All pointed to him—"the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

5. The live goat sent far into the wilderness, bearing the iniquities of the people, is a striking symbol of the completeness of salvation through Christ. In his fulfilled promise: "I will remember their sin no more."

6. The high priest carried the blood of atonement to the very mercy seat; so Christ has passed into the heavens, bearing thither the merit of his own blood, and ever liveth there as our intercessor.

7. The sinner who comes truly to Christ comes with godly sorrow for his sin. He needs no stern command to afflict his soul. His desire to be freed from all sin is a part of his faith in the atoning Saviour.

8. The sacrifice on the cross availed not only for all the past, but for all time to come. Our Saviour's next appearance will be not only "glorious," but "unto salvation."

Another Youthful Train Robber.

Night in Arkansas.

It was night in several other States as well, but Arkansas is the one with which we have to deal at this writing.

It being our turn to deal.

A lightning express train was booming along at the rate of sixty miles an hour. Every car was full, many standing in the aisles with that meekness and patience only seen on an American railroad, to accommodate the fellow who wants four seats all to himself.

The lamps blazed fitfully over the passengers' dusters, which seemed to fit fully as well as traveling dusters usually do.

The conductor had passed through (which was more than he would allow any one else to do without the requisite pass;) punching people into wakefulness in order that he might punch their tickets.

The train boy had filled the passengers' laps with books, to keep them from bouncing in their seats while going over rough places.

A brakeman had put his head in and shouted, "The next stopping place is——" the name of station being lost in the slamming of the car door.

The boy who is always dry had made his fifty-second pilgrimage to the water tank.

And the woman who wants air had just torn off her last remaining finger nail in trying to get her window up.

This was on a railroad in the State of Arkansas.

"Now, gentlemen, your money—"

There is a hasty thrusting of watches and pocket books beneath cushions and into boots.

Women unfasten their jewelry and slip it into secret plnces where no robber who is anything of a gentleman would think of exploring.

"Gentlemen," again cries the boyish voice, ringing high and clear above the screams of women and the din of the train, (gasps for mercy from some of the men), "let me sell you some of this excellent tropical fruit," and he extends in his dexter hand—a banana.

Red Lips and Rosy Cheeks.

WHEELING, W. VA., May 30, 1881.

I am an old physician, and have lost many of my youthful prejudices. Learning of the great good done by a certain remedy in restoring to robust health a former patient of mine who suffered severelly from several chronic ailments resulting from weak pulmonary, digestive and urinary organs, and whom I was unable to benefit with my most careful treatment, I determined to prescribe it. I have done so, and the results have invariably been most satisfactory. Under its use the blood becomes richer, the digestive, urinary and pulmonary organs are made strong and perform their natural functions readily and without pain; all decay seems to be immediately checked and the progress of the disease arrested; the pulse becomes fuller and stronger, the lips red and the cheeks rosy, the temperature increased and more uniform, the action of the heart regular, and the muscular strength greatly invigorated. In justice to the inventors, I will say this remedy is Brown's Iron Bitters; it is a preparation of Iron and vegetable tonics; contains no alcohol, and is the only preparation of Iron in a perfectly assimilable form and that does not blacken the teeth. I have never known it to fail to give permanent strength to every part of the body, or to injure the most delicate constitution. I have known it to assist in curing many chronic diseases when all other remedies had failed.—M. D.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

THE DOCTOR'S STORY.

BY WILL M. CARLETON.

Deacon Rogers, he came to me;
"Wife is agoin' to die," said he.

Doctors great, an' doctors small,
Haven't improved her any at all.

"Physic and blister, powders and pills,
And nothing sure but the doctor's bills!

"Twenty women with remedies new,
Bother my wife the whole day through.

"Sweet as honey, or bitter as gall—
Poor old woman, she takes them all.

"Sour or sweet, whatever they choose;
Poor old woman, she daren't refuse.

"So she pleases who'er may call,
An' Death is suited the best of all.

"Physic and blister, powder and pill—
Bound to conquor, and sure to kill."

Mrs. Rogers lay in her bed
Bandaged and blist'd from foot to head.

Blistered and bandaged from head to toe
Mrs. Rogers was very low.

Bottle and saucer, spoon and cup,
On the table stood bravely up;

Physics of high and low degree;
Calomel, catnip, boneset tea.

Every thing a body could bear,
Excepting light and water and air.

I opened the blinds: the day was bright,
And God gave Mrs. Rogers some light.

I opened the window: the day was fair,
And God gave Mrs. Rogers some air.

Bottle and blister, powder and pill,
Catnip, boneset, syrup and squills;

Drugs and medicines, high and low,
I threw them as far as I could throw—

"What are you doing?" my patient cried
"Frightening Death," I coolly replied.

"You are crazy," a visitor said;
I flung a bottle at his head.

Deacon Rogers, he came to me:
"Wife is a-gettin' her health," said he.

"I really think she will worry through;
She scolds me just as she used to do.

"All the people have poohed an' slurr'd
All the neighbors have had their word.

"Twere better to perish," some of 'em say,
Than to be cured in such an irregular way."

"Your wife," said I had God's good care
And His remedies, light, water and air.

"All the doctors, beyond a doubt, Couldn't have cured Mrs. Rogers without."

The Dea. smiled and bowed his head;
"Then your bill is nothing," he said.

"God's be the glory, as you say,
God bless you, doctor, good-day, good-day."

If ever I doctor that woman again,
I'll give her medicine made by men.

TWO SECRETS.

"You don't mean it, Hetty?"

Loyd Sutton, a good-looking, manly young fellow, leaning on the half-open field gate, looked earnestly in the face of the young girl on the opposite side of the fence.

She shrank from meeting his eye as she answered:

"I am not accustomed to saying what I don't mean."

He made no answer. Hetty scratched industriously with a bit of wild-rose stem upon the trunk of the beech tree which overshadowed them. Suddenly she discovered that she was unconsciously tracing over the initials "L. S." and "H. W."—the latter her own—cut in the beech bark. She hastily withdrew her hand and threw away the rose stem.

"Do you remember what you said to me, Hetty, the day I cut those letters?" asked the young man.

"You told me you loved me," he said, in a low voice.

"Perhaps I thought so, then," she said, intently examining the blossoms.

"And only discovered your mistake when this rich popinjay from the city made his appearance," said Loyd, bitterly.

She looked up with a flash of her black eyes. She new very well that she was doing something unworthy of her, and lowering herself in Loyd's opinion, as well as causing him pain, and his reproach stung her.

"I have a right to like or dislike whom I please," she said haughtily.

He seized an unlucky grasshopper which at that moment lighted near his hand and savagely crushed it to death. Hetty looked at him in surprise. It was so unlike Loyd to deliberately hurt anything.

"You are cruel!" she said, indignantly.

"Not half so cruel as you. Hetty, I had no idea you were so heartless and mercenary."

The word escaped him unawares. Hetty, flushed hotly.

"If that is your opinion of me, you ought to be glad to have found me out in time," she said.

"Perhaps I ought," he retorted, very bitterly.

"Then I hope you will be satisfied—as I am!"

She gathered up the skirt of her blue lawn dress and turned away. Loyd passed through the gate and walked by her side along the grassy meadow-path.

"I didn't mean to offend you, Hetty," he said, in a more subdued tone.

"I am not offended. I don't in the least care for your opinion of me," replied Hetty, biting her lip and turning away her face that he might not see the tears that were in her eyes.

They had reached a point where the pathway branched right and left, and coming along the latter was a portly, fashionably-dressed, middle-aged man, twirling a cane, with which he was decapitating the tall weeds and field daisies. On catching sight of Hetty he quickened his pace.

"Mr. Frisbee will see me home. I won't trouble you further, Mr. Sutton," said Hetty, with an air of great dignity, as she took a step to the left.

Now, this left-hand track was the most direct and frequented way to Hetty's home; but the right hand pathway, leading along the little stream and alder hedge, had ever been the favorite with herself and Loyd.

The young man paused now, and standing just where the two diverged, said, in a low tone, agitated, yet full of decision:

"Hetty, decide now, once for all! Will you keep on with me down this path, or will you go with Mr. Frisbee on the other? Choose!"

She hesitated, and her color went and came.

"You have no right to speak to me so."

"I have a right," he replied, firmly—"the right to know whether the girl I love is false or true."

"Go your own way, and I will go mine!" she said, proudly.

And without another word she turned down the pathway by which Mr. Frisbee was approaching.

Loyd, as he reached the gate, turned back to look at the two figures slowly sauntering along the green meadow.

"I could never have dreamed it of her," he thought. "I believed she loved me. And to cast me off for a fellow like that, whose greatest recommendation is his wealth! Oh, Hetty, that I should have been so mistaken in you!"

And Mr. Frisbee, as he walked by Hetty's side, admiring her girlish beauty and her pretty, coquettish ways, and thinking how he would "show off" his young wife among his friend—did the thought never occur to him, as to Loyd, that this girl, young enough to be his daughter, could not possibly find in him any attraction save his wealth?

But poor Hetty, since her father died bankrupt, had experienced enough of poverty's ills, and heard enough from her mother and sisters to learn to look upon riches as the key that could open to her the golden store of life's pleasures.

Loyd could give her comfort and competence, but as Mrs. Frisbee she could have an elegant city residence, carriage and servants, balls in winter and watering-places in summer, with everything else that she might desire.

Not that she was light and frivolous, or longed for more worldly pleasures; but for the time being the picture had dazzled her, and in her present angry and resentful mood against Loyd, what wonder that she listened to all that Mr. Frisbee had to say, and before she reached home had accepted the rich widower's proposal?

And yet somehow Hetty felt in her own heart that this was the most miserable evening she had ever spent.

As the days went by Hetty grew no happier in the contemplation of her brilliant prospects. She turned with a species of loathing from the man she had promised to wed, and her heart went out more and more to the lover whom she had discarded.

They sometimes met, but he was distant and proud, and it was not for her to make advances. So she decided to let her engagement become publicly known, and one day went over to Mrs. Sutton's and asked Sue Sutton, Boyd's cousin, to be her bridemaid.

"You ought hardly to expect it of me, Hetty," Sue said, with some spirit. "I think you have treated Loyd badly."

"How so?"

"Because I know he loved you, and I used to think you loved him. You certainly did behave in a manner to encourage him."

"Perhaps we were mistaken in fancying that we loved each other."

"If you were mistaken, Loyd wasn't. I have never seen a person so changed and unhappy," said Sue, with tears in her eyes.

"He didn't appear to be unhappy last evening, flirting with Josephine Willis."

"Oh, that was merely put on! She flirted with him and he humored her, as a blind. I know Loyd—how proud he is, and that he would never allow any one to suspect how he suffers. But when we all came home from the party—where he heard from Mrs. Carter that you were really engaged to that Mr. Frisbee—oh, Hetty, he looked so wretchedly, and we heard him walking up and down his room for hours, and tossing about on his bed! I'm certain he couldn't have slept a wink all night."

"Where is he now?" asked Hetty, a little tremulous.

"I don't know. He went out before breakfast, and I haven't seen him since. I believe his heart is broken, and that he will pine away and die, or perhaps take his own life," said Sue, with tears in her eyes. "And he had been looking at your portrait, Hetty, for I found it on his table, propped up against a book."

"My portrait? Why, he sent it back to me."

"Did he. Then this must be a copy. Wait a moment, and I will get it for you to see."

She was hardly out of the room, when Hetty heard a well-known step in the hall, and the next moment Loyd himself entered. Instinctively she had drawn back, and the great book-case screened her from his view. He did not, however, look around, but throwing himself in a chair, leaned back with closed eyes, and seeing him thus she was struck with the change in his appearance. His face was pale and bore unmistakable traces of suffering, repressed by the strong will which she knew he possessed. But now, alone as he thought himself, the strain seemed relaxed. He bowed his face in his hands and groaned.

Hetty's heart beat fast and the tears rushed into her eyes. Oh, if he would but bend from that stubborn pride, she would give up Mr. Frisbee, wealth, everything in the world, for his sake! But for her to make advances—never!

Loyd rose from his seat, and walked across the room to the book-case. Hetty shrank more closely into her corner, and the high-backed arm-chair hid her. She heard him rummaging about behind the books on the shelves, and then she saw his arm extended to the light, holding up two glass vials. So near was she that she distinctly read the labels, one of which was "Laudanum." This he thrust into his breast-pocket and seizing his hat, turned to leave the room. But at the door he paused, went back to the table, and scratching a few hurried lines on a sheet of paper, left it lying open and went out.

Hetty, almost as pale as her lover, instantly sprang up, and seizing the paper glanced over it, murmuring brokenly as she read:

"DEAR MOTHER: Can no longer bear—agony—seek relief—home—tell Johnny—take good care of you—go before you—meet you in—"

Hetty was trembling all over; but now a great light, as if a sudden resgive dawned upon her pale face, and without a pause she rushed from the room, crossed the lawn, and with light, swift steps followed the retreating figure down the road. She overtook him just as he turned the clump of cedars near the stables. Was it there that he designed to commit the terrible deed?

Loyd turned on hearing her breathlessly call his name. He looked a good deal surprised at seeing her—no longer pale, but flushed and with disordered curls hanging about her forehead.

"Oh, Loyd, don't do it! For my sake, don't!"

"Hetty, what ails you? Don't do what?"

"You know; you didn't see me, but I was in the room when you took the—the poison—the laudanum. Oh, Loyd, don't kill yourself—don't!"

"Why should I not? You do not care," he said, gloomily.

"Indeed, indeed I do!" she sobbed. "Oh, Loyd, I could not bear it; it would kill me!"

Her pleading, tearful eyes were upturned to his. He looked down into her face for a moment, then took both her hands in his.

"Hetty, you are going to be another man's wife."

"Never, Loyd—never! I was wrong—forgive me!"

"You don't mean to say, Hetty"—his face lighting all over as with a flush of new life—"you don't mean to say that you do really love me?"

"Yes, I do. I always did love you, Loyd. I wouldn't have told you but for this—but for that horrible poison. Give it to me, Loyd, that I may feel you are safe."

He answered by taking her in his arms. There was no one near to see them. And then he gave the deadly vial into her hands, and she flung it as far as she could into the neighboring pond.

"Life is worth living for now, Hetty," he said, as with her arm in his, and her hand clasped in his own, they walked toward her home. "But you will never know what pain I have suffered."

Most people said that Hetty had done right in choosing Loyd Sutton, after all; and Mr. Frisbee indignantly went back to the city and consoled himself by selecting as his wife some other young and pretty woman. His marriage took place about the same time with Hetty's.

Some three years after this, Mr. Loyd Sutton, a comfortable and happy-looking pater familias, said to his pretty wife:

"I believe that any man can keep a secret from his wife; but no woman can keep one from her husband."

"Don't you, indeed, dear? Now I think just the contrary."

He lauged knowingly.

"Perhaps I can convince you. I've had a secret from you, Hetty, ever since we were married."

"Indeed! Won't you tell it to me, Loyd?"

"Why, yes, as I don't see any reason in keeping it longer to myself. I wouldn't tell you at first, for fear you should feel mortified in knowing it. Do you remember when you pleaded with me so earnestly not to take my life? Well, the truth is, I hadn't the least idea of swallowing that laudanum. I merely intended to use it as a remedy for the pain I was suffering from a terrible toothache."

"Yes," said Mrs. Loyd Sutton, demurely, but with an arch glance of her black eyes, "I knew that all the while, dear. You see, I read the note you left on the table, telling your mother that the pain was such that you could not wait till tomorrow to take her to town—must go at once, to see a dentist, and that Johnny would bring her, and you would meet her there. Then I knew wha the laudanum was for."

Mr. Loyd Sutton opened his eyes very wide, and gave a low whistle.

"You see, love," resumed his wife, stealing her arm around his neck, "I had no other way of letting you know how I loved you and regretted my folly. It saved us both from being very miserable. "But—with the same arch look—"don't you think now that a woman can keep a secret from her husband as well as can a husband from his wife?"

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

MR. HAYDEN ELECTED.

On last Tuesday E. D. Hayden, Esq., was elected the third successive time for Representative from this town to the General Court. This is all the more honorable to him from the fact that Woburn has a Democratic majority of from one to two hundred. Last Tuesday it was one hundred and sixteen on a very light vote.

The reasons for this remarkable success have been given more than once in these columns, and need not be repeated. Of course his election is not claimed as a Republican victory, but rather as a triumph of personal merit—integrity of character, education, business ability, gentlemanliness, and all those traits, natural and acquired, that go to make up the full man and respected citizen. Mr. Hayden is very popular with those classes whose opinions are the most valuable. Then, the interests of the town demanded his return to the General Court, and this popular conviction gave him a large number of Democratic votes.

Mr. Hayden's signal success in a Democratic precinct entitles him to the Senatorial nomination next year.

☞ We have received from the publishers, J. R. Osgood & Co., Boston, "The American Newspaper," the same being an essay read by Charles Dudley Warner before the Social Science Association at Saratoga, last September, printed in a neat little book. Newspaper men will find it very interesting reading, and while publishers of a money-making and practical turn of mind will probably dissent from some of Mr. Warner's views, they will find it, in general, a valuable little work. Mr. Warner's model journal would be a nice thing to have in the family, no doubt; but it is a question whether it would make so much money for its owners as some that are now published.

☞ The Citizens' meeting held in Lyceum Hall last Saturday evening was not a large one numerically considered, but in character the audience was a good one. It was composed of the leading business men and property owners of the town, who exhibited a commendable interest in the objects of the meeting. Good, sound speeches were made by Hon. A. B. Coffin of Winchester, and Hon. Thomas Winship of Wakefield on the drainage question. No allusion was made to the election of Mr. Hayden, except by Mr. Winship, who merely said that, if Woburn had no better man for the place, she should re-elect Mr. Hayden.

☞ At the Prohibitory convention held at Stoneham last week Mr. Amos Cummings of Woburn was nominated to the office of Councillor for the Sixth Councillor District; Benjamin F. Briggs of Stoneham, for Clerk, and Ammi Cutter of Stoneham, for County Commissioner. The nominations were good ones, but of course were not elected. Mr. Cummings is very active in the cause of temperance, and occupied important positions during the campaign just closed.

☞ Prospectuses of THE CENTURY, and ST. NICHOLAS are published in this paper, to which the attention of those who would subscribe for "the best" is particularly directed. THE CENTURY is Scribner's continued, with an addition to the size of some fourteen pages; and to ST. NICHOLAS may properly be applied the saying, "good wine needs no bush."

☞ The Republicans of the First Senatorial District permitted the defeat of Henry Cabot Lodge last Thursday and the election of a Democrat, which was not very creditable to them. It looks as though he was slaughtered in the house of his political friends, and it wouldn't be a very hard thing to pick out the men who did the job.

☞ The Musical Herald for November contains a large amount of interesting matter, and is, on the whole, one of the best numbers published. There are four new pieces of music in it, besides a summary of all the latest musical intelligence, domestic and foreign.

THE ELECTION IN WOBURN.

A very light vote was polled in this town last Tuesday, and but little interest was taken in the election, except for Representative to the General Court. It was a nasty day, with copious showers at brief intervals, which had a tendency to keep many voters at home who otherwise would have attended at the polls. The contest over the Representative was sharp and good work was put in by both sides. In the fore part of the day it looked as though Mr. Maguire would win the race; but the Republicans rallied in the afternoon, and Mr. Hayden won by a neck. Of course his election was secured by Democratic votes. The Democratic majority on Governor was 116, but Mr. Hayden's personal popularity, his clean record as a Representative, and the general convictions that the interests of the town demanded his re-election, gave him an advantage which his opponent, though a good and popular man, could not overcome. The election passed off very quietly indeed, and everything was conducted in orderly manner. The following is the vote of the town:

STATE ELECTIONS.

Several States held full elections last Tuesday, and in others Legislature and State officers were chosen. Taken together the results of them were considerably mixed and at variance with the predictions of one side and the other; but considering it is an off year, and that there was a general lack of interest, except perhaps in New York and Virginia, they did not surprise anybody very much.

Massachusetts polled the lightest vote for some years, the effect of which was about equally divided between the two parties. Gov. Long's majority is in the neighborhood of 35,000, which is large enough for all practical purposes. He is one of the most popular Governors Massachusetts ever had.

New York is still in some doubt, though it seems to be certain that the Republicans elected a part of their ticket, and the Democrats perhaps have the Assembly. The Readjusters carried Virginia, and Mahone is happy. The Republicans carried Wisconsin by a large majority, and also Minnesota. The returns from other States are mixed.

LOCAL NEWS.

— Charles K. Conn has sold land on north side of Scott street to Addie A. White for $300.

— Woburn showed her good sense last Tuesday, by rolling up a big majority against the constitutional amendment. It is a piece of clap-trap.

— The Reading Room of the Y. M. C. A. is well patronized, and by just the class that it is desirable should be there. It is a good institution.

— The Phalanx supper to the Fine Members comes off this evening at Central House Hall. The boys have a complete layout for a big time.

— Mr. E. E. Tiffany, who had charge of Cranston's Hotel at West Point, last Summer, was visiting friends here last week.

— The new Blake pump at the Water Works is giving perfect satisfaction. Several competent gentlemen have been down and examined its work, and they all pronounce it a complete success.

— Mr. Oliver M. Wade has been appointed engineer of the Water Works by the Water Board, in place of Mr. George E. Parkhurst, resigned. He is said to be a very capable engineer, and that the appointment is a good one.

— We could name a large number of Republicans who are entitled to great praise for their earnest and successful work in behalf of the election of Mr. Hayden last Tuesday. All did nobly, but there were some to whom too much credit cannot be given.

— The L. W. Perham Hose Company give their annual assembly this evening, with a prospect for a large attendance. The assemblies given by this company are always first rate, and preparations have been made to render this one to-night equal to any of its predecessors.

— A large delegation of the people of the Centre should attend the Boston Parlor Concert at North Woburn, next Thursday evening, for it will be something richly worth going to. The ladies of the Unitarian Society have laid out a very fine course of entertainments for the same.

— Two delegates from each of the classes of '81, '82, '83, and '84, W. H. S., surprised their former teacher, Mrs. Chas. D. Adams, and presented her with an elegant silver water service, on Friday evening last. The presentation speech was made by Miss Dora Brown. The evening was passed in a very enjoyable manner.

— The hearing on the case of the State Board of Health on petition of the Boston Water Board against Stephen A. Dow & Co. was postponed last Saturday to November 19, on account of the illness of Gov. Gaston, who is senior counsel for the Dows. The complaint is for discharging sewerage into the Mystic Valley, to prove which the Boston Water Board will find it very hard work.

— Mr. Harry Leach is turning out some beautiful carved work just now, and is busy on new designs. An owl perched on one of our mantel-trees we regard as near life-like as it is possible to make wood look with a chisel, and a buffalo's head, on which Mr. Leach is at work, if seen in the bunchgrass would make an Indian draw his bow. A large part of Mr. Leach's work is sold by Boston dealers, and fetches good prices.

— The railroad flutter has subsided about as suddenly as it arose.

— Our schools closed yesterday and today to enable the teachers to attend the Teacher's Institute at Winchester.

— Some of the days of this week have been as hot and uncomfortable as summer. It cleared off beautifully yesterday.

— Registra Thompson still battles with the rheumatism, but is a good deal better, and able to attend to the duties of his office.

— The grand ball of Qualey Court takes place this evening, and the prospect for a large attendance is good. It will no doubt be a very fine affair.

— Mutilated coins are being refused at our places of business. Self-preservation being the first law of nature, if you have any of them it becomes your duty to pass them off on parties not knowing the above fact.

— Particular attention is called to the change in the advertisement of Mr. Burgess in this paper. He is giving some rare bargains in seasonable goods, and invites the people of Woburn and surrounding towns to come and examine them, and see for themselves whether he tells the truth or not. Mr. Burgess has taken great pains to purchase goods suited to the wants of his customers, and the result is he has a very fine stock of everything kept in a first-class establishment. And he will not be undersold by anybody.

— The wedding of Mr. Wilbur E. Cummings, son of Mr. Eustace Cummings, and Miss L. Katherine Smith, daughter of Mr. Charles A. Smith, last Wednesday evening, was a brilliant society affair. Dr. March tied the hymenial knot in his usual pleasant way. There was a large company present, to whom the occasion was a very enjoyable one indeed. The presents were numerous, rich and appropriate. They were the offerings of a large number of wealthy relatives of the parties, and from their many warm friends outside the family. We congratulate the happy pair, and bespeak for them a long, prosperous and happy life.

— A very readable letter from Mr. Warren Teel, Assistant Postmaster at Davenport, Iowa, acquaints us with the fact that he is a native of Woburn, having been born near the old John Cummings place. The first school he attended was kept "near the old burying ground south side of Meetinghouse Hill," and though 45 years has elapsed since the morning his sister first took him to the school and turned him over to the teacher, he says: "I can see the school room today just as she appeared then. She was to my young eyes a perfect Queen in beauty, tall and straight as an arrow. I have not seen her for more than forty years, but if she is living she must be a nice looking elderly lady. Her name was Miss Susan Edgell." We doubt not Miss Edgell, who, to all appearance, is in the prime of life, and resides at 294 Main street, will be pleased to hear from one of her old time pupils.

— On Friday evening, December 9, the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx will give a grand masquerade in Lyceum Hall, for which ample preparations are already underway. Edmund's Band of Boston, of six or seven pieces will furnish the music for the occasion, which which will be of the very best quality. This is expected to be the social event of the season, for the Phalanx never fail in an undertaking of the kind. The tickets have been placed at the low price of one dollar for a gentleman and two ladies, the selling of which will be by the Ball Committee exclusively, who will have books in which the names of purchasers must be entered. This Committee consists of Captain Converse, Lieuts. Halliday and Simonds, Corporal Dorkham, and Privates Ellison and McCarthy. A costumer will attend at Armory Hall to supply all demands for costumes. We opine that this masquerade will be very generally attended by the fashionable people of Woburn.

— Last Lord's Day morning Rev. Edward Mills, pastor of the First Baptist Church in this village, read a letter of resignation, which to a large share of his congregation was a genuine surprise. He will preach his farewell sermon on the last Sabbath in this month, and on the first of December will enter his new field of work at Eastport, Me., from the large and thrifty Baptist Church of which place he has accepted a unanimous and very urgent call. Mr. Mills's pastorate here has extended over a period of nearly seven years, during which the church has enjoyed uninterrupted prosperity, both spiritual and temporal, and between which and the pastor the most cordial relations have existed. Mr. Mills is an able preacher and successful pastor, being endowed with a good share of practical sense, a heart located in the right place, and more than the common amount of energy. He is learned, cultivated and pious, and the church at Eastport are to be congratulated on securing so able a man to minister to them in spiritual matters. Mr. Mills will take with him from Woburn the best wishes of his church and the world's people, for he is esteemed not only by his own flock, but is highly respected by our citizens generally. May he and his family prosper in basket and store.

— Nothing of a very exciting character has occurred at the Police Court this week, and yet there has been a fair run of business. Here is the heft of the proceedings: Thomas Kelley, for assault and battery on his wife last April, was arrested by officer McHugh, and given 90 days in the House of Correction; Matthew Kennedy for larceny of a watch from Martin McDonough in June last, was arrested by officer Boyle on Saturday night. In both of the above cases the men ran away, on landing in town they were roped in. John Dever and another lad went to Burlington on a racket one day last week, which resulted in John's paying $10 and costs for assault and battery on a gentleman from that town. Ann Killalee of Montvale, didn't like a neighbor, so she fired her out of a tenement which Ann owned, for which indescretion Ann paid $3 and costs, Mr. Maguire appeared for Mrs. Killalee. James Bradley has been a confirmed drunkard for years; likewise Daniel O'Driscoll, both 6 months in House of Correction. Two young gents named Bishop and McCall, had a fight on Walnut street, while McCall was letting go his right, officer Boyle let go his left, and the pair went to the lockup.

— Mr. Ridgely from Rochedale, England, is visiting Rev. Mr. Mills. We received a call from him yesterday.

— By enquiring at Hill's drug store parties may learn of a nice unfurnished front chamber with bedroom to let.

— Gov. Long has designated Thursday, November 24, as a day of Thanksgiving and praise for mercies received during the year, and the President has followed suit. We would print the proclamations only they are all so much alike and are generally such dry reading that we choose rather to omit them, always advising a due and proper observance of the Day.

—The vocal and instrumental concert to be given in Unitarian Church next Wednesday evening promises to be the best we have had for some time. The list of artists who will take part in it is a full guaranty of the high character of the entertainment, and there will be no disappointment for those who are present. Mr. Lucy has spared no pains or expense to secure the best talent in Boston to please and entertain our people, and his efforts should be rewarded by a full house, as we have no doubt it will be. The press speak in the highest terms of each of the artists on Mr. Lucy's bills, and they all enjoy wide reputations as musical people. The Chicago Times says:

Miss JULIET FENDERSON possesses a remarkably sweet and powerful voice, pure and rich as the notes of a silver bell, and was heard to good advantage (in so large a building as the Tabernacle) in the grand aria from "I Lombardi," which secured her an ovation of applause. As an encore she sweetly sang Abt's "Embarrassment."

Mons. DE SEVE's solos were played in a masterly manner, that denoted the thorough artist. The breadth of tone obtained from a firm and admirably managed bow, was at once remarkably fine in effect and delicately sympathetic. He was loudly applauded, and responded to the encores.—The Herald of Montreal.

The piano solos by Mr. ROSCOE W. LUCY were admirably adapted to display the taste and skill in rendition which this gentleman's careful study and appreciative subservience to classical requirements made unusually attractive.—Newton Transcript.

Miss Blake has a rich and musical contralto voice, and is a great favorite. Of Mr. Dennison, Mr. Fabian, Arnold, and others we spoke last week, and have only to add that they are artists of first-class merit and reputations. Tickets are on sale at Mr. Dodge's jewelry store, and we advise people to go there and secure good seats at once.

Mr. Martin A. Connolly, a merchant in Oil City, Pa., writes: "I inherited ill health from my parents, who were both short-lived. My wife is a sickly little woman, and has suffered considerably. We have had five children, three of whom died in infancy; the other two, a boy 4 years of age and a girl of 7 years, have always been quite puny, weak, and sickly. Some time ago I read a medical work that spoke of iron as being essential to life, that a want of iron in the blood was the principal cause of ill health. Shortly afterward I saw an advertisement of Brown's Iron Bitters. I determined to try it for myself and family. The result has far exceeded my greatest anticipations. Myself, wife and children have all grown healthy and strong. Sores, aches and pains, headaches, indigestion and sleeplessness, formerly so common in my family, trouble us no more. Every bottle is worth its weight in gold.

NORTH WOBURN.

The ladies of the Unitarian Church in this village have made out a programme for their Chapel Course of entertainments this season which is very attractive and will doubtless draw full houses. As may be seen by reference to their card in this paper, the course is composed of literary, dramatic and musical entertainments, the initial number to be given on Thursday evening, the 17th instant, tickets for which may be obtained for The Centre, at the store of E. A. Thompson. This is to be a Boston Parlor Concert, and it is perfectly safe to say that it will be a grand good thing and worthy of the most liberal patronage from our people. Those who love music will enjoy it, for the concert is bound to be a genuine musical treat. Secure tickets early.

One moment please.

When winter is passing into summer and summer into winter again, your health should be especially looked to. The humors which have accumulated in the blood other sickness peculiar to change of season. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will do this for you. Get a bottle now and begin using it at once. A long fit of sickness and a long doctor's bill may be the penalty of neglect. If your druggist hasn't it write to the doctor at Rondout, New York. Price $1.00.

A SACRILEGE.

To the Editor of the Journal:

In driving past the Trinity Church on All Saints Day, Nov. 1st. I was surprised and shocked to see upon the porch door of that sacred place a placard, purporting to be an advertisement of a cordwainer, and to the effect that taps and heels were applied within (I think I read "within") by so-and-so, the name I do not remember. I would like to ask, through the columns of the Journal, what such a "sign of the times" means? I am not aware that Trinity Church has been closed, nor can I believe that it has been transformed into a place of trade, or traffic. If I can be informed that such is the case, I should persue my inquiries in this quarter no further, but, in the meantime, I think all good citizens of your town, and all good Churchmen everywhere, would like to see my question answered. I know not how long the placard had been on the door, but, peradventure, long enough to attract attention, though not that of any well disposed, or order-loving, passer-by. I will not tresspass on your space further, save to express the opinion that such bold and witless outrage out to be looked into, and after, and its perpetrator punished to the full extent of the law—if, indeed—the law is not wholly a farce. It speaks ill for modern civilization where such acts are possible, or suffered to pass unrebuked; and with all the means of enlightenment, in morals and manners, such as Woburn may be justly be thankful for, it does seem as if the places of divine worship, at least, should have an immunity from the least suggestion of lawlessness or sacrilege. Truly the age must be walking down "Queer Street," if any pulpit is obliged to have a cordon of police to protect it from vandalism!" ANGLICAN.

WINCHESTER.

The fire, on Monday evening, back of S. H. Davis's shoe store was extinguished without much damage being done.

Mr. Josiah Hovey received the documents a few days since which made him a Justice of the Peace, an office he used to hold with credit.

Visitors to the Mechanic's Fair, Boston, are struck with the beauty and artistic merits of the pictures of Mr. J. F. Cole, our Winchester artist.

Rev. C. C. Hussey will preach in the Unitarian church next Sabbath. The annual parish meeting of this society will be held next Thursday evening.

An election to fill the vacancy on the School Board will take place on Saturday, Nov. 12. There are several candidates, any one of which would make a good school officer.

The School Board has ordered that on and after next Monday the sessions of the winter term of the High School shall open at 8.30 a. m., and close at 1.15 p. m. Meservey's Book-keeping supersedes Mayhew's in the High School.

This (Friday) evening, Col. Thomas W. Higginson will deliver an address before the Teachers' Institute on "How to Study History." The session has been a successful one. Many teachers from neighboring towns have been present and participated in the proceedings.

The election passed off very quietly. Strange to say there were no Prohibitory or Greenback ballots cast here. The vote stood: Long 217; Thompson, 118. For Senator, Winship, 330; Walton, 7. For Representative, Ayer 191. On the amendment the vote was, "Yes," 149, "No," 53.

We are all expecting something very enjoyable from the preparations now under way by the members of the Baptist Young People's Society for a grand fair to be held in the near future. This Society is famous for the success of its entertainments, and no doubt the forthcoming one will excel all its predecessors.

Mrs. Charles Cowdrey's fine portrait of Admiral Thatcher will be presented to A. D. Weld, Post 148, G. A. R., on Monday evening, November 21, in Adelphian Hall. The committee having charge of the affair are Messrs. S. C. Small and Albert R. Rice. The families of Comrades and a few others will be invited. It is expected that the occasion will be a very pleasant one.

Quite a number of the members of the Chemical Engine Company work in Boston and found it very inconvenient to attend to the duties as such members, so the company has been allowed to die out, and a new one organized. The officers of the new one are, Foreman, F. Waldemeyer; Ass't Foreman, Benjamin Black; Secretary and Treasurer, Benjamin Smith. It is a strong company and will do good service.

Mr. Edmond Sanderson is one of Winchester's most enterprising merchants and a very successful one. His house was established thirty-six years ago, and is as popular now as at any period of its existence. Mr. Sanderson keeps a first class variety store in which may be found fresh family groceries, choice teas, coffees, spices, all kinds of country, dairy and other products, flour of the best brands, grain, meal, feed, etc., etc. He also keeps on hand and sells at the lowest prices hardware, fine cutlery, building materials, paints, farming tools, wooden ware crockery, glassware, etc. His well patronized store is at No. 1 Stone Block, Main St., where he will be happy to meet his friends and customers.

The Independent Associates are making preparations for a grand time on Thanksgiving evening. It will be tony and dead loads of fun in it. It is the occasion of their annual ball, which are always successful in all respects. The music will be furnished by the National Orchestra. Floor Director, T. F. Haley; aids, M. Sullivan, J. F. Butler, E. C. Sullivan, W. P. Haley, P. H. Holland, D. Canniff, J. F. Haley, J. Flynn. The committee of arrangements: T. H. Haley, E. C. Sullivan, J. F. Sullivan, J. F. Butler, J. Hennessy, M. Fitzgerald, M. J. Fitzgerald, J. Canniff, J. Sullivan, J. F. Haley, J. Mooney, P. H. Holland, M. Sullivan, J. Flynn, D. C. Canniff, P. W. Reardon, P. Fitzgerald, E. Heavey, J. F. Holland, R. Young.

Philip Phillips, of world-wide fame, with his son, will give an "Evening of Song," under the auspices of the Ladies' Social Circle, in the M. E. Church, on Friday evening, November 25, the admission to which will be thirty-five cents, reserved seats fifty cents. The entertainments given by Mr. Phillips, the elder, are in the highest degree delighttul and charming. He has been engaged during the last ten years in giving his "Evenings of Song" to people all over the civilized world, and a second visit by him is always more warmly welcomed than the first. Indeed, whoever hears him once wants to do so again. He has a sweet melodious voice, and his pieces are the very best. I have no doubt but that the church will be filled on the evening of the 25th.

A Town meeting was held at 3 p. m., of which John T. Wilson was chosen Moderator, and the following business was transacted: A committee, consisting of J. P. Ayer, S. W. Twombly and M. A. Herrick, was appointed to obtain an act of the Legislature to enable the towns of Malden, Medford, Winchester, Melrose and Stoneham to acquire the Middlesex Fells for a Park: the Selectmen were authorized to transfer $800 from unexpended appropriation for incidental expenses, and $200 from the appropriation for the support of the poor, to the highways and bridges: voted to lay out $250 in erecting street lamps wherever needed: the Water Board were authorized to petition the Legislature for an act to enable the town to issue bonds or notes not to exceed $100,000, in addition to the amount already authorized, for the purpose of supplying the town with water: the Moderator appointed the following committee to consider the subject of a new code of By-laws and report at the next March meeting: G. S. Littlefield, A. B. Coffin, A. K. P. Joy, S. C. Small, John T. Wilson.

Dr. D. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has been successfully used by thousands. It will build up a system which has been run down by overwork. It is the thing for the student and literary man to have at hand, and should be in the home of every mechanic. Favorite Remedy is economical, safe and pleasant. By it and try it; or, if you need advice as well, write to Dr. Kennedy, who is in active practice as a surgeon and physician at Rondout, N. Y. For sale by all druggists.

The most thoughtful man has been discovered in New Jersey. Just before he died he said to the undertaker, "When you put me on ice do not waste any on my feet. They have been frozen."

Don't get discouraged because the doctors say you cannot live. I was troubled with dropsy and given up to die. But after using Sulphur Bitters for three months, I am well. It is the best medicine for all Kidney diseases I ever saw.—Mrs. B——, Bridgeport.

The Springfield Union says it "may be pertinent for the people in this country who are called on for contributions for the cause to enquire just what the cause is and what is to be done with their money."

[Cleveland Leader.]

Mr. Orlando Weatherbee, says an exchange of ours, proprietor "The Spencer Pharmrcy," Spencer Mass., reports: My customers speak very highly of the Great German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, it having always given excellent satisfaction. One of them, Mr. Henry Belcher, has been greatly benefited by its use in a case of severe rheumatism, and he refers to it in terms of highest praise.

George H. Berthard, the lawyer who professed a desire to shoot Giteau in the Washington court room, figured in Omaha three three years ago as a drunkard and temperance lecturer.

A widow and daughter, belonging to one of the wealthiest families of Grand Rapids, were the brides in a double wedding.

Money is easy, very easy. It hasn't been easier for years, to spend. Perhaps it suits business people to have an easy money market, but those who live on fixed incomes say, "Give us a hard one."

They are Liable.

The doctors are all liable to be mistaken, they were in my case. It cost me $200, because they said I had heart disease, and then told me I must die. Grandmother said it was liver complaint, and $2 worth of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Jennie P——, Rockport.

If it were possible

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA for debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which every one feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that Hood's Sarsaparilla contains more real medicinal value than any article before the people.

What a Man Did with Kidney Complaint

DRACUT, MASS.
MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.:
Dear Sirs—I have suffered from kidney complaint and biliousness for fifteen years. Have tried everything and never got any good. Last January, before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, everything I ate bloated me all up, pain in my chest and arms, headache and dizzy. I could not get up without feeling weary and all fagged out. Many mornings I was obliged to lie down on the lounge. To do any work seemed almost impossible. Have taken two bottles. The backache, dizziness, pain in my chest and arms, and that feeling of intense weariness are all gone. I can eat anything and it does not press me at all. Feel just like work; in fact, like a new man. Can heartily recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and hope all who desire to know anything about it will come to me and ask what I think of it. Very truly yours,

IN MEDFORD; just the spot for any kind of manufactury, only 5 miles from State St., about an acre and half of land, one minute's walk from the depot in the square, fronting on High street, 136 ft., with a depth to Mystic River of 320 feet, and a river front of 500 feet, with a rise and fall of tide 10 or 12 feet. This estate was formerly used as a tan-yard and slaughter-house; the buildings used for that purpose yet remain on the premises. For the original business the easement and rights in law are quite valuable, with perfect drainage into tide-water, thus avoiding a nuisance. Will be sold at a bargain or rented for a term of years at a low figure. For particulars call at the office of J. FRENCH & SON, 226 Washington St., Boston. 44-4

Lesson 7:

Feast of Tabernacles.

LEVITICUS 23: 33—44.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits"—Psalm 103: 2.

Central Truth: — The mercies of God should make us grateful as well as glad.

It is a great mistake to think of the Old Testament religion as stern and sombre. It did have its side of restraint and self denial; and it is very well that it did, for thence sprung much that was best in the character of the people. But it also had its side of cheer and gladness. Each season, save winter, had its own great festival. In the spring came the Passover, in the summer Pentecost and in the autumn the Feast of Tabernacles. Each was a joyful feast, but the last was the most joyful of all.

The first thing which strikes us in the account of the Feast of Tabernacles is that it began and ended with a "holy convocation." A holy convocation was a religious meeting. The weekly Sabbath was a day for such a convocation; the primitive place of assembly being under the open sky or a wide spreading tree. As "holy convocations" the Jewish feasts were related to their Sabbath assemblies much as our Church assemblies, conventions and festivals are to our own. And it is worth observing how large a place in this particular feast was given to strictly religious worship. From other Scripture accounts we learn that its burnt-offerings, which were expressive of praise and self-consecration, were very numerous. Thus, not only did the feast have its religious side, but, in it, religion was primary and all-per and all pervading. There is, in this fact, something most interesting and instructive. In our own festivals and national holidays it is the religious element which gives them their chief value—which, indeed, prevents them from becoming a curse. We shall do well to keep this in mind. That there is so little of spiritual feeling and purpose in our Thanksgiving and Fast days, and Fourth of July, and even in some of our just now so popular camp-meetings, is no good sign. Anything is good which helps to spiritualize the people; anything is bad which tends to secularize religion.

Another thing to be noticed with relation to this feast is that it was a kind of annual thanksgiving for the year's bounty. Hence its other name, the "Feast of Ingatherings." It came at the end of the year, when the fruits had all been gathered in. The grain, the fruit, the olive and the grape had all been stored. It was a good time to give thanks and sing. Some of the most joyful of all the psalms were written to be sung at this festival. No doubt the keeping of such a festival tended to perpetuate the sense of dependence on God's bounty. As the people poured forth their praises in such words as those of the sixty-fifth Psalm,—"Thou visitest the earth and waterest it; * * Thou crownest the year with thy goodness, and thy paths brought fatness;" they could not but remember that their daily bread was all from him. Kept in such a spirit of humble and grateful dependence, our own Thanksgivings cannot fail to be among the most valuable as well as joyful of all the days in the year.

By no means the least remarkable feature of the Feast of Tabernacles is described in the last half of our lesson. Certainly it was the most picturesque. During seven whole days "all that were Israelites born" dwelt in booths, or tents of leafy boughs and of branches of fruit trees laden with fruit. In these the people, deserting their home, took up their abode. The purpose of all this was to keep in memory a remarkable period of their past history. When God brought them up out of Egypt he made them to dwell in booths. And now, once a year, they were to live over those days of commingled hardships and mercies. No doubt the different materials of which the booths were to be made were intended to be reminders of the different stages of the Wilderness journey; the "branches of the palm trees" of the valleys and plains, the "boughs of thick trees" of the bushy mountain heights, and the "willows" of the refreshing water-brooks.

Doubtless the feast as a whole was intended to keep alive the joyful side of religion. It is indeed called a "solemn assembly." But to be solemn is not of necessity to be grim. It is to be earnest, and this is consistent with high joy. Of this same festival it is said (Deut. 16: 14, 15): "Thou shalt rejoice in thy feast;" "Thou shalt surely rejoice." At a later period certain other than the original observances were added. There was a far-reaching illumination; and an evening procession in holiday attire; and a going for water which was poured out at the foot of the altar, while there arose the chant, "Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation,"—this last ceremony being supposed to be a type of Him who, on the last great day of this very feast, stood and cried: "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink."

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. God is not displeased with a joyful religion. He lays upon us obligations and restraints, but this is for our good. He does not require us to be lugubrious and sour, but bids us "be of good cheer."

2. It should be specially noted that this feast came just five days after the great Day of Atonement, on which the sin of Israel had been revoved and covenant relations with God restored. The joy of the time had its root in that inward peace which comes of pardon for sin. Is not this true of all unmixed joy?

3. The true Christian will take his religion with him to the most festitive scenes. He has learned that it can both purify and enhance his joy.

4. Thanksgiving days are not only for rest and recreation and to cement family ties, but, rightly kept, tend to bind us closer to God.

5. Days of commemoration may help to fire a nation's patriotism. So private anniversaries may have their uses; as that of one's birth or marriage, or of conversion or welcome to the Church. Many Christians sacredly keep these last.

6. This feast we have now been studying was a type of that greater feast now being prepared for God's people in heaven. The final "harvest is the end of the world." Earth's work will then all be done. Its fruits will all be gathered. Its trial will be over. Its mercies can all be passed in review. It will be a glad festival; and it will have no end. To it we are invited. Shall we all be there?

AN ACCESSION TO THE FAMILY.

A Daughter Comes Into the Spoopendyke Family.

"Well, well, well!" said Mr. Spoopendyke, with a grin that involved the whole head, and an effort at a tiptoe tread that shook the whole house. "And so it's a girl, my dear.

Mrs. Spoopendyke smiled faintly, and Mr. Spoopendyke picked up his heiress.

"It's the image of you," she said, regarding with some trepidation Mr. Spoopendyke's method of handling the infant.

"I don't see how you make that out," said Mr. Spoopendyke, gravely. "I don't know when my nose looked like the thumb part of a boiled lobster claw. Do I understand you that my eyes bear any resemblance to the head of a screw?"

"I mean the general features," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"The general features seem to be all mouth," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, examining his acquisition. "If our general features are at all alike, my visage must remind you of an earthquake. Hi! ki! chee! ki chee! What makes her fold up her legs like that?"

"No time like the present," quoted Mr. Spoopendyke, and he took his daughter's feet and commenced pulling her limbs. "I don't want and bandy-legged first in this family while I'm at the head of it."

Naturally the baby began to cry, and Mr. Spoopendyke essayed to soothe it.

"Hi! kitchee! kitchee! kitchee-ee-ee!" he chirruped. "Great Scott, what a cavern! Any idea how much this mouth weighs? Hi! kitchee! kitchee! You will have to get that mouth roofed in before cold weather. What's the matter with her, anyway?"

"Perhaps you hurt her. Let me take her, please," pleaded helpless Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"She's doing well enough. Hi, you! Hold up! Haven't you anything to catch this mouth in? It's spilling all over the neighborhood. Hi! Topsy, Genevieve, Cleopatra, dry up! I'm going to have trouble breaking this young one's temper, I can see that. Here! bend the other way once!" and Mr. Spoopendyke tried to straighten up his offspring without avail.

"Let her come to me, do, please," moaned Mrs. Spoopendyke, and Mr. Spoopendyke was forced to hand her over.

"Well, that's quite a baby," said he nursing his knee and eyeing the infant. "What are those bumps over his eyes for? What preponderance of intelligence do they represent?"

"You mustn't talk so," remonstrated Mrs. Spoopendyke. "She's the handsomest baby you ever saw."

"Well, she's got to stop biting her nails before she goes any further with this procession. Here, take your hands out of your mouth, can't you? Why don't you put your hands down?"

"Why, all babies do that," explained Mrs. Spoopendyke. "You can't stop that."

"I'm going to try," said Mr. Spoopendyke, "and I don't want to be interfered with in bringing the child up. Here you, Maud S. Bonesetter, put your hands in your pockets. Don't you let me see any more nail chewing, or you and I'll get mixed up in an argument. She gets that from your family, Mrs. Spoopendyke."

"Say, dear, don't you want to go and order some things?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"No," rejoined her husband, "I want to see this youngster. Where's his chin? Do babies always have their upper jaw set right on their shoulders? Kitchee! kitchee! Her scalp comes clear to the bridge of her nose. I don't believe she's quite right. Where's her forehead? Great Moses! Her head is all on the back part! Say, that baby's got to be pressed. That's no shape.

"Of course you know," growled Mr. Spoopendyke. "You don't want anything more than a fog horn and misspent appropriation to be an orphan asylum. If I had your faith and the colic I'd make a living as a foundling's home! She'll be old enough to spank in a week, won't she?"

"No, she won't," said Mrs. Spoopendyke. "She'll never be old enough for that."

"I bet she will," grunted Mr. Spoopendyke, "if she isn't she'll get it before she matures up to that period. That's all. Let me take her. Here, let's have her."

But Mrs. Spoopendyke flatly refused.

"Keep your dod gasted baby, then!" roared Mr. Spoopendyke. "If you know more about babies than I do, then keep her. The way you coddle her one would think she was a new paste for the complexion. If you had one more brain and a handle you'd make a fair rattle box! Fit you up with a broken sofa and a grease spot and you'd do for a second-hand nursery."

And Mr. Spoopendyke started off to find his friend Specklewottle, who congratulated him, and started off with him to assist in the selection of an overcoat and a pair of ear-muffs, as precautionary against the approaching winter.

A KIND WORD OF ADVICE.

If you feel yourself growing weak, your strength failing, the natural functions of the body becoming impaired, take warning in time: your system needs Iron, which, when combined with proper vegetable extracts, produces a tonic of rare medicinal effect. Such a remedy is Brown's Iron Bitters. Buy it of your druggist and do not be persuaded to take a substitute, for this is the only remedy which gives permanent strength. It contains no alcohol, nor does it blacken the teeth. It receives the universal endorsement of clergymen, physicians, druggists, and all who have used it.

Back Ache

POSITIVELY CURED BY Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First. Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second. Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third. Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth. Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth. Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.

Sixth. Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT.

A bad breath may result from acidity of the stomach, or from biliousness. In either case a few doses of Tarrants Seltzer Aperient, administered according to directions, will supplant this unpleasant companion with a sweet and healthful one. It is a saline corrective, specially suitable for warm weather, and leaves the system strong to do its work of recuperation.

L. HOUGHTON ALLEN, FUNERAL and FURNISHING UNDERTAKER.

Having recently enlarged my warerooms, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country. I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, white broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the finest cloth covered goods in this country.

All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from other towns as well as Woburn.

Hearses, Carriages, and Flowers furnished at short notice and at low prices. At the old stand, No. 8 Montvale Avenue, near corner of Main street.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

The Woburn Journal

The Woburn Public Library.

The Woburn Public Library owes its existence to the enlightened liberality of JONATHAN BOWERS WINN, and the people of the town will ever hold in grateful remembrance the name of his only son, CHARLES BOWERS WINN, through whose princely gift of upwards of two hundred thousand dollars, they can with a just pride point to the beautiful library building on Pleasant street, as the most magnificent and finest structure of the kind in any New England State.

The earliest library of a public nature ever collected together in town, of which there is any documentary evidence in existence at present, was the one formed in 1789, and known as the "Social Library." At that time, a few people becoming interested it the matter of self-education and feeling the need of a more extended cultivation of their intellects, drew up the following document, which received thirty-three signatures:

WOBURN, April 13, 1789.

To advance knowledge, to enlarge our ideas—we, the subscribers, do severally agree to become proprietors in a Library, and to pay the several shares against our respective names, and to conform to such laws and regulations as may hereafter be made by the subscribers for ye good government and mental advantages of the whole.

The above document was signed by thirty-three ladies and gentlemen, who took a total of 47 shares at $2.00 each, and realized a fund of $94, which in those days was a considerable sum for the mere purchase of books. With this money books consisting principally of history and travel with a few works of fiction and poetry were purchased, and for the want of better accommodations, were kept in the apothecary store of Joel Thayer on Main street near the head of Union. This library, the first of any public importance, continued in useful existence for 38 years, until 1837, when it was abandoned and all the volumes it then contained were distributed among the several surviving proprietors.

Since then there have been many different collections of books formed by various societies of a greater or less extent, and all having in view the same object—the education of the people, and the elevation of their moral, social and religious faculties. Notably, among these may be mentioned the "Charatable Religious Library" connected with the First Congregational church, which is the oldest continuous library in town, having been formed in 1807, and although originally intended and used by the general public, is at the present time devoted exclusively to the use of the sunday school connected with the church. In 1835, the Young Men's Association, a local organization, formed a library for their own use and maintained it for upwards of thirty years, until 1865, when the 375 volumes it then contained were generously donated to the Woburn Public library, as were also, the same year, the 150 volumes contained in the Agricultural Library formed in 1850.

In November, 1840, a paper with the following heading was circulated in New Bridge (now North Woburn,) and received fifty signatures: "The undersigned, young men of New Bridge, in the town of Woburn, being desirous of having a greater command of books than each one can conveniently obtain by his own unaided exertions, have determined to form themselves into an association for the purpose of securing a library of useful works; inasmuch as the investigation of truth affords equal pleasure and much greater benefit than the perusal of fiction, it shall be a fundamental principle in the constitution this association may form, to exclude novels and light reading generally." After forty signatures had been obtained, a meeting of the subscribers was duly held, which adopted a constitution and by-laws in accordance with the above preamble. Nov. 21, 1841, this library, containing 102 volumes, was opened to the public with Herbert Wyman as librarian, and in 1852 a printed catalogue of 456 books was issued. This library has continued its useful career and been a source of much pleasure and profit to the people in that locality until the present year of 1881, when the 1200 volumes it contained were transferred to the custody and care of the Rumford Historical Society.

With these few exceptions, and excepting also a few private collectionss whose owners loaned their books to individuals at a small expense, and such as were collected by the various churches for the use of the Sunday schools connected with them, there was no free public library in Woburn previous to the year 1854; and though many other attempts at founding such an institution had at various times been made by a few liberal and progressive people, yet all efforts in that direction had failed, principally from a lack of funds with which to maintain them and supply fresh material with which to keep the shelves attractive with the current literature of the day, as well as of a sufficient amount of enthusiasm among themselves to cooperate with those most interested in their laudable efforts to promote the intelligence of the masses.

However, in the year 1853 it was the good fortune of this town to send the Hon. J. B. Winn as a delegate from Woburn to the convention for revising the State Constitution, for which service he received as compensation the sum of $300. Mr. Winn being very much interested in the matter of education, and of the need of a public library in town where all, rich and poor alike, could go for information and recreation needed by hungry intellects thirsting for knowledge, conceived the idea of getting the people themselves interested in the subject, and with this object in view, at a town meeting held in November, 1854, he informally introduced the subject of a free public library to the meeting and generously offered to give for that object his salary of $300, received the year before as a delegate, provided the town would appropriate a like sum for the same purpose. By an informal vote the offer was accepted and the thanks of the town presented to Mr. Winn. At the annual meeting in March following the offer was formally accepted, and three hundred dollars appropriated to be added to the donation, for the purchase of books for a public library; the selectmen were also authorized to draw upon the treasurer for such further sums of money as were necessary to defray the expenses incident to procuring and fitting up a room suitable for library purposes; the same meeting also chose a committee of seven to organize the library, take charge of the funds, procure a room, purchase books, appoint a librarian, &c., and establish all necessary by-laws, rules and regulations, governing the same. That committee, consisting of J. B. Winn, Albert H. Nelson, Joshua R. Converse, Truman Ricard, L. L. Whitney, Josiah Linscott, and Albert Thompson, went vigorously and enthusiastically to work, soliciting further donations of money, books and other necessary materials for the purpose. While these preparations were going on the public spirited ladies of the town became interested in the work, and through their efforts a calico ball was given in Lyceum Hall to further aid the enterprise, and which netted $251 to the general fund. As a result of much arduous labor, well and efficiently performed, this committee on the 13th of August, 1856, without any formal ceremonies opened to he reading public a library of 1700 volumes, at a total expense of $1600. A room for the use of the library was fitted up in the old Town House, now the armory of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx, where it continued to flourish until 1865, when its dimensions outgrew the accommodations afforded by the building, and it was removed to more convenient and accessible quarters in the old Bank block, where was secured more room, better light and increased facilities for the delivery of books, as well as the advantages of a reading room. Mr. L. L. Whitney was chosen the first librarian, and acceptably filled that position for four years, until 1860, when he resigned.

For the first nine years existence of the library its growth and prosperity were necessarily slow, owing to the limited means at the disposal of the committee, as the annual appropriations for its support made by the town during that time never exceeded $300, although the committee did not always confine their expenditures to the sum appropriated, as the numerous "excess of expenditures" in the annual auditor's reports fully show. But its popularity and usefulness as an educator and refiner of the masses continued to increase with each succeeding year, and the limited number of books there contained were eagerly sought after and almost continuously in use. At the time of its removal to the old Bank block in 1865 the committee made a thorough and complete examination of its contents. A large number of books, thoroughly worn and dilapidated, and many that were valueless as books for either reference, sentiment or instruction, were discarded, and a new catalogue of 66 pages was printed. During that year 852 persons took out 14300 volumes, the total number of volumes in the library at its reopening being 3,298 an increase of only 1598 volumes in a period of nine years.

In this year of 1865 occured the second important event in the history of the public library, being next in importance to that of its foundation, and was by the liberality and thoughtfulness of the late Hon. Bowen Buckman a bequest of $500 for the use of the library, the notice of which was as follows:

BOSTON, Jan. 10, 1865.

NATHAN WYMAN ESQ., Clerk of the town of WOBURN, DEAR SIR:—We hereby transmit to you a copy of that portion of the will of the late Bowen Buckman, deceased, which relates to the Town of Woburn which is as follows:

"I give the town of Woburn in the county of Middlesex and in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, five hundred dollars to be paid by my executors two years after my decease; this donation is for the benefit of the public library in said town of Woburn to be applied for the purchase of books, under the direction of the selectmen of the town, at such times as they may judge advisable; that part of the donation not expended to be kept at interest, all of which to be applied to the same purpose." Respectfully yours, Alexander Beal, George A. Newell, executors."

Upon the receipt of this most timely and unexpected gift, the value of which was most duly appreciated by all who had partaken of the advantages offered by a free circulating library, the selectmen, who were made the custodians of the fund, immediately transferred it to the care of the library committee, and they very wisely resolved to invest the whole sum as the nucleus for a fund which some day they fondly hoped to see swelled into grander proportions. How well their anticipations have been realized and the fondest hopes of the most sanguine vastly exceeded during the past sixteen years the beautiful and perfect structure on Pleasant street, in the heart of the town, bears most agreeable and satisfying evidence. The receipt of this bequest gave an additional interest to the library and drew public attention more fully to a realizing sense of the importance of this public educator of the masses, one effect of which was to increase its popularity to such an extent that at the next town meeting the annual appropriation was increased to $500, which amount was appropriated each succeeding year until 1870, when it was increased to $600. In 1871 the dog tax returned to the town by the County and which formerly had been covered into the treasury, amounting to $525.80 was first given to the library, and each succeding year the money received from this source has since continued to be a gratifying source of revenue with which to purchase new books and otherwise help to maintain the standard of excellence the institution had attained.

Nov. 28, 1873, Timothy Winn, Esq., a brother of the founder of the library, died after a long and painful illness, and to his princely liberality the town is indebted for the second bequest for library purposes, as the following clause in his will shows, viz: "I give to the Town of Woburn, for the use of the library the sum of three thousand dollars." Scarcely had the tomb been closed around his body, and in just a fortnight afterward, on the 12th day of December, 1874, his brother, the Hon. Jonathan Bowers Winn, and the original founder of the library, died, leaving a large fortune to his son, the only surviving member of his family, and in his will was the following clause making the third bequest for that purpose viz: "I give and bequeath to the Town of Woburn the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, to be expended for the benefit and in the use of the town library."

Upon the receipt of these two liberal contributions to the library, the selectmen and library committee concluded to invest the principal sum, and accordingly together with the Buckman fund, in all amounting to six thousand dollars, were invested in six Woburn water bonds, the income from which only is annually used for library purposes.

Hon. Jonathan Bowers Winn was born in Burlington, Mass., Aug. 24, 1811, and was a direct descendant of Edward Winn, whose son Increase Winn, was the first child born in Woburn, Mass., Oct. 10, 1641. In early life he taught school at Wilmington, this state, and in North Woburn, and afterwards learned the currier's trade of Dea. John Cummings. In 1837 he started in business for himself, and four years later founded the firm of J. B. Winn & Co., leather dealers, with his brother Timothy: in 1843 & 4 he was elected captain of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx, and in 1853 was sent as a delegate to the convention for revising the State Constitution. Mr. Winn was one of the original founders of the First National Bank of this town, and was its second President, succeeding the late Gen'l Abijah Thompson to that position, which he held at the time of his death. He was a firm believer in the doctrines of the Unitarian faith, and liberally contributed from his abundant means for its support. Just before his death he was asked by his pastor to review his faith, and ascertain before it was too late whether it was sufficient for the occasion. "Change my faith?" said he, "change my faith? Oh, no! I shall stand by the flag under which I have lived, and to support which I have contributed. My faith was good enough for me to live by, and it is sufficiently good enough to die by." In his will he gave to the Unitarian denomination the sum of one hundred thousand dollars to be paid after the decease of his son. In 1869 he was elected to the executive council of Gov. Clafflin and reelected for the three succeeding years. He was identified with many public improvements, being a man of positive convictions and whose word was as his bond. Besides founding the library, he was instrumental in introducing gas into town, and in the erection of Lyceum Hall. During the war when men refused to enlist and the town was unable to raise money by the refusal of the Selectmen to take the responsibility of raising it, in that dark hour Mr. Winn personally raised $18,000, and agreed to pay it himself in the case of any difficulty. Mr. Winn left a large property, estimated at $500,000, all of which, except a few minor legacies as were inherited by his son Charles.

These donations, large and liberal in amount as they were, seem but a mere trifle when compared with the munificent gift the town received two years later from Charles Bowers Winn, only son of J. B. Winn, who died Dec. 19, 1875, leaving an estate variously estimated at from $350,000 to $450,000. In his will, written by his own hand and in his own chosen words, he bequeaths to the town, after making sundry gifts of a private nature, in language as follows, viz:

"I give and bequeath to the town of Woburn, in trust, the sum of one hundred and forty thousands dollars, to be used and disposed of for the purpose and in the interest of a Public Library, and including land, building, books, pictures, furniture, and for any and every purpose pertaining to, or in connection with, the above and the following objects which may be considered desirable and advisable. I also desire that a portion of the Library building (naturally the upper floor, so as to have the light only from above) be set apart and exclusively devoted to the object of having a suitable place for exhibiting pictures, and more especially, oil paintings; and as a commencement in the way of forming a collection of oil paintings, I hereby give and bequeath to the town of Woburn any and all pictures of which I may die possessed; and those, if any, which, at my decease, may be in the hands of picture dealers, are to be sold and the proceeds credited to the general purpose of this bequest. I would also suggest that the architects be requested to make provision for reading rooms, which of course it would be of great advantage to add to the other opportunities offered."

After several other private bequests the will contains as follows, viz:

"Of the rest and residue of whatever name or nature of my property, both real and personal, of which I may die possessed, I hereby give and bequeath two-thirds to the Town of Woburn as an additional bequest, and in trust for the benefit, and in the interest of the Public Library, and the other purposes connected therewith named above.

As it is not unusual in instances of donations, or bequests, of considerable importance, that the family name of the donor is prefixed to, or connected with, the name of the object or results of such gifts, but as in this instance the application of the above named custom would be very much against my wishes and feelings, I therefore direct that the building to be erected from the funds herein bequeathed, be known as the Woburn Public Library, or by some name of a similar general nature, and have no personal references.

"In consideration, however, of the fact that the library building is to be erected entirely from property accumulated by my late honored father, to whom, alone, therefore, the citizens of the town are indebted for the advantages and opportunities resulting from this bequest, and (as a memorial to whom this building is by the undersigned intended,) I would suggest that, should it meet with the approval of those who may have charge of such matters of detail in connection with the building, that an inscription, having reference to him only, and containing his name alone, be placed in some portion of the building, (on perhaps a small metallic plate, and in a not over-conspicuous position,) which shall make known, in some such words as the following, that the building was erected for the use and benefit and improvement of the people of Woburn, from funds bequeathed for the purpose from the estate of Hon. Johathan B. Winn. As I am very desirous that this Library building shall be an architectural ornament to the town, I hope that no expense will be spared in the most important of all matters, namely: the selection of a plan; and I would suggest that several architects of the highest reputation be requested to make drawings, so that by comparing one with another, a satisfactory result in the matter of a choice of a plan will be more likely to be attained. This course, it pursued, may possibly be quite expensive, but in this case that ought not to be an obstacle or objection, for I think the within bequest for the Library and the other purposes in connection therewith, will be found to be of a sufficiently liberal amount to allow of having everything of the very best, and consequently of the most expensive order.

Not any of the pictures herein bequeathed are above mediocrity as regards artistic merit, none of them being by artists of any very widely known reputation; but it was my intention, had I not been prevented by ill health, to have added to this collection a large number of paintings of a much higher grade and by some of the most celebrated artists in Europe and our own country. I offer these pictures therefore, well aware of their short comings, but with the hope and expectation that by a liberal use of the funds herein bequeathed, such additions will be made as will render the collection of sufficient merit and importance as to justify its being placed on public exhibition; and I would suggest that, while the building is in process of erection, some reliable person be authorized to act as agent in making purchases of any pictures of uncommon merit and interest which may be offered for sale in Boston, New York, or elsewhere.

It is not in accordance with my intentions or wishes, that any considerable portion of the amount herein bequeated for Library purposes, be kept as a reserve fund for the future, but that within a few years of my decease, all but a comparatively small portion of these bequests shall be expended on the building and its contents, and made available for the use of the present inhabitants of the town; and I suppose that it is not unreasonable to expect that in future years the town will willingly make provision for the payment of the regular annual expenses pertaining to the use of the library by the public, also for new books and necessary repairs."

Charles Bowers Winn was born in Woburn, May 15, 1838, and after receiving a common school education, entered Harvard College, but owing to feeble health, was obliged to give up his studies in his second year, and went to the Mediteranean in hopes of regaining it. From that time forward until the last year of his life, he spent the greater portion of his time travelling in foreign lands, nearly all the habitable places of which he had visited, and when asked upon one occasion what he should do when he had travelled over the whole world, he replied, "he did not know, that that was what troubled him, but supposed that he

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ Cramped for space, we regret our inability to comply with the reasonable request of the Secretary, Mr. Charles S. Parker, of Arlington, to publish the notice sent us of the movements of Dr. Reynolds, the famous temperance advocate, but, instead, will give the points of the same briefly: Dr. Reynolds will open the campaign at Wakefield, on the 25th instant, and from thence proceed to answer the calls of those who may seek his services; any persons or organizations wanting him to labor should write to Mr. Charles S. Parker, Arlington, Mass., at once; the cost of each meeting should be estimated at $20, and expenses of the Doctor; no collections will be taken up in the meetings, but funds must be otherwise provided for; "first come, first served."

☞ In accordance with a time-honored and universal custom, with extreme pleasure, we submit to our army of intelligent readers, the Proclamation for Thanksgiving by His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. At the same time we would warn our readers that the very excellent poetry embodied in the document is not original with Gov. Long, but was written by our own beloved Whittier for an Agricultural Fair held somewhere in this neighborhood. Though the poetry goes in without quotation marks there is no good reason for believing that Gov. Long intended to pass it off as his own. Likewise, we would inform the public that the four paragraphs immediately preceding the poetry were not composed by the Governor.

☞ Attorney General MacVeagh has surrendered his portfolio and the President has accepted the same. He says his reason for resigning were purely political, but the public seem inclined to put a different construction on it. It looks a good deal as though he blundered sadly in the star route business, to say the least of it; and after having made such a hue-and-cry over the matter he hadn't the courage to face the consequences of his mistakes. It is surmised that he saw some weeks ago that the star route folks could not be convicted, and not caring to shoulder the responsibility for the failure, he preferred to step out at once and let some one else bear the stigma of defeat. MeVeagh was a curious piece of cabinet furniture.

☞ The Democrats of Boston have nominated a Mr. Albert Palmer for Mayor. As a man, he is spoken very well of by the Boston press, except by the Herald, whose intensely radical Republicanism will not allow it to say a kind word of any man having the least taint of Democracy about him. Looking at Gov. Long's majority in Boston a couple of weeks ago it would seem as though Mr. Palmer's chances for an election were not first rate, but the Post, young, hopeful and bouyant, regards his success as certain.

☞ The Malden City Press, an excellent journal by the way, has been enlarged by the addition of several columns of matter, making it one of the largest of our suburban exchanges. We are glad to note this evidence of thrift and enterprise on the part of its proprietors.

☞ The Ninth Massachusetts Regiment emerges from the investigation of its conduct at Yorktown and Richmond pretty badly scorched. The report of the committee shows that some of the boys in having a high old time disgraced themselves and the fine military organization to which they belonged.

— Last Wednesday evening, at a meeting called for the purpose, the Congregational Society voted to change their hymn books. The present book has been worked by the society twenty-one years, and a good many think it has outlived its usefulness. So, it was voted to adopt Rev. Dr. Robinson's "Spiritual-Songs" in their stead.

— On the outside of this paper we give a full and complete history of the rise and progress of public libraries in Woburn, which will be found interesting reading. A good deal of labor and pains have been expended in its preparation, and being strictly correct this paper ought to be preserved for future reference by all the people of our town.

— The Boston Branch, one of the most popular and best patronized grocery stores in Woburn, has a card in this paper, to which we call especial attention. The managers of the store are young, enterprising men, honest, square, and pleasant to deal with, and there is no namable thing in the grocery line that do not keep. And their prices cannot be successfully competed with.

— Last Tuesday evening the Board of Selectmen held their regular mid-monthly meeting, and cleaned up the docket. A petition was received from Neal Doherty and others for the removal of Edward Gallagher from the Police force at North Woburn, and asking for a hearing on the case. It was referred to Committee on Police, and hearing set down for Snturday evening, Nov. 19, at 7.30 P. M. The Tolman claim for land taken for reservoir, was referred to Committe on Finance.

— The ladies on the Committee for the Woburn table at the Soldiers' Home Bazaar to be held in Boston, request that all articles that have been pledged by our citizens for that object, be delivered at once to the committee in order to enable them to make early arrangements for the Bazaar. Great liberality has been shown by our people in behalf of this noble cause, for which the committee feel very grateful. We suspect the Woburn table will cut a conspicuous figure in the business, for our ladies have indefategable in their efforts to make it what it should be.

— Several little ripples has stirred life at the Police Court this week, which, for the time being, gave the old Temple of Justice its wonted air. John Shea, for assault and battery on William Fay, one year ago, was found at Clinton, from which place Chief Conn brought his to Woburn on Monday: it cost $10.50. Neal Boyce was on a racket Sunday night and gave officer Boyle much trouble, for which he paid $10 and costs for assault and battery, and $3 and costs for disturbing the peace. Daniel Smith, disturbing peace at the Highlands, was roped in by officer McHugh and paid $3 and costs. David Hennessey assault on Thomas Gillilee of Montvale; and Michael Downey assault on same, satisfaction acknowledged, former, $3 and costs; latter, costs alone.

— This is the Week of Prayer. The Y. M. C. A. here has been and is holding special evening meetings devoted to prayer. They have been well attended, and a humble Christian spirit has characterized each session. Here, as elsewhere, there is need enough for prayer for the ungodly—earnest, persistent, continuous prayer—and there is no agency that we know anything about, not excepting the churches, that is accomplishing better things than the Y. M. C. A. is, all over the world. In its labors in behalf of humanity it gets down nearer to where humanity lives than other religious organizations do; it doesn't wait for for the poor and needy to come and make formal application for some of the bread of life, but goes where they are, gets hold of their hands, lifts them up out of the low places, and helps them to better lives. Few people are converted to right thinking, feeling and acting by being talked at; they need to be talked with, and sympathized with, and personally persuaded and encouraged; and this is what the Y. M. C. A. does, and how it does it. So, let us give the organization our sympathy and support.

— Thomas Marrinan will assist at the Praise meeting at the Y. M. C. A. with his cornet next Sunday afternoon.

— Chief Conn has moved into the Dr. Cutter house on Pleasant street, for why, we cannot see, for Pleasant street presents no field for the labors of the Police.

— Mr. A. E. Thompson received a dairy of that same Vermont gold-edge butter that he gets annually, and it is going like hot cakes. There were twenty-five tubs of it.

— Pattern 499 is one of the best styles that has been introduced this season in Body Brussels Carpet. It is in olive shades and is very handsome. C. A. Smith & Son have it.

— For a few days after the election there was considerable growling in the Democratic ranks over alleged Democratic treason to Mr. Maguire. It did look that way a good deal, and we don't blame Mr. Maguire's friends for feeling sour and cross.

— It is gratifying to be able to state that Crystal Fount Lodge, No. 9, I. O. O. F. is having many accessions this term, and was never more prosperous than at the present time. It is composed of live men who are deeply interested in the Order, and we are glad to know that it is flourishing.

— This is the season of the year when the dry-goods box which the country editor calls "our table" is piled high with copies of the "Old Farmer's Almanac," several of which we have already received, and for which we hope we are abundantly grateful.

— H. F. Smith has bought especially for Thankgiving trade a complete assortment of table, and cooking raisins, citron and currants. Smyrna figs and French prunes. Spices warranted strictly pure. Pure Coffees and a choice selection of fine teas. Give him a call before purchasing elsewhere.

— In reply to "Angelican" I would say the playcard seen upon the Trinity Church was taken down from the shop I occupy and thrown into the street by some malicious person, and picked up and put in the above place by a young boy who did not mean any harm to the Church or myself.

WILLIAM REDFORD.

WOBURN, Nov. 16, '81.

— Mr. Mark Allen is in correspondence with a prominent dramatic manager of London, Paris and New York with a view of utilizing his dramatization of "Michael Strogoff." The acts thus far submitted to the manager have received his approval, and it is not impossible that Brother Allen may yet realize mints of money out of his play.

— Next Sunday the churches take up the annual Thanksgiving collections for the poor of this town. Possibly this announcement may be the cause of thin houses next Sunday morning, but we don't believe it, for the well-to-do people of Woburn are generous and careful of the happiness of their less fortunate fellow men, and they will contribute handsomely when the plate comes round.

— By glancing at Mr. Amos Cummings's additional big advertisement in this paper, it will be seen that he strikes right at the roots of things. Being a live, wide-awake business man Mr. Cummings has unbounded faith and confidence in the potency of printer's ink as a custom-drawing agency, and he uses it—uses it judiciously and makes it pay. He advertises big, and has the stock in his store to back up all he says, and as to prices, why, go and see for yourselves—they'll suit.

— The foreign missionary who undertook to tell a story at the Congregational S. S. Concert last Sunday evening was very very long in telling it. He had such a happy faculty of roping in irrelevant matters that his little tale, when finished, looked a good deal like one of those family trees we sometimes see suspended over the mantlepiece in old-fashioned parlors, and just about as interesting. The young people came very near losing their stereopticon exhibition, and did not feel overly amiable towards the story-teller; but good Dr. March accommodated them, and they had a fine time after all.

— The concert given by Mr. Roscoe W. Lucy, organist at the Unitarian church, last Wednesday evening, assisted by several eminent artists, together with the Bay State Concert Company, of which he is a member, was one of the very best ever attended in Woburn, and deserved to have been patronized much better than it was. It was a high-toned musical entertainment, which in Boston would have drawn a full house. Mr. Lucy's piano solos were very fine and fully sustained his reputation of being a pianist of genuine merit. The violin solos by Mons. DeSeve were simply splendid. To hear these was was worth a good deal more than the price of admission. Mr. Arnold is one of the best baritones we ever heard, and Mr. Fabrian rendered Poe's "Bells" admirably. Mrs. Lloyd, Miss Blake, Miss Leonard, the cultivated accompanist, and Mr. Dennison were all capital. Each piece was enthusiastically applauded, and the whole entertainment gave great satisfaction.

— The Woburn Mechanic Phalanx, for many years the crack military organization of the State, and which to-day holds its own with others, departed from its usual custom of having an annual fall target shoot, and, thinking to interest the people in their welfare, invited a large body of citizens to a splendid banquet got up by Hammond at the Central House, on Friday evening last. Every chair was filled, and so were the plates. There were men present who had done soldier duty years before many of the present members of the Phalanx were born, and both realized the vast change in the conduct of civil military duty. There were many men there who had served long in active duty in the army of the rebellion, and had won lasting reputation for valor in defence of the country. Here were young men born when McClellan was fighting in front of Richmond, and Grant was battling to reduce that city, and when Lee finally gave up for lost, what for five long years he had had courage to defend and save—the confederacy of the South. But now all these had marshalled under one common head, and shoulder to shoulder, and in one solid "phalanx," they attacked the enemy, and after capturing pickets and reaching the main body, whom they overcome, they found the enemy, under command of Gen. Hammond, to be supplied with reserves to such an extent that it was only cruel to throw men to such an enemy. A compromise was made, and our troops were called off by Capt. C. W. Converse, who bid the soldiers behave like men and gentlemen, as they were, and then followed a love-feast such as seldom falls to the lot of man to witness. Capt. Converse urged our citizens to more interest in military matters, as an encouragement to the young active members, and hoped that a good organization might be effected, of all interested in the welfare of the company. Col. W. T. Grammer, a veteran soldier, with long and favorable experience in the soldiery of Massachusetts, made a capital speech, telling how, in olden time, the Militia were obliged to furnish arms and equipments, when uniforms were what best suited each individual soldier, and how each company had a special staff, which would include the largest and best proportioned men. The Colonel closed by advising good square conduct on the part of the soldier, showing in a graphic manner by illustration, how a very few men might disgrace a regiment or State, as might prove to be the case in an investigation now in progress by a State Commission. James Skinner, Esq., Chairman of Board of Selectmen, thanked the company for the few hours of recreation and pleasure offered him, and spoke in an eloquent and feeling manner of the circumstance of being left in New York on a recent visit with the 5th Regiment. He declared that it occured by circumstances wholly beyond his control. Col. Thomas H. Hill, our amiable Clerk of Board, although just from home, where he had been since election, indisposed, entertained the company in his usual happy manner. The climax of enthusiasm was reached when Deacon Gawin R. Gage was called on, and as the old veteran reviewed the stormy scenes on many a hard fought musterfield, the boys could contain themselves no longer, and the hall fairly shook with applause. The people of Woburn, and the boys in the field, will never forget him as the warmest and most active friend they had, and Gage's boxes have gone into history as a part of what Woburn did. The Chief of Police had been invited and was present, but he seemed very much out of place. Woburn having voted not to license, the party had nothing stronger than good coffee, hence his services were not in demand, but he managed in his quiet and retired way to entertain the company by telling a story of the war—of how he brought disgrace upon his regiment in purloining a pig in Maryland (his chums were to blame for it); how, afterward, and later in the war, he was on a raiding expedition with members of his company and how he got captured by the Provost Guard, and then used this illustration urging the young soldier not to imitate his example, as by so doing a regiment's reputation might suffer for the indescretion of one man. Alpha E. Thompson, Esq., one of the old fashioned "staff" alluded to by Col. Grammer, stated that when he performed that arduous duty he weighed 112 lbs. only—he did not have the Gubernatorial proportions of to-day. He related the difficulties attending the march and ceremonies of the celebration of laying the corner stone of Bunker Hill Monument; how they marched in a rain storm to Walnut Hill, landing in the old depot on Lowell street; dining at a hotel, and sleeping in the loft of a stable on straw. The Governor was one of the party left in New York this summer, and was obliged to explain why and how he got left; but the explanation was far from satisfactory. Capt. Charles S. Converse, a former captain of the Phalanx, and father of the present captain, made a very sensible speech, which much relished by all. Capt. John P. Crane came promptly to business, and in his usual neat and tasty manner, offered a motion that the guests assembled form themselves into an organization to be called the "Phalanx Association." The motion was carried and a committee, consisting of Capt. J. P. Crane, Col. W. T. Grammer, and Capt. Charles K. Conn, were chosen to carry into effect the spirit of the motion, and to report to suit their pleasure, but when they do report it shall be in connection with a banquet as is spread to-night. Col. Lounsberry responded in a happy manner, and being an old Militia man, said that he much prized the experience, when he came to get into active duty as a soldier of the rebellion. The clock struck 12; a few cheers passed between soldier and guest, and the weary boarder thanked his stars the feast of reason was o'er. The damp atmosphere without, resounded with many a "good night," and the merry drum, then all was still save the early cock who thought the morn had come. Then follows stormy dreams. ***

They are Liable.

The doctors are all liable to be mistaken, they were in my case. It cost me $200, because they said I had heart disease, and then told me I must die. Grandmother said it was liver complaint, and $2 worth of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Jennie P——, Rockport.

Our City Druggists report an immense sale of St. Jacobs Oil, saying the demand is based upon the popularity of its success. Wherever it has been used, it has proved its value a thousand fold, and receives its best encomiums from those who have tried it.

Consumption Cured.

BALTIMORE, MD., February 12th, 1881.

Upon the recommendation of a friend, I tried Brown's Iron Bitters as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was fast wasting away in Consumption. Having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease; but to my surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, she began to mend, and is now quite restored to her former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of consumption, and when the physician was consulted, he quickly said, "Tonics were required!" And when informed that the elder sister was taking Brown's Iron Bitters, responded, "That is a good tonic, take it."

Abandoned.

We perceive by one of our Massachusetts exchanges that Dr. Lorenzo Waite, of Westfield, an eminent physician of Berkshire Co. strongly indorses St. Jacobs Oil. With it he has cured a case of Sciatica that resisted all regular professional treatment, and that had in fact been abandoned as incurable.

A Business Man's Experience.

He could not tell what ailed him. He knew his digestion was poor and his heart palpitated. He felt his nervous system was shattered. He knew his urine was milky and ropy, but he had suffered from these disorders for years. Only of late had he began to feel himself completely exhausted and his nervous system shattered, and his constitution broken down. A friend recommended Brown's Iron Bitters. It suited his case precisely, and now he is as healthy, robust and strong as his heart could desire. Go thou and do likewise, then may you live long and be happy.—Commercial.

Health Leaves.

No. 1.

However exalted may have been the moral condition of the first human pair, intellectually they must have been in darkness. It can not be otherwise than true, that the primitive condition of man is ever one of ignorance. What ever the culture of an age or nation, the children born to it are the veriest barbarians. The infant of the Anglo-Saxon, the Celt and the Hottentot are alike ignorant. The difference in their capacity to learn may be great, but each alike must be taught. There are many instinctive impulses, but wisdom is not intuitive. Even with the keenest minds and most apt at learning, it is only little by little that they gain possession of the knowledge which goes to make up the sum total of culture that distinguishes the wise.

The human being when first placed in the world is as ignorant of the conditions of his surroundings, and the laws of his being, as are the brutes of the forest. There is however the difference of possibilities. The one has the power and desire to acquire the other has not. But while humanity have, indeed, the power, there are so many that lack the desire, that very many of those who need most to be taught the things which pertain so largely to their comfort, health, and well being, which it is the design of these "leaves" to give, have already cast them aside, as insipid and profitless. But to those who have the desire, and the patience to follow us, it is our design to give from time to time such practical thoughts and suggestions, as are essential to the maintenance of a good degree of health.

The easiest way, for one who would be healthy, is to keep the health they have. Properly to do this requires instruction. The necessity of such instruction has been pressed upon the attention of the public, and now a term upon anatomy, physiology and hygiene, forms a part of almost every high school course. This is well—indeed it is very esential—yet the girl or boy coming out of the high school, has retained very little of that which they can apply to the practical experience of daily life, which shall aid them in warding off the many insidious foes that secretly lurk to assail them in their most vital parts. This instruction is excellent but it lacks practicality. One may know every tissue in the human body by name, and its location and functions, all of which is mere technicality, and yet be ignorant of the simplest laws of life, an infringement of which may cost them great suffering. The trouble is, these practical things are not sufficiently taught. They ought to be taught orally, and by writing, until they are as familiar to every mind as was the "folk lore" of the past. In the olden time, when the thing was implicitly believed in, none came to maturity without knowing when the "signs" (referring to the zodiac) were "right" to sow the onions, cut the children's hair, pluck the geese or wean the baby. All these things and hundreds of others as nonsensical, which have left an inefaceable impress on the human mind, were taught orally and treasured up. We want the rising generation to know the great matters of hygiene which have a foundation in scientific fact, just as intimately as the others knew those things, which were untrue, and to this end they must be taught and written, and studied. False ideas will then be rooted out; truths will take their place; man will be stronger and happier as well as wiser, and so the nations will be healed.

Mr. J. F. Cole, the artist, is going abroad.

Miss Jennie Metcalf has been appointed a a teacher in one of the Grammar schools in Boston.

The "Seek and Save" society of the Congregational church propose to do things this season. It is a lively one.

Telephone poles are going up along the line towards Woburn. The workmen are getting well through the town.

Our firemen are prohibited from riding on their machines to fires. The engineers mean that the boys shall earn their money.

The County Commissioners were in town yesterday on the petition of several of our citizens to give a part of Main St. a looking over.

Mr. Albert Gooding of Brookline will preach in the Unitarian church next sabbath. The annual parish meeting was held last evening.

The ranks of the Hook and Ladder Company have been decimated by the resignation of J. C. Stanton, Jr. and Reuben Davis.

A large and very nice coffee party was given last Thursday evening in Rangeley Hall for the benefit of the New England Hospital for Women and Children.

Mrs. E. Huse has been elected to fill the vacancy on the School Board caused by the resignation of Mrs. S.B. Stebbins. She has been a successful educator and will fill the position admirably.

Judge P. L. Converse of Woburn is dealing out even-handed justice here this week in the absence of Judge Littlefield, who has gone out West on business. The Judge carries a firm and steady hand with 'em.

The Back-log Club will give a dramatic entertainment this, Friday, evening. A good deal of time and labor have been expended on its preparation, and there is no doubt but that it will be a very fine thing. There is a fair prospect for a good house.

The Star, in answer to a correspondent who asked if that paper paid, talked in this way:

Of course. There are millions in it, and sometime we may be able to extract some of them. But on this point the future seems rather indefinite.

Now what does all this mean? We really feel worried about the future of our wordy contemporary.—Medford Mercury.

It is the desire of the Trustees of the Public Library to furnish such books as the reading public demand, hence they ask those who fail to find the volume wanted on the library shelves to give the trustees the name of the book and it will be bought. In this way selections can be made more intelligently than in any other.

The wife of Dr. Church of this place has been pursuing medical studies in Europe for the last eighteen months and having completed them has sailed for home. On her arrival she and her husband will form a business connection, which, I hope will be as pleasant as their conjugal one of several years standing has been.

Your correspondent is in possession of no reliable facts concerning the alleged contemplated railroad to report to the JOURNAL this week. The grumbling has not ceased, and some pretend to say that the tanners and other business men are in dead earnest for additional and competing railroad facilities; but until a meeting of our citizens is held, and the matter resolves itself into tangible shape, I do not deem it worth while to crowd your colums with comments. Rumors are unsafe things to report, and until I get hold of something more substantial than rumors I will refrain from writing.

It ought to be understood that newspapers are not kept alive by the public spirit and local pride of the communities in which they are published. The paper which pins its faith to this mistaken idea is sure to get left. The town which needs a paper and has one worthy of support will see that it is supported—and the people of that town are the best judges of all this. These brief remarks are affectionately dedicated to the Winchester Star.—Medford Mercury.

An interesting course of four lectures has been arranged to be given in the vestry of the Congregational church by Rev. W. Barrows, D. D. The first one will be delivered on Tuesday evening, Nov. 22, the subject to be "The Old Folks in America." The theme for Tuesday evening, Nov. 29, will be "The Game of Kings in North America"; for December 6, "Out West, Where and What"; December 13, "The Belt of Danger for the United States." This course will undoubtedly be fine, and will draw large houses.

Philip Phillips and Son will give an "Evening of Song" here on Friday evening, Nov. 25, under the auspices of the Ladies' Social Circle of the M. E. Church. The fame of Mr. Phillips never fails to draw crowded houses wherever he goes, and his "Evenings of Song" always afford great pleasure to the audience. In no way can a few hours be more profitably spent than in listening to the sweet melody of Philip Phillips.

The Teachers' Institute closed its two day's session here on Friday evening. It was very successful in every respect. The number of teachers present and participating in the exercises, representing some five or six towns, was about 170, all of whom were generously cared for by the liberal-hearted people of Winchester. The exercises were of a high character, and the general opinion at the close was that the teachers had derived great benefit from their attendance. Everything passed off very pleasantly, and all were more than satisfied with the Institute, the lectures, and the warm hospitality of our people. At the close a vote of thanks was extended to the State Board of Education for providing such a bountiful intellectual feast for the people.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
JOHN D. LONG,
GOVERNOR:
A PROCLAMATION
FOR A DAY OF Public Thanksgiving and Praise.

Whereas it is a good and ancient custom to set apart after the harvest a day for public thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God:

Now, therefore, I, John D. Long, Governor, by and with the advice of the Council, appoint therefor Thursday, the 24th day of November next.

Unto Thee, O God, do we give thanks.

Thou visitest the earth and waterest it. Thou blessest the springing thereof. Thou crownest the year with thy goodness. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.

Blessed is he that considereth the poor.

Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

O Painter of the fruits and flowers,
We own Thy wise designs,
Whereby these humble hands of ours
May share the work of thine!
Apart from Thee we plant in vain
To root and sow the seed;
Thy early and Thy later rain,
Thy sun and dew we need.
Our toil is sweet with thankfulness,
Our burden is our boon,
The curse of Earth's gray morning is
The blessing of its noon.
And still with reverent hands we cull
Thy gifts each year renewed;
The good is always beautiful—
The beautiful is good.

Given at the Council Chamber, in Boston, this twenty-ninth day of October, in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-one, and of the Independence of the United States of America the One Hundred and Sixth.

JOHN D. LONG.

By His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Council,
HENRY B. PIERCE, Secretary.

God Save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Has "decided" claims upon the public. This is positively proven by the immense good it has done to those who have been cured of diseases from which they have suffered intensely for years, as verified by the published testimonials, every one of which is a positive fact.

CHELSEA, VT., Feb. 24, 1879.
MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.: The 6th day of last June I was taken sick with a swelling on my right foot, and with an awful pain. The swelling went all over me. My face was swelled so that I could with difficulty see out of my eyes, and I broke out over the whole surface of my body; my right foot up to my knee was one raw, itching mass, and my ankle and foot so lame and sore I could not step on it, and it would run so as to wet a bandage through in an hour. In this condition Mr. W. F. Hood (of the firm of A. R. Hood & Son, druggists, of this town), handed me a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and told me to take it. I did so, and by the time I had taken one bottle I found that it was doing me good. I have since taken five bottles more. After I had taken three bottles my soreness began to leave me, and I have been growing better every day, so that to-day I can walk without going lame. I have no soreness in my ankle and it has healed all up, and does not run at all. I owe my recovery to your Sarsaparilla. I write this to let you know that I think it deserves the confidence of the public, especially those who are troubled with humors.
Yours most truly,
JOSIAH PITKIN.

P. S. Every person that saw me said that I never would get over my lameness without having a running sore on my ankle; but thank God I have. J. P.

No other Sarsaparilla has such a sharpening effect upon the appetite. No other preparation tones and strengthens the digestive organs like HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Price one dollar, or six bottles for five dollars. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

would have to begin and go over the same route a second time." It has been very truly said of him, he was a keen observer, seldom visiting a place twice, avoided all companionship, preferring to persue his solitary way undisturbed, and to be governed by no man's whim or caprice except his own. He wanted his own way, and was willing others should have theirs, so that he was never vindictive; he was opposed to parade of any kind and his modesty was something remarkable. His sickness was undoubtedly the cause of his eccentricities, as those who well remember him in his boyhood days still retain pleasant recollections of a genial and affable companion.

During the war of the rebellion he sent a substitute into the field, and paid liberally from his means towards raising men to fill Woburn's quota, and finally not satisfied with thus much doing, he went to Boston and enlisted himself, but upon examination by the surgeon, was rejected on account of ill health. Being determined to go to war, and nothing daunted by his rejection, he proceeded on to Washington, enlisted a second time in the 11th Mass. Battery while it was at the front near Petersburg, and served honorably with it until the war closed. A commission was offered him at the time of his second enlistment, but he refused it, preferring to take his chances with the regular enlisted men. The writer can never forget meeting him on Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, at the time of the great view of the armies, nor of the hearty and cordial greeeting he then received.

Charlie Winn, as he was familiarly called, did not wait until his decease to bestow his wealth on those whom he thought deserving, but scores of less favored people were gladdened by his bounty during the closing week of his life, and the day before he died he drew from the bank a large sum of money with the purpose of making happy hearts during Christmas week. At the time of his death he was a member of the firm of J. B. Winn & Co., leather dealers; a director in the First National Bank, and a member of Mt. Horeb Lodge F. & A. Masons. Possessed as he was of so many noble qualities, and able, but for his sickness, to have occupied a prominent and influential place in public affairs, his early death was felt to be a serious loss to the community. However, his memory is secure, and the generations to come, who shall look upon that noble library building which will be his most fitting monument, and who shall enjoy the treasures of art and of literature that it contains, will ever hold in veneration the name of Charles Bowers Winn.

At a special meeting held on the 17th of February following, the town gratefully accepted the bequest of their late fellow citizen Charles B. Winn, acknowledging full appreciation of the munificent gift, and the elevated character and intentions of the generous giver. They chose John Johnson, Parker L. Converse and Edward D. Hayden, the executors named in the will, a committee on the part of the town to expend the money and execute the trust according to the intentions and directions of the testator.

This committee, with as little delay as possible, went to work to execute the trust imposed, and after mature deliberation finally decided that the most available and appropriate site for the proposed structure would be the Winn homestead on Pleasant street, adjoining which on the left was the estate formerly owned by the late Bowen Buckman. Both estates were purchased and thrown into one lot, and the wisdom of the committee is apparent at first sight. The best known architects of New York and Boston were invited to submit plans for a library building, which should embrace in one general building, besides a library, a reading room, art gallery and museum, all on the ground floor. Five plans were submitted by as many different architects, and those submitted by Messrs. Gambrill & Richardson of Boston were accepted by the committee as embodying the most essential ideas of a building embracing great architectural beauty, and completeness id design.

The building as it now stands, with a frontage on Pleasant street of 163½ ft., and seventy-five feet back from it, with its beautiful lawn all around, is pronounced by competent critics to be the finest and most imposing, as well as most perfect in architectural effects, of any like building in New England. Its style of architecture is of an original composite nature, resembling Trinity church in Boston, though in some respects it is more beautiful than Trinity for the reason that the original designs for its embellishment were not in the least interfered with by the building committee, who allowed the master hand of the architect to have full sway. The plans for this building were completed and accepted by the committee about the middle of April, 1877, and the contract signed by them and Messrs. Norcross Bros. of Worcester, May 22d following. The contract specified that the material to be used in its construction should be of McGregor stone from the Longmeadow quarries at Springfield, relieved by Ohio cream-colored sandstone trimmings, and the roof covered with Akron, Ohio, moulded and vitrified tile of a deep red color. The contractors also agreed to lay the foundation, put in gas, water and drainage pipes, heating apparatus, shelving for books, &c., and complete the building ready for occupancy by Oct. 1, 1898, for the sum of $71,-625.50.

The structure is massively and firmly planted in a large open lot at a slight elevation above the street, and with a plenty of breathing space all around, relieved by the distant and rugged hill of Rag Rock as a background. At the main entrance on Pleasant street, a symmetrical tower rises to the height of 78 feet from the front of the transept, with a cloistered porch at its base. As one walks up the slate walk and steps upon the tesselated tile floor of the porch, the first object to arrest his attention is the memorial tablet directly in front, and beautifully carved in cream colored Ohio sandstone. The base is a settee, extending across the porch, above which is the inscription taken from the donor's will, viz: "This building was erected in memory of Jonathan Bowers Winn, from funds bequeathed by his son for the use, benefit and improvement of the people of Woburn;" crowning which is the coat of arms beautifully carved, bearing the inscription, "By the name of Winn." From the entrance lobby to the left, a flight of 36 steps in the tower leads to rooms above, while a door in the lobby to the right opens into the art gallery with its open timbered roof through which a fine light is obtained on the 52 pictures bequeathed by Mr. Winn. This room in size is 22 x 28 feet, with blackwalnut floor and wainscoting, while a massive railing surmounted with brass finish, protects the pictures from a too near approach of visitors. The walls are painted a light olive which is in close sympathy with the pictures and their gilt frames, the upper walls being of a lighter shade and separated from the lower by a dark stripe, all being in strict harmony with the art treasures herein contained. To the right through an arched passageway, is the room designed for a museum, unoccepied at present, octagonal in shape, with a conical roof, and is about 30 feet in diameter. The walls as high as the windows, are painted a deep red, with dark stripes at top and bottom, while above the windows the color is of a light cream shade, producing a rich and pleasing effect by the sharp contrast. Floriated capitals separate the windows, beneath which project single gas jets. The ceiling is frescoed with stripes running from the sides to the apex, the floor and wainscoting being laid in chestnut. Between these two rooms is the janitor's wash-room and water closets, triangular in shape, with all modern improvements. To the left of the art gallery is the noble reading-room, highly walled and decorated in perfect synchromy of subdued tones; on the opposite side of this room from the entrance is the librarian's desk from which he has an unobstructed view of the whole length of the building. This room is the largest of all, being 36 by 24 feet, at the north end of which is a beautiful stone arched fireplace supported on either side by two short Corinthian columns on which are carved the Winn family coat of arms, which to the initiated is "Vert, three eagles displayed in fesse, or, crest, a lion's head displayed on." These surmount the family legend, "Virtute et labore," which translated means "By Honesty and Diligence." The finish of the walls and ceiling of this room is of butternut oiled and polished, the floor being laid in ash. Around the four sides of the room are two rows of drawers, above which are two rows of shelves for books and statuary. The walls are painted a light gray with a wide band of a darker shade at the bottom. From the reading room is an impressive view down the lofty nave of the library proper, at the entrance to which is the desk of the librarian protected on either side by small iron doors of a neat and tasty openwork design. This room is 67 feet long by 30 wide, with fourteen alcoves for books, seven on a side, separated by the columns supporting the circular arched ceiling. The floor is of Southern pine, the ceiling of butternut, the shelving and other finish being of Michigan pine, all finished in the native wood. The columns supporting the roof and galleries are surmounted by floriated caps of leaves, vines and flowers, delicately carved, and in excellent harmony with their surroundings, no two being alike. Spiral iron stairways on either side and in the rear of the librarian's desk lead to the book alcoves in the gallery above, to support which iron girders extend from the walls of the building to the wooden posts, separating the alcoves. There are shelves on two sides with a walk extending the entire length of the room back of them, protected in front by an iron balustrade of neat and tasty pattern and conforming in shape to the curves of the alcoves. Light to this room is admitted through windows, the upper sash of which is of small panes of glass, while the lower is of a large single pane, the architectual effect of which is fine.

In the second story above the reading-room is a spacious and well-lighted room for the use of the library oommittee, with convenient cloak-rooms adjoining, and in the rear of these are the living rooms for the janitor and his family, fitted up with all the modern conveniences of cooking range, sink, hot and cold water, boilers, water closets, etc.

The furniture of the library, consisting of ten tables and thirty chairs and settees, are all constructed of solid oak and put together without the aid of screw or nail, was designed and made by the contractors and is of a substantial and unique design in perfect harmony with the other finish of the building. In the northerly part of the basement are located the steam heating apparatus, coal bins, etc., by means of which steam is carried to coils of pipe incased in zinc directly beneath the floors, by which the air is heated and passed through registers to the rooms above. The southerly part of the basement has been fitted up with wooden benches and tables and at present contains an antique colonial kitchen, fitted up with genuine old-fashioned furniture, such as was in use one-hundred and more years ago, and which has been principally collected together for the purpose by a few public spirited antiquarians of this town.

In the construction of this building special care and pains were taken to guard against moisture and fire, the two most dreaded elements in buildings of a like character, and to avoid these as much as possible, the walls were built of double thickness with a dead air space between and thoroughly painted inside with a thick coat of asphaltum, the floor spaces being filled in solid with a fire-proof composition of cinders, lime and plaster, while the necessary pipes for water and gas are carried up in spaces specially prepared for them in the walls.

There was used in its construction 325,000 bricks, 5000 feet of Ohio sandstone, 15,000 feet of Longmeadow stone, 225 bushels of cement, 500 bushels of lime, 8000 square feet of Akron tile, besides the stone used for the foundation.

The total value to the town in money from this magnificent gift of Mr. Winn, may be generally summarized as follows:

Original legacy from executors,	$140,000 00
Two-thrds of the residue of estate,	42.286 16
From pictures,	15,768 50
From interest on investment,	15,122 79
From rents, sale of buildings, fences, etc.,	7,850 70
Total receipts from all sources to March 1, 1881.	$221,028 15
Of this large amount there have been expended for construction of building, heating apparatus, fixtures, architect, &c.	$95,305 24
Paid for real estate,	27,638 44
Paid for books,	15,281 50
Paid out for pictures,	13,500 00
Expenses of catalogues, stationery, &c.	6,907 20
Discount on U. S. Bonds sold,	4,138 50
	$162,770 88

Being the total cost of present building and contents, leaving a balance still unexpended in the hands of the committee, of $58,257.27 to the first of March, 1881.

From the last annual report of Mr. Geo. M. Champney, the librarian, it is learned that during the past year, with the population of the town at 11,024, 2,463 persons availed themselves of its privileges and took out 57,776 volumes.

The total number of volumes in the library at that time was 18,633
And of pamphlets, 3,884
Whole number, 22,517

Of which number 754 volumes and 519 pamphlets were added the past year. The annual cost to the town for salaries, fuel, light, &c., was, $2,866.38.

Back Ache

POSITIVELY CURED BY Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First. Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second. Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third. Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth. Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth. Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use,

Sixth. Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

ASSUMING COMMAND.

"You are directed to proceed to Malacca by the first opportunity, and assume command of the artillery ot that station, relieving Lieut. Armstrong."

It was in pursuance of the above order that I embarked at Penang, on board the good bark Elise, commanded by Capt. Dore. She was a vessel of six hundred tons, carrying a crew of Serangs and twelve native sailors, under the command of Capt. Dore and his three mates, and was on her first voyage from Calcutta to Hong Kong, calling at Penang, Malacca and Singapore.

My native servant, Ram Buksh, and I were the only passengers, and hoped to reach our destination in three days.

"We are not fitted up for passenger traffic, Mr. Spaulding," said the captain; "but I will try to make the voyage a pleasant one. This is my first trip in these seas, and I have not yet had time to fit up the ship as I purchased her in Calcutta a short time since. Next voyage I hope all will be in order, and my wife and children may be able to accompany me."

"Soldiers, Capt. Dare, are easily satisfied, and I feel sure I shall be very comfortable. It is a lovely morning, and I expect we shall have a very short trip to Malacca."

"I hope so," he said; "but in these straits the weather is very treacherous, I hear, and the squalls are frequent and brisk."

"Sqalls, as you say, captain, are very bad around here," I replied; "but the real danger of the straits are the pirates that infest every creek along the coast. You have of course heard about them?"

"People in Calcutta told me tales of pirates," said Capt. Dore, "and urged me to take guns on board; but I don't believe the stories I heard."

"I hope you have guns on board, sir," I answered, "for at times when becalmed, or with a very light breeze blowing, these Malay pirates attack vessels and murder everyone on board. I have a revolver if you have any amunition."

"Not one grain of powder on board," said the captain laughing. "If the pirates do attack us, I have no doubt we can defend ourselves."

"We certainly will try," I replied. "But the Malays have a disagreeable way of throwing stink-pots on board, and when from fear of suffocation the crew are driven below, they jump on board, batten down the hatches, and take possession of the ship.' Saying this I descend to my cabin, and the bark was soon under full sail.

At four o'clock we had dinner. I then made the acquaintance of the mates. The first mate was an old salt, who was accustomed to being shipwrecked. The second and third officers were boys, who had been at sea only a few years. As dinner was nearly over, the boatswain (Serang) reported a dark object in the distance, which appeared to be trailing along on our starboard. We all left the table and went on deck, where the third officer was on watch. We then saw a low black cloud on the horizon, which foretold a squall, but between the vessel and it there arose a thick black column, which appeared to be moving across the ship's course.

It was recognized as a water-spout, and turning to Capt. Dore, I said:—

"You will soon have occasion to wish you had a cannon on board if that spout comes near to us."

We stood axiously watching the column of water as it gradually approached, and, passing about four hundred yards from the vessel, kept on its course. In the meantime the black cloud which had attracted no particular notice, had in half an hour risen high over our heads, and the wind began to come in strong puffs across the smooth sea.

"All hands take in sail!" roared out Capt. Dore, as he saw a black line of waves bearing down upon us; but the order came too late.

"Keep her head up! Helm hard a port!" fairly screamed the astonished commander, as, with a report like a cannon, the foretopsail split into ribbons, and the topmast, broken off at the cross trees, was hanging a wreck by our side; a deluge of rain, with loud claps of thunder and vivid, forked lightning, made a scene of incomparable grandeur.

The first burst of the squall over, all danger was past, and although for half an hour the wind continued with great force, no further damage was done. In an hour's time the sky was clear again, and nothing remained to tell of the passing squall but the wreck aloft.

Two days after the above accident the Elise was sailing along about twelve miles from the Malacca coast, and we expected to make the roads the following morning, when at sunset the watch reported a large boat with a lateen sail, bearing down toward us. All eyes were turned in the direction of the approaching vessel.

"She looks uncanny," the first mate said. "If I were you, Capt. Dore, I would give her a wide berth. She does not look like a trader, and I for one do not care to make any closer acquaintance with her."

"Keep her away," the captain replied, "and let us stand out a bit. If the wind holds we can easily sail away from her"

"Scarcely likely the mate replied, as the ship answered her helm, and brought the stranger astern of us. "And look," he said, "she is full now of men as she appeared deserted before, and, by heavens! they are getting out oars. She is so light she can overhaul us, and if the wind drops we shall be captured."

"We must keep our course till night comes on," said the captain, "and then try and tack, and avoid her. Give orders to put out the galley-fires, and show no lights."

Anxiously we watched the evening gaining on us, and wished the short tropical twilight would end, for in darkness was our only hope of escape.

Capt. Dore called me into his cabin, and, pointing to his chart, said to me, this place is well chosen by those rascals in that boat. I find that we can only make short tacks here—there are shoals on either side of the channel—and I can only get away from them by sailing over one part of the shoal ahead of us, at the high tide, which is now up, the vessel can just get across it, but beyond is the dangerous Pyramid shoal, to avoid which I chose the narrow passage. There seems to be no other course open to us but to risk the possibility of grounding."

"I fear you are right, sir," I replied, "it will be as well to be murdered on a stranded vessel as in mid channel, defenseless as we are. I see nothing else for you to do."

"I will try it," replied the captain, and we both went on deck. It was dark as pitch when he reached the quarter deck; no signs of the vessel behind us could be seen, but that it was not far off we knew.

"Keep her on the present course," said Capt. Dore to the officer on watch, "and I will give orders when to tack." The sky, fortunately, clouded over, and a sharp squall commenced to blow. Anxiously peering into the darkness astern of us, the hours slowly passed away. At midnight the order was given to put the ship about.

"Now," said Capt. Dore, "I feel easy; I believe we have passed north of Pyramid, and on this tack will clear its southern extremity. What an agony of pain I have suffured during the last few hours. The thought of my poor wife and children has quite unmanned me."

"I believe those scamps in the piratical craft have given up the pursuit in the darkness," I said to cheer him, "and the squall will have stopped them."

We had been on the new tack about an hour when all at once the vessel struck with a thump that made every mast in her shake—a second heavy thump, and we were fairly grounded on the Pyramid rock. The sea, which had become rough, owing to the wind, began to lift the bark, and every moment or so it came down with a terrific crash on the rocks below, making every timber in the good ship crack and snap. A boat was at once lowered, under the first mate, with four sailors to put out a kedge anchor, to try and work the vessel off the rocks, but it had scarcely got twenty yards away when a heave sea struck and capsized it, sending all the five men in her to a watery grave.

Going down into the cabin, I found Capt. Dore seated at the end of the saloon table, with a bottle of brandy in front of him. "Come along, Mr. Spaulding," he said.—"We are all bound for Davy Jones' locker so let's go merrily. There's nothing to be done. No boat can live in that sea, and if it could, the crew wouldn't launch it; so sit down and wait your fate.

"I will go and see the other officers, sir," I said, and went into the cabin of the young mates, whom I found busy tearing up letters and papers, getting ready to hold on to any wreckage, till some passing ship might find and pick them up.

"Can't we get that big boat overboard!" I asked.

"Not a chance. She would be staved in before she was in the water a minute, and the crew—the disgusting cowards—won't work!"

"Life is worth saving at any price," I replied. "If you two will go aloft, I will go with you and help rig the tackle."

Both the young officers laughed as they said: "You go aloft at such a time as this? Impossible!"

Then one of them said: "If you'll fix the tackle below, we will go up and see what can be done."

"Ram Busksh and I will do the work on deck, then," I said, considerably crestfallen at the merriment my offer had caused; and the two young fellows swarmed up the rigging like cats, the native crew sullenly looking on, not offering the least aid.

With difficulty all was got in order to hoist the boat up. We then went down into the cabin and got ready to start, and a very curious set we looked when we appeared on deck. Boots and socks had been discarded; a flannel shirt and a pair of trowsers was what we each wore, and I had a red brewer's cap on my head—prepared, if need be, to swim for life.

Everything being ready, we induced the native sailors to give a hand, and were fortunate enough to get the boat safely launched. To put in oars, etc, and scramble in was the work of a few moments, and then we pushed off, not many minutes too soon, for the Elise, almost immediately afterward, gave a heavy thump and then sank stern foremost.

We took to the oars, and despite the heavy sea, managed to make some progress. We knew that daylight would soon come, and hoped some sail would be in sight which we could signal. At any rate, twenty or thirty miles would take us to shore, and a trudge of another thirty miles bring us safely on to British soil. Day dawned without our seeing any vessel, so we concluded to push on for the mainland, which we reached late in the afternoon.

The Malay cost is not a hospitable one for a shipwrecked crew to be thrown upon, for the natives would certainly murder us for the sake of our scant clothing consequently we hurried up to the beach and concealed ourselves in the jungle until night came on again.

As soon as it was dark we made a start to walk to Malacca along the beach. The tide was at high water, and compelled us to reef close under the forest. The darkness was impenetrable, and our feet were terribly lacerated by broken shells and sharp-pointed twigs, while brambles tore our trowsers into shreds. For hours we plodded on, not uttering a word, except an exclamation of pain as some one was hurt or fell on the way. We waded innumerable small streams, and as the day began to break reached Tanjong Lhing, the extreme northern point of Malacca colony. Ten miles more on a fair road brought us to Malacca.

My companions at once sought the harbor master, and I went in search of Armstrong's quarters, which I found in the house on the esplanade.

"Master not at home, and no wantee no European loafers, no can makee doee that pigion business," said a Chinese water-carrier I found at the door, and I felt the man was right, for a dirtier, blood-stained traveler never tried to force admittance into a house. Espying Armstrong seated in the verandah up-stairs, I called out to him.

"Who are you, and what do you want?" was the reply I received.

"I am Spaulding my dear fellow, and come to relieve you in your command."

"You, Spaulding? How on earth did you ever get in such a condition," he asked.

"Let me in and I will tell you all about it," I replied. "I am nearly dead with fatigue, and am cut and bruised to pieces."

In a moment my old college-companion was down-stairs, and, helping me up to his rooms, assisted me to wash and dress my wounds, and over breakfast we both agreed a more disreputable condition to arrive in and take over a command had never yet been realized. My companions in trouble were sent on to Signapore in a schooner sailing the same day, after having been clothed and fed in the most hospitable manner by the residents of Malacca.

NEW BOOKS.

EXPLOITS AND VOYAGES OF RALEIGH. By George Makepeace Towle. Lee & Shepard. pp. 273. $1.25.

This volume belongs to the Young Folks Heroes of History Series, and, like the others, is full of valuable information for the youth who would have a clear and truthful knowledge of the hardship and exposures, the indomitable energy and perseverance of those who risked all in search of new countries. Foremost among the valiant host of explorers, which past centuries have furnished, Raleigh will command the admiration of mankind as one of the most vigorous explorers who, braving the stormy seas and the perils of savage lands, sought to found colonies from whose shores heavily laden vessels now bear the blessings of civilization and commerce around the world.

BOSTON TOWN. By Horace E. Scudder. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 243. $1.50.

Printed on heavy paper, beautifully bound and illustrated. This book cannot fail of having an immense sale. Aside from its artistic attractions the contents are such as to meet the wants of all who would see the great city of to-day as it was in old Colony times. Seeking the most reliable sources of information, Mr. Scudder has drawn largely from the experience of some of Boston's old-time merchants, whose memory has served them well in relating the exciting scenes of the times which tried men's souls, as told them by their ancestors who took an active part in the movements which gained our independence. By these means we get many points in Boston's past proud history which, while they will be new to many, will be read with pleasure by all.

THE WHITTIER BIRTHDAY BOOK. Arranged by Elizabeth S. Owen. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 402. $1.00

A companion volume to the Longfellow and Emerson books, and is tastefully bound and illustrated. As a specimen of perfect work it deserves much praise, while the large and admirably arranged selections of the best of the honored Poet's writings have an additional value in a life-like portrait, and illustrations representing the seasons. No library is complete without a copy of each of these tributes to the worth of this trio of worthies whose memory will be cherished wherever the English language is spoken.

COUNTRY BY-WAYS. By Sarah Orne Jewett. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 249. $1.25.

A more perfect description of the pleasures of country life than this, and all told with that freedom and beauty of description which will tempt the denizens of crowded cities to hie away from the heat and dust, the continued whirl and excitement of city life to a home where they can wander among the beauties of nature, breath the pure air and enjoy the rest never found in the busy marts of trade. Those who seem to delight in criticising the style and language of authors, would soon find their occupation gone if all books were as faultless as this.

Few books are published which contain so much reading that are not more bulky. Some may object to the small type, but for the size it is very clear, and the fact that so much that is really worth reading is contained in so small a space will compensate for all objections. The story is one of Mr. James's best, and that is saying much when we consider the large amount he has written. Free from the sensational gush which detracts much from many otherwise readable novels, it deserves a high rank amsng works of fiction.

A HOME IDYL, AND OTHER POEMS. By John Townsend Trowbridge. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 165. $1.25.

In order to give our readers a better idea of the value of this book we give the list of contents, which will show a greater variety than is often found in books of larger size. A Home Idyl; Old Robin; Pleasant Street; Menotony Lake; The Indian Camp; Idyl, of Harvest time; The Old Burying-ground; A Story of the Barefoot Boy; Recollections of Lalla Rookh; Filling an Order; The Old Man of the Mountains; Under the Moon and Stars; Sonnets; The Tragedy Queen; The Old Lobsterman; Old Man Gram; The Isle of Lambs; The Boy I Love; Ancestors; Two-score and Ten. The opening piece, A Home Idyl, describing the life a newly married couple from their first settlement in the wilderness, gives a good view of the material by which the forest is cleared and towns and cities rise as by magic.

SEVEN LITTLE PEOPLE AND THEIR FRIENDS. By Horace E. Scudder. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 240.

No collection of Christmas gifts will be complete without a copy of this book. Few writers have the happy faculty of interesting children so well as Mr. Scudder; and anything from his pen is sure of a hearty welcome. This happy family of seven after a marked experience in furnishing real enjoyment for many, have bid adieu to their former home and gone out into the world to continue on a larger scale their mission of pleasing descriptions of child-life to the thousands who will be made happier and better by them.

WASHINGTON IRVING. By Charles Dudley Warner. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. pp. 302.

More than two decades have passed since the man who for half a century charmed and instructed the American people, laid down his pen, but it has been reserved for this author to give us the best description of the life and labors of him whose sacred remains now rest on a little elevation overlooking the Sleepy Hollow which he had made an enchanted realm, and the beautiful Hudson he loved so well. His strong faith in sincerity, integrity, purity, and charity to add value to literature, mark him as one of the most charming writers yet produced, and while many works soon lose their hold on the readers mind, the lover of the true and beautiful will cling closer to Irving's as years pass on.

Mr. William R. Seymour of Columbus, O., writes: "I attended a course of lectures several winters ago at the Ohio Medical College of Cincinnati, O. There I was taught that 'Iron is a prominent element in the physical organism of mankind: without it life is an impossibility. A vast percentage of the diseases and premature deaths to which the race is subject, is caused, or at least made possible by a weakening of the body in consequence of a lack of Iron in the blood.' Having suffered from ill-health poor digestion and urinary troubles ever since I recovered from typhoid fever, complicated with malarial fever, I determined to give Iron a trial. From investigation I learned that Brown's Iron Bitters were the best, and that they did not blacken the teeth, so I concluded to make use of them. They have acted like a charm. I never before felt so robust, hearty and strong."

The Prospectus of the NEW YORK OBSERVER, the organ of Presbyterianism in this country, is published in the JOURNAL this, and may be found in our advertising columns. Besides being a staunch religious journal the OBSERVER is one of the very best family papers published, and enjoys a circulation second to none in America. It is "old and reliable," and those who are about to subscribe for a paper for the home circle should send for a specimen copy of it.

"The mill will never grind with the water that is past," maybe, but the hand-organ grinds right along with the airs that are past a couple of hundred years.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ Just one single copy of Watson's Illuminator, published by Will Watson, at Biddeford, Maine, is worth more than fifty cents. the subscription price for a year, such heaps and heaps of rollicking jollity does it contain. The December issue is brimful and running over with mirth and fun and all sorts of side-splitting reading; and we give it as our candid, unbiased opinion that no man nor woman knows much about the bright side of life unless he or she is a constant reader of the Illuminator. And we don't ask anything for the opinion either.

☞ Congressman Reed of the Maine First Disrict has arrived at Washington and entered on his canvass for the Speakership. With the solid New England delegation at his back, a fair amount of energy and work might secure him the election; but his constitutional repugnance to hard labor may defeat him after all.

☞ In its last week's issue the Medford Mercury gives Mr. H. Cabot Lodge a very severe scoring, the true inwardness of which is, that that paper is stongly in favor of, and will support, General Lawrence of Medford for Congress next fall But if its candidate does not exhibit more pluck than he did last year he will hardly secure the prize.

☞ The trial of Guiteau increases in interest day by day. Since the attempt on his life last Saturday he has been more strictly guarded, and it may be he will get through without being shot. Mr. Scoville, his counsel and brother-in-law, is proving himself a clear-headed man and shrewd, careful lawyer.

☞ We sincerely hope that our esteemed neighbor, the Winchester Star, has not got its back up again; but having failed to put in an appearance at this office for a week or two we greatly fear that such may possibly be the case.

☞ The Kennebec Journal, Mr. Blaine's home organ, says that the distnguished Secretary of State will retire from politics on quitting the Cabinet next week, and for the next few years devote himself to his private affairs.

☞ The extra session of the Legislature closed its labors and ajourned last Saturday. For some reason or other the Boston papers expressed considerable gratification over the early adjournment.

☞ Concerning the M. V. R. R. this is true: the bargain for its transfer to new hands has been made: money has been paid over on the contract: there is now a slight hitch in the consummation of the trade.

☞ The Republicans of Boston have nominated Dr. Samuel A. Green for Mayor. He is a good man, and may possibly be elected.

— This, Friday, morning, is about as winterish as we want to see it.

— We are indebted to Mr. Warren Teel for "Dick" Richardson's Davenport (Iowa) Democrat, and other western papers, for which we return thanks.

— Next Sunday, Rev. Edward Mills will preach his farewell sermon at the Baptist church. We shall be disappointed if he does not address a houseful.

— Town Clerk Seeley had a safe put into his office last week which turned the scales at five tons. The public records will be perfectly safe in that monster lock-up.

— Dealers in clothing have had a rousing good trade this week. Cold weather brings men to a realizing sense of their need of something to wear quicker than almost anything else.

— Snow began to fall on Wednesday evening at five o'clock, and continued well into the night. About four inches fell, but the warm sun of Thursday carried off a good deal of it.

— There has been some freezing done by the weather this week, and the boys and girls will take notice that they can begin to get their skates in readiness unless it moderates pretty soon.

— The "Woburn Public Library" created a big demand for last week's issue of the JOURNAL, and nearly the whole edition went off like a house a-fire, so to speak. We have a few copies left.

— Frank Pierce has been closing out his old stock of shoes at prices that astonish everybody. They are not quite gone, and those who would secure big bargains should visit his store at once.

— The Messrs. Grammer have sold their dwelling-house on the far side of Warren street, occupied by Mr. C. M. Strout. And now Mr. Strout adds his voice to the great multitude that demand more good tenements in town.

— The powerful rains in the last couple of weeks or so have fixed the streams, ponds and swamps out with tallowed rags, figuratively speaking. They will manage to get along for months without any more moisture to fill up on.

— Mr. Charles S. Parker, the genial editor of the Arlington Advocate, took his turkey and divine services in Woburn on Thanksgiving Day.

— Raffling parties were quite numerous in this town on Wednesday evening. Turkeys were more generally raffled for than anything, though ducks and other poultry were not given the cold shoulder to.

— Run your optical organ over Mr. Cummings's advertisement now and tell us what you think of it. By the way, Mr. C. sets a very good example in advertising which other business men in Woburn would do well to pattern after.

— The alarm for school purposes has been changed from 8.30 to 8.15 A. M.; and from 11.15 A. M. to 1.15 P. M. So when there is to be no session in the forenoon the bell will strike at 8.15 o'clock; and when none in the afternoon, at 1.15 o'clock.

— At the Annual Convocation of Woburn Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, Wednesday evening last, the following officers were elected: Thomas S. Spurr, M. E. H. P. Charles A. Sweetser, E. K.; Albert A. Ferrin, E. S.; Horace Collamore, Treasurer; Sparrow Horton, Secretary.

— If Col. Blanck, a well-known Boston editor, had taken an intelligent guide with him to the summit of Horn Pond mountain when he visited it a few days since, he would have been introduced to some very interesting Indian relics to be found thereon, with valuable legends chiseled out on some of them. As it was he probably didn't see anything of the kind.

— We fear that the religious teachings of yesterday fell, in a great measure, on barren ground, for it was observed that a large number of young men and maidens attended the Boston theatres in the evening, which would have been otherwise had the admonitions aforesaid been heeded.

— Although it is Thanksgiving week, and "benders" are more commonly in vogue, business at the Police Court has not been rushing. John Doherty, a young man of 19 years, was committed to the Danvers Insane Asylum on Monday by officer Simonds. Thomas Bishop, for assault and battery some months since, paid $1 and costs.

— The telephone has got along bright and early with head and tail up, and with hat in hand respectfully solicits Woburn's good will. After using it six months it will be the greatest wonder in the world to our folks how they ever got along without telephones. We understand that Mr. William H. Matthews will have the management of the exchange here, and an excellent man he will be for the place.

— The blood-curdling recital of the terrible mangling of a boy by an engine on the Mystic Valley R. R., whispered into the auricular machinery of a confiding newspaper man by Chief Conn, last Monday morning, was a hoax from beginning to end. There is every reason to believe that Conn made the whole thing up out of nothing for diligent investigation on the part of the newspaper man afore-said failed to disclose that there had recently been any kind of an accident on the M. V. R R.

— With visions of that Thanksgiving gobbler constantly before our eyes how can the readers of the JOURNAL reasonably expect of us this week the best paper that was ever printed? It would be unjust. You may say that the glorious vision should not have been allowed to interfere with our duty towards the public. Perhaps so. But then that is easier said than done—duty is one thing: fat Thanksgiving gobblers are quite another. And so, averaging it, we have done as well as we could, and have no apologies to offer.

— After the Lodge had been closed in due and regular form, last Monday evening, the members of Crystal Fount Lodge No. 9, I. O. O. F., repaired in a body to the residence of Mr. Orlando M. Brooks, on Kilby street, and presented that worthy brother with an elegant easy-chair, and his respected wife with a handsome book table. The presentation address was made by P. G., E. D. Layton, on behalf of the members, who thus generously recognized the valuable services Mr. Brooks had rendered the Lodge as its Treasurer for eight years. The address was a very happy one, the whole affair in the highest degree pleasant and agreeable, and it was a perfect surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Brooks.

— Mr. Fred. Leeds, the druggist, supplies nice hot soda with coffee, chocolate and other syrups, which are really delicious. It is a good thing and we trust his fountains will be well patronized. We have an idea that his hot wholesome drinks will lessen the sale of ale, beer and "hard stuff" and in that way become a successful auxiliary to the temperance reform. An opportunity is offered to men, who think they need a dram, to drop in and get a mug of fragant hot coffee, or cream syrups, with which they will be a great deal better satisfied than with a glass of aqua fortis under the name of rum, and it will not rob them of their brains and manhood. Temperance people ought to encourage Mr. Leeds, and give his pleasant store the character of coffee-rooms, with no death-and-destruction attachments to them.

— On the line of the Woburn Branch Railroad between Woburn and Winchester, stand several large leather manufactories, among the largest in the State. Upon them there is no sign or mark to indicate the owners or the variety of goods they make. The proprietors of these factories are largely identified with the prosperity and business interests of the town, and their names ought to be so associated. There are a great many strangers from all parts of the country riding over the road at various times, and as they carry away impressions of Woburn, there ought with them to be associated the names of these firms who have helped to make Woburn what it is in manufacturing importance. It seems to us that it would also be for the business interests of these firms if they would display in conspicuous letters on their factories, not only the name of the firm, but the variety of goods of which they make a specialty. It is due to themselves. It seems due to travellers and strangers, and even to our own residents; and it seems due to the business reputation of the town abroad.

***

— Thanksgiving Day was very quiet, the Police reporting but few arrests.

— Please read the professional card of the Messrs. Briggs in this paper.

— Gracious, but isn't the Boston Branch selling flour cheap, though! You bet!

— Thomas J. White, Esq., has commenced the erection of a dwelling-house on the land he recently bought on Scott street.

— Hon. John Cummings presented each of his employes with a nice great Thanksgiving turkey to feel grateful over yesterday. It was a generous thing to do.

— Mr. E. W. Hudson is doing the right thing for himself and town, viz: he is about to erect eight dwelling-houses near the corner of Canal and Sturgess streets. They will be snatched up in a hurry.

— Since the introduction of steam as a heater into the Police headquarters things are very comfortable and cozy-like there. It is to be hoped the occupants will not coddle the radiator too persistantly.

— The Boston Sunday morning papers can be had at Mr. Cooper's news stand at the depot, on the arrival of the Sunday morning trains; also the Boston Dailies through the week. Very nice cigars are also kept for sale by Mr. Cooper.

— Thomas H. Bradley, who was a member of Co. K, 39th Regt. Mass. Vols., and who since the war has resided in California, has been in Woburn the past two weeks. Mr. Bradley was wounded in the service very similar to President Garfield, and was attended in Armory Square Hospital by the celebrated Dr. Bliss, who, in some of his statements regarding the President, has alluded to the case of Bradley.

— The announcement of Messrs. Charles W. Baldwin & Co., will attract the attention of all desiring goods in their line. These gentlemen so long at 338 Washington street, have removed to more convenient quarters at 24, 26 and 28 Bedford street, where they will be glad to see all their old friends and welcome the many new ones who will be attraeted to their new store and well selected stock of goods.

— On Wednesday evening Rodney P. Forsyth, ostler for the No. Woburn Street Railway Co., who makes the 4 o'clock trip for the regular driver, fell in a fit from his car when opposite the Postoffice and was taken up in an unconcious condition and conveyed to the office of Dr. Dodge. He escaped serious injury, was restored to consciousness and returned to his home at No. Woburn, where we learn he had a second fit soon after arriving.

— The service of song held by the Y. M. C. A. at their rooms on Sunday afternoon, was one of the best yet held by the Association. Mrs. G. H. Luce, pianist, assisted by T. H. Marrinan, cornetist, gave valuable assistance to the service. The meeting was very spirited, showing great earnestness by the brethren in their efforts to try and save the young men of this town. These meetings cannot but be productive of much good if continued in the same spirit that was manifested at the meeting on Snnday afternoon. One encouraging feature of this meeting was the large number of yonng men in attendance who must have been benefited by the meeting. We may not see the fruit of this meeting at the present time, but seed was sown which will spring up and bear fruit, and who can tell what the harvest will be!

— Some of the Boston papers of last Monday stated for a positive fact that the Mystic Valley railroad had been sold to wealthy parties for fifteen cents on a dollar of its cost, and that the same would be completed and running within a brief period of time. Parties in Woburn who ought to know say there is nothing in the report and no foundation for it; notwithstanding which we are inclined to throw in an interrogation point or two. Railroad men are proverbially reticent especially when they are incubating some kinds of business; and it would not surprise us any if the Mystic Valley roadbed, charter and franchises were about to change hands. Four months ago a prominent man in the concern said to us, sub rosa, that Woburn would have another railroad within eighteen months from that date, which prediction, from such a source, we have rolled like a sweat morsel under our tongue ever since.

— Last Saturday morning about half-past seven o'clock, the neighbors of Mrs. Matilda Raymond, living on Church street, were attracted by calls for help. Mrs. Cassidy, who lives in a part of Mrs. Raymoud's house, and Mrs. King, living on Church Court, responded to her demand, seeing her at the chamber window. They found the front door locked, and entered by a rear door which was unlocked. Upon entering the front entry they found considerable blood upon the floor, and going up stairs saw Mrs. R. in bed, dressed. She said she heard it rain, and thinking to get some rain water, went down stairs and out the back door, placing a tub under the spout, and returning to the front entry to go up stairs, she was struck a blow between the eyes from the effects of which she fell senseless, and there remained for sometime. When she came to herself, which must have been somewhat over an hour afterward, she got strength enough to regain her room and bed, first calling for aid. The police and Doctor Bartlett were summoned, and Mrs. R. was found to have received several severe blows about the eyes and nose, and her head was so sweten she was unable to see. A cut was found on either side of the nose, one of which made a large opening, and appeared to have been done with a rough instrument. The police, who have carefully examined the matter, are satisfied that some person took advantage of the old lady's being up at that hour, and the morning being dark, entered the back door as she went and as she moved slowly, and being slightly deaf, this was accomplished easily—went out into the front entry which would have been perfectly dark, and struck her the blows, above described, and then left the house. The villian who made this assault must have seen Mrs. R. leave the house, and took the opportunity thus offered. No person, a stranger to the old lady's habits, went into that house that morning—for it has not been her custom to arise at that hour. The police will leave no stone unturned to bring the party to justice.

— Samuel Chapman the colored man, who stole Uncle Lemuel Howard's best clothes last February, and whom the officers have been looking for since, was captured in Cambridge Wednesday.

— The investigation of the charges against Policeman Gallagher of North Woburn, still continues before the Committee. They say it is about as good as a circus, and at the rate it is going on a "month of Sundays" will elapse before it is concluded. Mr. J. G. Maguire conducts the case for the petitioners, and Mr. B. E. Bond for the respondant.

— At a few minutes past one o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, an alarm of a fire in the Centre was sounded, and in a few moments it was discovered that the upper stories of Mr. Amos Cummings's large millinery establishment occupied by Mr. Cummings and family and Mrs. George Andrews were burning. The fire companies were promptly on hand and soon put a period to a fire which, if it had broken out in the night, would have amounted to a very large and destructive conflagration. It was the opinion of the engineers, after examining the premises, that the fire originated from an over-heated range in Mr. Peter Kenney's kitchen, between which and the Cummings and Andrews tenements only a single partition stood. Mr. Kenney was preparing dinners for two public parties, and as the range stood quite near the partition, the uncommon heat from it ignited the highly combustable composition of the wall, and the upper part of Mr. Cummings's building was instantly in a blaze, the damage to which by the fire amounted to about $500. Mr. Kenney's loss was not very severe; Mr. B. F. Wyer's market pretty well drowned out; but the whole interior of the Cummings building was the principal suffer by the streams of water poured into them. Proprietor, wife and clerks worked well and saved many goods, but the rooms were anything but inviting after the flood. Mr. Cummings's loss by water was estimated at $2,500; by fire $500, and the whole was amply insured in good companies by Mr. George H. Conn, of Woburn and Boston. The losses of Mr. Kenney and Mr. Wyer had not been fixed at last accounts.

BURLINGTON.

ENTERTAINMENT.—The course of entertainments to be given this season, for the benefit of the church, will commence next Tuesday evening, with a concert by the Amphion Quartette of Arlington, assisted by Mr. Marcus Morton, reader. The concerts and lectures will be given in the Town Hall, and tickets for the course will be ready this week. The price of season tickets will be one dollar each, an extremely low price for six fine entertainments. The lecture committee, chosen to superintend the course are Rev. Charles Anderson, Mr. George W. Austin, Mr. John W. Hutchinson, Mrs. M. E. Sewall-Curtis, and Miss Leila J. Walker.

(Worcester [Mass] Spy.)

Nothing on Earth so Good.

Certainly a strong opinion, said one of our reporters to whom the following was detailed by Mr. Henry Kaschop, with Mr. Geo. E. Miller, 418 Main Streer, this city: I suffered so badly with rheumatism in my leg last winter, that I was unable to attend to my work, being completely helpless. I heard of St. Jacobs Oil and bought a bottle, after using which I felt greatly relieved. With the use of the second bottle I was completely cured. In my estimation there is nothing on earth so good for rheumatism as St. Jacobs Oil. It acts like a charm.

NORTH WOBURN.

The Boston Parlor Concert given here last week in the Chapel Course, was one of the finest entertainments our people have been treated to for a long time. It gave great satisfaction to all, and I am glad to say it was a financial success, as well as otherwise.

A Baby Saved.

Since birth my baby had running sores all over its head, and the doctors said that he must die, for they could not heal them. I used everything I ever heard of, but it did no good. He got so bad he would not nurse. My husband's sister told me to try Sulphur Bitters as she had great faith in them. I used a bottle and the sores commenced to heal. After using two more bottles the sores all healed and I considered my baby saved.—Mother, Concord, N. H.

Health Leaves.

No. 2.

None know the value of health better than they who have lost it, and none know better than they that it is easier to keep it than to restore it.

The intelligent and thoughtful ones oppreciate this, and persue many methods for retaining it, but some of those methods are misguided or have their origin in half truths.

It has become very generally understood, that one great foe to a body's healthfulness is its own waste. To take care of and remove this the refuse material of the broken down and used up tissue, employs a great amount of vital force in the body, and several organs are engaged, wholly, or in part in this special work. It is popularly known that much of this work is done by the skin, so the importance of keeping the skin freed from the waste that might accumulate upon it, has been of late greatly emphasized. There is reason in it, but good things may be overdone, and the daily washing of the entire body in all weather and under all circumstances, is to some injurious rather than healthful. Some portions of the body ought to be cleansed every day; some portions many times day, but the frequency of washing the entire body ought to depend upon various circumstances, as the occupation, whether indoors or out, and whether cleanly or otherwise; upon the amount of tissue waste, which varies greatly with different individuals, and in the some individual with varying conditions of the system. One who is very actively engaged in very severe physical exercise wears out much more tissue which must be removed, than one only moderately at work, or in idleness. In some fevers there is very rapid waste, and in such conditions an entire bath even twice a day, is known to be productive of good. But those are exceptional cases. The frequency of baths, too, ought to depend much upon climate and temperature. Much more of tissue waste is disposed of through the skin in hot weather, and in hot climates, than in cold, and much more will then accumulate and needs to be removed. Properly to discriminate in this thing, as in many other things in life, requires some thought and good judgment. It is a fact, that that class of people who have most need of bathing, are the ones that bathe the least. Theoretically, bathing is a good thing, and some having found it beneficial, it has been indiscriminately recommended as a daily necessity under all conditions and climates, and we presume, if the days were twelve instead of twenty-four hours long, with many the bath of the entire body would be twice as frequent.

Keeping the facts of the varying necessities as influenced by the varying conditions well in mind, as safe rule is, to be governed by the effect of the bath. If one feels a glow of warmth, and stronger after their bath than before, the presumption is it is doing them good; while if they feel chilled and weakened it is, most likely, the reverse. It is not enough that a fastidious notion is satisfied. The young lady who has been forced to postpone her bath a day and feels so dirty, and then feels so sweet and clean after it, and takes her daily bath as a moral duty she would not dare to neglect, may feel very much better in satisfying her whims, while she is really weakening her physical force and her powers of endurance, and her power of resisting the effects of atmospheric changes. The function of the skin is not solely excretory. There is one set of glands, the functions of which is to keep the skin lubricated, oiled, and this very thin film of oil has a remarkable power of protection of the delicate tissue, against the action of cold. So it is quite hazardous for some to keep it so constantly removed as the daily bath will do.

Seekers After Health.

Unfortunates who are seeking to renew their health, are many. So often have they been deceived by the advertisements of worthless compounds, that many are discouraged, and refuse to believe anything they read in the papers. Therefore, the best advertisement of a really good medicine is the reputation it has gained in places where it is being sold. No other remedy ever discovered has grown so rapidly in public favor as that true medicinal tonic called Brown's Iron Bitters. In localities where its extraordinary merits have become fully known and realized by those who have beenin ill-health, the sale of 238 bottles in one week. It is indeed a wonderful, health-giving, life saning preparation. It is, soothing and refreshing in its effect, and strengthens every part of the body, and creates healthy appetite and digestion, even when the system is almost destroyed by the many hurtful cathartics so commonly used. Reader, beware! duty demands that you try Brown's Iron Bitters, if your health is poor from any cause.—Enquirer.

When winter is passing into summer and summer into winter again, your health should be especially looked to. The humors which have accumulated in the blood other sickness peculiar to change of season. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will do this for you. Get a bottle now and begin using it at once. A long fit of sickness and a long doctor's bill may be the penalty of neglect. If your druggist hasn't it write to the doctor at Rondout, New York. Price $1.00.

Some complain that it is difficult to obtain a fit at a clothing store. But those who buy goods of John C. Back don't say so. He never fails to give a perfect fit, whether in an overcoat, under coat, vest, pants, or anything else. He has a prime stock and his prices are suited to the times.

Mr. Leonard Thompson has a large and varied stock of hardware, stoves, tinware, and everything that is kept in a first-class establishment, and sells cheap.

If there is a larger or better stock of coats, pants, vests and particularly of overcoats in Woburn than Monroe keeps nobody has found it out yet. And he has gent's furnishing goods till you can't rest.

An exchange tells how to preserve autumn leaves, but we don't see why people should want to eat autumn leaves when they can get preserved peaches with the skins on at any boarding house.—Philadelphia Times.

Having been cured by St. Jacobs Oil, I recommend the same to all sufferers with rheumatism, says Mr. L. Shiffman, 2804 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill.

An agreeable dressing for the Hair, that will stop its falling, has been long sought for. Parker's Hair Balsam, distinguished for its purity, fully supplies this want.

Women are everywhere using and recommending Parker's Ginger Tonic, because they have learned from experience that it speedily overcomes despondency, indigestion, pain or weakness in the back and kidneys, and other troubles peculiar to the sex—Home Journal. See ad.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.—One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat any thing; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had taken it a week she had a rousing appetite, and did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

A cure for pimples. My face for the last few years was covered with pimples so bad, that I used to be ashamed to go anywhere. I took two bottles of Sulphur Bitters and the pimples disappeared. I use them every spring.—C. K. D, Fall River.

It's hard to believe Miss Whittier was cured of such terrible sores by Hood's Sarsaparilla, but reliable people prove it.

A Clergyman writing to a friend says, "My voyage to Europe, is indefinetly postponed. I have discovered the fountain of health on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the fangs of the fiend dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

It has been proven that the peacock hasn't a bit of vanity about him. He simply displays what God gave him, and that's no more than the turkey does.—Detroit Free Press.

WINCHESTER.

Rev. L. B. McDonald will occupy the sacred desk at the Unitarian church next Sunday. "Strangers within our gates" are cordially invited to attend the services.

The late rains raised the ponds and lakelets hereabouts quite materially. The opinions of some to the contrary, I think rational, conservative rains in a dry time are not bad to take.

Dr. Winsor has been quite conderably under the weather of late, caused by blood poisoning from a recent surgical operation. He is mending and will very soon be squarely on his taps again.

I wish to say this in mitigation of my seeming short-comings in furnishing Winchester news this week: the weather, preparations for Thanksgiving, general apathy of the people, and a prodigeous cold in the upper story of my anatomy, all conspire to render my gleanings meagre, and my contributions to the jolly old JOURNAL considerably below low water mark. How is that for an excuse!

To give the teachers' a fair chance at the Thanksgiving Day turkey, our schools closed on Tuesday, and will open again on Monday morning next at the usual hour. The homes of some the instructors are remote, meaning by remote outside of our town, and it was only fair and just in the Board to allow these a plenty of time to enjoy the season of thanksgiving and praise under their home ridgepoles, or as some call them, the roof-trees.

A keen observer, in his perambulations through this beautiful village just about now, could not very well fail to note the active preparations for winter which are going on here. Banking up houses has, in some quarters of the town, become a regular occupation; outside cellar doors are being battened; glass taking the place of old hats and raiment long ago relegated to the retired list, or rag-bag—indeed, almost everything sounds and sights of frosts and snows and a frigid atmosphere. Some dread it; and yet, after all, I dont know of anything from which more pleasure is derived than the change of the seasons, nor a theme that will bear more talking or writing about.

The annual Parish Meeting of the Unitarian Society, which was held last Thursday evening week, in the vestry of the meeting-house, was well attended. Likewise, there was a spirit of harmony and push which augurs well for the future prosperity of this people, as a Christian body. The moderator of the meeting was Mr. R. C. Metcalf, who makes an efficient presiding officer. The Standing Committee made their Annual Report through Dr. Winsor, and the same was regularly accepted and placed on file for record. The Parish officers chosen for the ensuing year were: D. Nelson Skillings, Clerk; E. A. Wadleigh, Treasurer; F. Winsor, E. Shattuck, F. H. Nourse, F. W. Perry, Ira Patch, with the Clerk and Treasurer, Standing Committee. The office of Superintendent of Sunday School was not filled; F. Winsor was elected Assistant Superintendent; and E. A. Wadleigh, Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. Thomas P. Ayer, who had served as Clerk of the Society faithfully, declined further incumbency, and was given a vote of thanks for past good work. The Revised Hymn, Tune and Service Book was adopted for Church use. It was voted to place a bronze tablet in the Church in memory of their late beloved Pastor. It was also decided on to invite Rev. C. P. Lombard to preach during December.

Sometimes I get out of all patience with the temperance people here. It is wrong I know, for they mean well—no doubt about that—but still they don't seem to accomplish much of anything. I can't say whether the failure is attributable to the methods of the temperance people; whether it may be accounted for in a lack of public sentiment in sustaining them; or whether or no there are not "constitutional" reasons for their ill success lying away back and deeper down than their probe can reach. I know there are true and earnest temperance people here—a good many men and women whose hearts are in the work—who seem to be instant in season and out of season, and are giving their thoughts, time and money to the cause; and yet I can't say that the consumption of spiritous liquors is on the decrease here—I think more is drank now than ever before. Possibly, I err in judgement and observation; but I should testify in court that such is my belief. If there is any better way than that persued by our temperance people I don't know where to look for it, nor in what direction it leads; but I would like to see better results from the efforts made to suppress rumselling in Winchester.

HEREDITARY SCROFULA.

ARE you aware that in your blood the taint of scrofula has a prominent place? This is true of every one. It is liable at any time, on the slightest provocation, to develop itself in some insidious disease. Consumption and many other diseases are outgrowths of this impurity of the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA has a wonderful power over all scrofulous troubles, as the remarkable testimonials we have received unmistakably prove.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen— * * * My youngest son has always been troubled with Scrofulous Humor; sores in his head discharging from his ears, and a running sore on the back of his ear for two years; his eyelids would fester and ulcerate, discharging so that I was obliged to wash them open every morning, his eyelashes nearly all coming out; he was exceedingly dainty, most of the time eating but two slight meals a day. We were unable to find anything that had the least effect upon him till last spring, 1876, we gave him two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. His appetite improved at once. * * The back of his ear healed up without a scar, and not a sore in his head since. Sincerely yours,
MRS. N. C. SANBORN,
No. 108 Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.

"We do not as a rule allow ourselves to use our editorial columns to speak of any remedy we advertise, but we feel warranted in saying a word for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sarsaparilla has been known as a remedial agent for centuries and is recognized by all schools of practice as a valuable blood purifier. It is put up in forms of almost infinite variety, but Messrs. Hood & Co., (Lowell, Mass.) who are thoroughly reliable pharmacists, have hit upon a remedy of unusual value. Certainly they have vouchers of cures which we know to be most extraordinary."—Editors Lowell Weekly Journal.

Lesson 9:

NUMBERS, 21: 1–9.

The Serpent in the Wilderness.

GOLDEN TEXT:—"And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life."—John 3: 14, 15.

Central Truth:—Only believe; in God there is hope for the helpless.

By what may seem a sudden bound, we now pass to the last half of the Book of Numbers, so called from the two numberings of the Israelites recorded in it. It also contains an account of their wilderness life from their departure from Sinai until they are ready to enter Canaan.

Thirty-eight years have elapsed since the time of our last lessons. Leaving Sinai, after the giving of the law and of the regulations concerning sacrifices and the sacred seasons, the Israelites resumed their march, and came to Kadesh on the very frontier of the promised land. From this point spies were sent forward to see what sort of land it was to which they were journeying. These, on their return, gave a glowing account of the fruitfulness of the country; but ten of the twelve represented the people as numerous, huge and warlike. Upon this the Israelites took alarm and refused to go forward. God was greatly displeased with their rebellious conduct, and declared that, excepting the two faithful spies, not one of them should ever enter the good land. Accordingly they were turned back, and for thirty-eight years they lingered in the wilderness. At the end of these years a new generation had succeeded to that which had come out of Egypt, and once more they gather at Kedish.

It was at Kadesh that Miriam died. And here it probably was that Arad the Canaanite, made the attack recorded in the present lesson. Their first movement from this place was to Mount Hor, where Aaron, too, was "gathered unto his people," and where the difficulties of their march seemed to begin.

It should be noticed that "the way of the Red Sea" here spoken of was was that of its Eastern branch, or the Gulf of Akabah. Touching this at its northern extremity, they proposed to "compass," or go around the hostile land of Edom. But, in attempting to do this, "the soul of the people was much discouraged because of the way."

1. Here, again, as so often before they fell into great sin. It is not surprising that their courage weakened, for they were human, and there was much to try their faith. They seemed to be going right away from the land they desired; powerful enemies were near, and moreover, the way was sandy and rough, a "horrible desert," with little food or water. But God had often shown himself to be their God, and out of many perils and difficulties he had given them great deliverance. That they should forget all this, and give way to complaints instead of praises, especially that they should speak contemptuously of the manner with which he was still feeding them, was most ungrateful and base.

2. It is not strange that God should send upon them a terrible punishment. This he did. He sent fiery serpent among them, and they bit the people, and many died. We are not to understand by this that the poisonous reptiles were created for this purpose and at this time. God has always at hand the instruments of his displeasure. And it is his ordinary way to make providential use of these. This desert, as travellers tell us, is still infested with dangerous snakes, "marked with fiery spots and spiral lines," and whose bite is often fatal. God made these the ministers of his justice in the correction of his sinning people.

3. Judgments do not always bring those who experience them to repentance, but in this instance the people saw and confessed their sin. Doubtless they prayed for themselves. They also sought the intercession of Moses. It is a sign of the hardness of men's hearts that it is often only by experience of pain that men can be made to see and own the evil of their sin. We compel God to deal severely with us, or leave us utterly to perish. So Israel did.

4. The most wonderful thing in this narrative appears in God's readiness to listen to his people, and in the way he took to save them. Straightway Moses is directed to make serpent of brass, similar to that by which the people had been bitten, and to put it upon a pole, where all could see it. And whoever looked upon it was immediately healed. Some excellent Bible dictionaries have given more space than is profitable to attempt to account for the choice of this particular object or symbol. Idle attempts have also been made to explain the effect of looking upon it, on natural grounds.

What the dying Israelite saw was simply a likeness of the fiery serpent, dead, and so powerless to harm. There was in it no healing virtue. To the beholder it was a sign that God could and would heal them. It was for them to believe and obey: to look and live; the healing was the act of God. But it was also intended as a type of Him who, on the cross, "was lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." The special points for us to note are the simplicity, the immediateness, and all-sufficiency of the remedy; and that it was the only one provided or offered. It was simple, for the dying man had only to trust and look. It was immediate, for at once, "when he beheld, he lived." I was all-sufficient, for not only was each cure complete, but the offered healing was for any and all. No alternative, but to perish, remained for such as refused to heed the offer made to them. In all this there is a striking prefiguration of the Gospel way. The uplifted serpent stands for the crucified Saviour. And nowhere can we find a clearer exhibition of what the sinner is to do to be saved. The dying man saw and confessed his own sin as the cause of his misery; he perceived that, so far as self-help was concerned, his case was hopeless; he made his confession and cry unto God; he had confidence that God's proposed remedy was just and sufficient; when God said to him, "Look and live," he believed and obeyed, and straightway he was healed. So it is with every perishing soul who trustingly looks to Christ on the cross.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. Many, like Arad the Canaanite, would hinder the heavenward progress of God's people; nevertheless, He that is for us is more than all they that be against us.

2. Hardships and difficulties lie in every right path, and are permitted for wise and and loving reasons. To make it easier to endure and overcome these, God has given us exceeding great and precious promises. When ready to faint and give over, it is our privilege to remember the rest and glory at the end.

3. From allowed discouragement to complainings and rebellion the way is short. Against such a spirit or mood it is therefore a duty to watch and pray. The remembrance of past mercies, together with the thought of wisdom and goodness of God, should be sufficient to keep us from it.

4. There can be no baser ingratitude than that which speaks or thinks ill of God's good gifts. The right heart does not forget to give thanks for daily bread.

5. God makes use of judgments to rouse men to a sense of sin and move them to repentance. When goodness fails, he graciously resorts to severity.

6. The prayers of others should be valued and sought.

7. God's mercy is swifter than his judgments; he makes hate to hear prayer, and he turns none away.

8. In nothing does that mercy so wonderfully appear as in his remedy for sin; a remedy immediate, complete, free, sufficient for the worst and for all, and so simple as to be within the reach of the poor and ignorant and weak, as well as the rich, learned and strong, provided only they sincerely desire it.

9. Nevertheless, if we will not rouse ourselves to accept it, it will avail us absolutely nothing; we shall still perish in our sins. Therefore, hasten to "look."

LITERARY.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, for December, more than maintains its unrivelled character. There are two beautiful steel engravings: one of them a lovely title-page, representing some children, singing a Christmas hymn; besides a superb steel fashion plate, the latter exquisitely colored. In addition, there is a magnificent Stripe for a Chair, in cross-stitch embroidery, printed in colors, which, at retail, would cost fifty cents; this is presented to the subscribers of "Peterson" as a Christmas gift. A story, "My Cousin Maud," is as charmingly illustrated. The number contains a Supplement, with a full-size dress-pattern, alone worth more than the price of the number. Then there are some fifty other engravings of fashions, work-table patterns, etc., etc. The very best stories are always to be found in "Peterson." The price of the Magazine is but Two Dollars a year. Specimen are sent, gratis, to persons wishing to get up clubs. Address, Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for December—beginning of the sixty-fourth volume—offers its readers an unusually rich and varied entertainment. The frontispiece is a fine full-page illustration by Abbey of Herrick's poem "Upon Sappho." The opening article of the number is a very interesting description by Zadel Barnes Gustafson of the royal family of Sweden—The Bernadottes—with twenty-four elegant illustrations. T. B. Aldrich contributes a fine poem entitled "Prescience," which is charmingly illustrated by Abbey. Joseph Hatton in his third paper on "Journalistic London" gives considerable space to Mr. Edwin Arnold. William Hamilton Gibson contributes "Among Our Footprints," with sixteen illustrations. Alfred T. Story presents some very timely information respecting William Penn's Grave at Jordans. Howard Pyle contributes "Autumn Sketches in the Pennsylvania Highlands," illustrated. William Allen Butler "The Garden of the Gods," very effectively illustrated. A very curious article entitled "Monsters," is contributed by M. D. Conway, with illustrations. Among other things, Mr. Conway exposes the fraud known as "Mother Shipton's Prophecies." Prof. John Fiske's "How America Came to be Discovered," offers some interesting suggestions for thoughtful readers. The author of "Cape Cod Folks," contributes "Sam Sperry's Pension." A humorous sketch, entitled "A Crisis," is contributed by Mrs. L. W. Champney. One of the most interesting articles in the number—especially for women—is "Economy in Dress." "A Laodicean," approaches its conclusion. It is to be followed by "Prudence," a story of Æsthetic London, by Mrs. John Little. "Anne," will be continued for several months. The Editorial Departments are crowded with entertaining and instructive reading.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for December is in all respects a good number. The writers without exception are men eminently competent for the tasks assigned to them, while of the subject discussed, there is not one which does not possess a living interest. Indeed, were one called upon to enumerate the contensions that are to-day exercising men's minds, those treated of in this number of the Review would certainly occur to him among the first. The most important and most opportune of all the articles is one by the Hon. John A. Kasson, entitled "The Monroe Doctrine in 1881." Then follows a discussion of the Death Penalty, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Cheever, Judge Samuel Hand and Wendall Phillips. The policy of Mr. Gladstone's Government toward Ireland is strenuously defended by Mr. H. O. Arnold-Foster, son of the Chief Secretary for Ireland. Four physicians and surgeons of the first rank, namely, Drs. W. A. Hammond, John Ashurst, Jr., J. Marion Sims and John T. Hodgden, review the history of President Garfield's case. Finally the Hon. David A. Wells treats of Reform in Federal Taxation.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

A GREETING TO OLD AND NEW FRIENDS.—The Boston Weekly Journal has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers and intelligence, and is each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in its preparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views. These qualities upon which any newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper which no man in any degree removed from the great centres of information can afford to do without.

THE ADVANTAGES TO THE READER.—It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and discussions of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensable to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well-conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views, and keener sympathies, and draws them out of the demands of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

ITS PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS.—The Weekly Journal aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprehensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of Government, politics and business, to present the news of the day and show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

A YEAR OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST.—The coming year bids fair to be one of exceptional interest. All citizens will look upon the condition of political affairs with intentness, and watch their development with care. Some of the most important questions of the day are awaiting discussion and solusion, and in the close balancing of political parties in Congress a more than ordinary concern in national affairs will be excited. The course of the new Administration will also attract much attention, since a remarkable interest attaches to President Authur in view of the melancholy fate of his predecessor, whose chair he has been so suddenly called to fill. Washington, therefore, will for many months be a centre of gaze for Americans, and all will desire a full and intelligent account of what transpires in it. The Weekly Journal, throug its skilful and well-known correspondents, "Perley" and "Webb," will be supplied with the most exhaustive and careful accounts of affairs, while the despatches of the Associated Press will supplement their labors. "Perley's" accounts of social life in Washington, which are admitted to be among the best furnished to the press from the capital, will also, as heretofore, be a feature of the paper. In the field of general news, The Weekly Journal will display a greater energy than ever before. The general press dispatches will be supported by SPECIAL ACCOUNTS OF MATTERS OF WIDE INTEREST.

And, especially, much space will be given to the material interests of the country. As the paper has a large support among the farming community, particular attention will be given

TO AGRICULTURAL AFFAIRS.—Special articles by the "Young Farmer" will be a marked feature of the coming year, and the markets for produce in this city, together with the condition of crops in all parts of the country will be fully reported from time to time.

ITS POLITICAL CHARACTER.—Politically, The Journal will remain in earnest support of the Republican party and its principles, criticising measures freely irrespective of party lines when occasion demands, but holding to the processes and theories of government which for the past twenty years have steadily improved their claims to popular confidence. The paper will support the principles of the American industries, a practical Civil Service system and a sound system of finance, believing that thus only can the dignity and power of the Government be upheld, or the prosperity upon which the country has entered be made permanent.

THE WORLD ABROAD.—The Journal will also continue the valuable and instructive discussion of foreign men and affairs which MR. EDWARD KING has so long and so ably carried on. He is admitted to be the best of European correspondents, and none other is so much quoted and commended.

OTHER SPECIAL FEATURES will be "The Kennebeckeeker's" entertaining descriptions of sea life and strange countries, "M. E. B.'s" "Rambling Talks" and other papers of literary merit, besides which a wide and careful selection will be made of the best current reading of the day. Great attention will also be given to

NEW ENGLAND AFFAIRS, and matters of interest in sections in which the paper circulates will be given special prominence. Correspondents from all important points will contribute information, to which the the telegraphic dispatches and the exchanges of The Journal will add as occasion requires. Altogether, The Weekly Journal will be better than ever before and will command itself the intelligence and taste of the reading people of New England.

Each issue of THE WEEKLY JOURNAL contains

The Semi-Weekly

JOURNAL,

Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character.

THE BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without.

The Border Land.

In fleshy weakness as abed I lie,
And through the casement catch the gentle swing
Of emerald boughs against the sapphire sky,
And list the sweet birds their vespers sing.

I have no wish but my tired soul to lay
Upon the bosom of the Good and Great;
To fold my hands in meek content and say,
"Well if thou bid'st to come, well if to wait."

One word, "Forgive," embraces all past years,
With praise for present gifts my heart runs o'er,
While through the mist of silent, tranquil tears

Stands it ajar for me this summer night?
To greet me there are my lost angels met?
Am I so soon to share their pure delight?

Go back once more a simple child to school—
The world's wide battle field of toil and heat;
Follow no law but Christ's most loving rule,
And bring each day new trophies to his feet;

Some selfish aim subdued, dark passion slain,
Some sweet forgiveness of a bitter wrong,
Some tender solace of a brother's pain,
Some sorrow bravely borne in duty strong.

And aye the more you wrestle on to know,
And knowing, walk the path the Master trod,
Your all of hope in lowlier homage throw
Upon the mercy of the perfect God."

Ah, yes! When sickness unto death goes by,—
The border land should be a holy place—
A glorious mount of pause 'twixt earth and sky,

So be it mine henceforth in chastened mood
To wear my lengthened years, forgetting never
The Pisgah height where I this night have stood,
And glimpsed afar the home beyond the river!

—Good Words.

Romance of a Pocket-book.

I was just twenty-five when I met Alice Thorne, the daughter and heiress of George Thorne, the great banker.

I fell desperately in love with the charming girl, knowing well that such love was utter madness.

Her father was reported to be a very proud, ambitious man, who would look higher for a son-in-law. I felt that he would not so much as give a hearing to my suit; and, as to winning her without his consent, what would that bring to her but misery? I had nothing with which to repay or compensate her for the sacrifice of such a marriage with my poverty.

So we bade good-bye without a word of explanation, though I knew she read the anguish in my heart, and tears were in the soft eyes averted from me. I kissed the trembling hand she placed in mine, and turned away and bade farewell to her and hope together.

Scarcely had I got back to town, and was striving earnestly to drown vain regret in the bustle and interest of business, when a terrible misfortune fell upon me. Mr. Overton had given me a cheque for $20,000, desiring me to go to the bank and get it cashed. Having executed the commission, and returned, imagine my horror on discovering that the pocket-book containing the money was gone.

Whether stolen by villains or lost by my own carelessness, what mattered it? It was gone, and I was utterly ruined.

What I suffered during the next few hours God only knows, and when after being dismissed, returned to my own room, I was nearly desperate; not only had I lost a lucrative position, but my future appeared to be irretrievably blasted, for there are suspicions which are as fatal to a man morally, as would be physically the wound of a rifle-ball.

But I was young and of a hopeful nature, and I began to realize that I had been leniently dealt with. On realizing all that had happened after the leaving the bank, and the utter impossibility of the pocket-book being taken from the breast-pocket of my coat, I came to the conclusion that I must have dropped it, and thereupon I resolved to have recourse to all the means in my power to recover the money.

I had saved during the last few years a considerable portion of my salary, and was determined now to devote it to the purpose I had in view. I advertised daily in all the prominent journals, not offering the customary reward, but describing my unfortunate position, my honor lost and my fortune blighted.

For two weeks I kept my loss before the public, and had almost begun to despair of any favorable result, when one morning a stranger came to me—a tall, dark, stern-looking man, who regarded me with a pair of kindly brown eyes that had something familiar about them.

The stranger declined the seat I offered him, and began at once, speaking brusquely and to the point.

"I have read your advertisement in the papers, and I feel deeply interested in and for you. I have seen your late employers, and after the satisfactory manner in which all my questions were answered, I became your surety for the $20,000.

"What?"

I sprang toward him in the wildest excitement.

"Oh, sir," I began, but he stopped me.

"Let me finish," he said. "I have done this because I am convinced that you are an upright, honest man, and the greatest proof of my confidence I can give you is this, I am about to offer you the position of cashier in my banking-house. My name, sir, is George Thorne."

George Thorne, the father of Alice, the girl that I loved! Ah, the mystery was solved! It was of her his eyes had reminded me; it was to her I was indebted for his help.

Fifteen years had flown since the day I lost the pocket-book. I had now become a prosperous man, surrounded by all the luxuries which wealth affords. I had found in Mr. Thorne more than a patron: I found a friend; under a brusque manner he had a heart of gold. From the first day of our acquaintance he had evinced toward me the liveliest interest and affection.

I was soon made a partner, and when, on a certain blessed day, I became the husband of Alice, and his son-in-law, he presented me with a receipt for the $20,000 that he had paid to the Messrs. Overton for my loss.

Some time went on. The bank-house known as the firm of Thorne & Wallace was in a thriving condition.

I had a beautiful wife and two lovely children, and yet, with all the sources of happiness, I was not contented—there was a crease in the rose-leaf.

For some time past I had been vainly endeavoring to account for the extraordinary interest which my father-in-law had first taken in me, because, as I grew older and saw more of this selfish egotistical world, I found that very few such generous actions were performed without motive, and the solution of this, to me, difficult problem frevuently occupied my thoughts.

At first I had attributed all to Alice's influence, but I know now that it had been as great a surprise to her as to myself.

About this time Dr. Pollard, one of Mr. Thorne's most intimate friends, arrived in New York, and one morning, while sitting at breakfast, expressed great surprise at the numerous advertisements in the papers relating to money lost and found.

"Well," said he, I have not the least sympathy for those who lose money. They are generally careless, stupid people, not fit to be trusted; although I remember having heard of a young man who lost a pocket-book some years ago, containing $20,000, and I declare when I read his piteous appeals, which were in all the papers, my heart fairly ached for him. "But," continued he, addressing my father-in-law, who had become very pale, "you ought to remember the circumstances, for it occurred just at the time of the great failure in Philadelphia, by which you were so heavy a loser."

"Yes, I recollect the affair," replied Mr. Thorne, who appeared to be suffering.

"I never heard," continued the doctor, "what became of that poor fellow; and yet I should like to know."

"Should you?" said I, laughing, "then let me gratify your curiosity. I, Arthur Wallace, am that poor fellow, doctor; saved fsom ruin and despair by my benefactor here." And then I related all the events of the last fifteen years.

"Well and generously done!" said he, but Mr. Thorne interrupted him. "I am not well," he said, faintly. "I suffer greatly—let me go to my room."

The next day he sent for me to his private office. I found him looking pale and haggard.

Sit down, my dear Arthur," said he, in a low voice, "and listen to me. For a long time I have had a confession to make to you; one that weighs on me so heavily, that I must ease my conscience of its load. I can better bear to do so now that I have in a measure made some amends for the trouble I once caused you."

"The trouble you caused me," cried I. "You have been the most generous of men to me. It is through your kindness I occupy my position; it is to you I owe my happiness, and more than all, my honor."

Mr. Thorne opened his desk and took from it a pocket-book.

"Do you remember this?" said he, as he placed it in my hand.

"Yes," replied I, "it is the one I lost; but how——"

I could not finish my question. The truth stared me in the face. I sprang to my feet in dismay.

"Aye, and kept it," he groaned, with anguish in his voice. "But oh! do not condemn without hearing me. Yesterday you heard Dr. Pollard allude to the great loss I had sustained by the failure in Philadelphia. I did not dare to make my embarassment known, as that would have hastened my ruin—my ruin! God knows that it was not for myself that I cared, but for Alice, my darling child. It was on the 14th of December that you lost the money. Oh, I shall never forget the date. It was on that day that I meditated suicide. I was short $20,000 to meet my liabilities, maturing on the 15th. I was overwhelmed with despair; the air of the office seemed to stifle me, and I rushed into the street. I had hardly gone ten yards when my foot struck something. It wa a pocket-book. I opened it, and the sight turned me giddy and faint. Then commenced within my breast one of those struggles which, even to the conqueror, is fearful, but in which alas! I was miserably vanquished. The next day I satisfied all claims upon me. To the world I was George Thorne, an honest, upright man; to myself I was nothing better than a malefactor. You know the rest. Through my guilt you passed two weeks of indescribable anguish. I have since endeavored to make reparation for the misery I caused, but I also suffered. Moral atonements are the most cruel, because they are eternal. I have known and yet feel the bitterness of expiation. Say, my son, can you forgive my crime!"

Could I forgive? I looked at the palid face and anguished eyes. What were my sufferings of those two terrible weeks compared to the secrect pain and shame this man had borne for years;—this man, the victim of epe solitary deviation from rectitude, so upright in all else, and whose life since had been one long atonement. I grasped his hands, tears filled my eyes.

"Father," I cried, "Alice's father and mine, all is forgiven, forgotten. Do I not owe all the happiness of my life to that same lost pocket-book?"

The Woburn Library.

To the Editor of the Journal:

'Mid "the changes and chances" of the town's history, the one most worthy of note is the erection and endowment of the Library building. Those to whom it has become familiar, who behold its walls and freely enjoy its privileges, day by day, can not estimate its worth to the generations that shall come after them. From foundation stone to pinicle it is an educator, and, like the chaste temples of Greece and Rome, a former and purifier of the taste of the people. Of it Keats might have written his oft-quoted line—

And in its construction and adaptation to its purposes, utility is most happily wedded to beauty—in these days of sorry architectural blunders not always beholden. There are few towns, or cities even, in this country, possessed of a like treasure, and the citizens of Woburn should be proud of it, and I doubt not they are. It surely needs no one to sound its praise, but I cannot withold the the tribute of admiration with which I regard it, and each time I see it its beauty and significance grows upon me. From such a home of Literature and Art, there should emanate only those pure and ennobling books—the very souls of their authors—which can alone prove healthful food for the mind of both young and old. The well-formed judgment and conserving taste and care of those having their selection and distribution will be a warrant for this, and if the teachers in the schools, as well as parents in the homes of Woburn, would supplement this by prudential oversight, I am sure the result would be very satisfactory. In the columns of the JOURNAL, from time to time, I have noticed what may be called a "Helps to Read," in the form of "Library Notes," by the scholarly librarian, and the concise information therein given of new additions to the goodly store of books, must prove of value to all readers, I am sure. Let all such bear in mind the words of Emerson—"Books are the best of things, well used; abused, among the worst. What is the right use? They are for nothing but to inspire." Remember (and let us all do this!) that "a good book is the life-blood of a master spirit." Our gustatory taste is trained to be satisfied only with the best, and surely the mental taste should have no lesser standard. "Books are the legacies that a great genius leaves to mankind."

Boston Culchaw.

When the Culture girls of Boston came home not long ago in a vessel of the "Kunard" line, they were talkative, inquisitive and curious, and pestered the Captain almost to death. One day the eldest Culture sought the engineer and questioned him: "How many revolutions, Mr. Engineer," she began, "does the propeller achieve within the period of a minute?" "Oh," said he, "about a thousand." "Indeed," exclaimed Miss Sarah Annex Emerson Culture, "why you fill me with atonishment!" "I thought I would," said the engineer. "Well, now tell me," she persisted, "what is

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1881.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ The readers of the JOURNAL will naturally look through its columns for something new concerning the sale of the Mystic Valley Railroad. They will be measurably disappointed. We have gleaned but few additional facts about it since our last issue, therefore have but little additional to say. A bargain was lately made for the sale of the road to Messrs, Chase, Lewis and Redington, Boston capitalists, and $1700 paid over to bind it. One of the purchasers was taken sick immediately thereafter and the business hung fire. It still hangs fire, and what the upshot will be nobody seems to have any very clear idea. It is surmised by some that, if the trade is consummated, the purchase will be made in the interest of the Boston & Lowell road. The JOURNAL is one of those who hold to this idea. At any rate, it may be safely set down that the B. & L. people are going to submit to no business competition in Woburn if they can help it, and that they will find a way to help it (unless Woburn and Winchester capitalists take hold and build a road for themselves) we have no sort of doubt. At all events, the sale of the M. V. R. R. hangs fire, and how long it will remain thus suspended is more than we can say.

☞ The trial of Guiteau is still in progress, with the end not yet distinctly in view. What the result will be no mortal man can tell, for there is probably nothing on this mundane sphere quite so uncertain as a petit jury. If the prisoner is not acting then he is insane and ought to be sent to the asylum; if he is putting it on for effect, then hemp is none too good for him. But that is the principal question for the jury to determine whether his insanity is real or feigned—and what they will say about it in their verdict remains to be seen. We are rather inclined to regard Guiteau as crazy; but whether to the extent of shielding him from legal punishment for crimes committed—we give it up.

☞ We acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of a copy of the Rock Island (Ill.) Union from A. Lieberknecht, Esq; Editor of the Geneseo (Ill.) Republic, containing the sad intelligence of the death of L. M. Haverstick, Esq., late editor and proprietor of the Union, at Rock Island, last week. The deceased was a long-time and highly-prized acquaintance of ours, and his death, in the prime of years and intellectual strength, we, with hundreds of his warm friends, sincerely mourn. He was a genial, whole-soulod man, and true as steel.

☞ We call attention to the advertisement of the Boston Journal published in this paper. If we could add anything to what is therein said concerning this excellent paper we would gladly do so; but it tell the whole story much better than we could, and the best we can do is to vouch for the truth of the statements which the advertisement sets forth.

— The Class of '81, W. H. S., surprised one of their number, Miss Annie Burbank, at her home in Montvale, on Friday evening last. The class before making the attack, supplied themselves with an abundance of rations. Although a part of the class Dodged about North Winchester on their way, yet they arrived in time to take part in the assault, which resulted in the enemy's complete surprise and capture. The evening was passed very pleasantly.

— The ladies of the Methodist Society, will hold their annual Fair at the Church on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, December 7 and 8. Of course there will be intellectual treats on both evenings, and it will all be first-class. The price of admission is only ten cents: the suppers 25 cents.

— The fire in the Cummings millinery store last week caused but slight interruption to business, and in a few hours things were moving along just as though nothing had happened. Mr. Cummings was very much pleased with the insurance companies for their promptness and fairness in settling the damages. He expresses the opinion that Mr. George H. Conn is a first class local agent of the best companies in the land. Before the smoke had cleared away, metaphorically speaking, the agent and adjuster had fixed up Mr. Cummings's loss, placed the sum at $1,145, and the same has been paid in full. That is what we call quick work.

— The Woburn reporters of the Boston dailies fairly ached to "write up" an account for their papers of the imprisonment of a prominent citizen of Woburn in one of the rooms at the depot a few evenings since. But they were afraid to do it. The gentleman whose enforced confinement was due to the general cussedness of one of those infernal contrivances known as a spring lock, is a large, supple, stalwart man, who could lick the whole batch of reporters in five minutes and look over his shoulder for more, and as they were well aware of the fact their itching pencils were restrained from "writing up" the little incident. And it was well for the proprietors of those pencils that they did not yield to their inclinations.

— On last Wednesday evening week the Woburn Council, A. L. of H. was installed here, with a charter membership of about eighty. A full complement of officers were elected, and on last Monday evening they were duly installed by Deputy Barrows. They are as follows; P. C., Alva S. Wood; Com. A. V. Haynes; Vice-Com., John I. Munroe; Sec'y, R. A. Davis; Treasurer, Frank B. Dodge; Collector, L. Waldo Thompson; Med. Ex., Seth W. Kelley, M. D.; Chaplain, C. H. Lyford; Orator, Henry F. Smith: Guide, W. F. Bosworth; Sentinel, J. Fred Buel; Warden, Charles F. Hayes. At the same meeting forty new members were added to the rolls which makes a total membership of one hundred twenty-five. It is the largest Council in the State, and with the lively interest manifested it is bound to increase rapidly.

— On the 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon train, several of the officers of the Boston & Lowell R. R. came town and set the newsgathers by the ears. Jones & Doyle had received orders to have two open carriages at the depot to meet the delegation, and on their arrival a portion took these, and the balance were appropriated by Hon. John Cummings, who drove away with them in his carriage. The party proceeded towards Central Square as far as Mr. Place's, thence to Cummingsville, thence to the depot, thence to Boston on the 5 o'clock train. Ordinarilly the advent of these gentlemen would not have produced a ripple on life in Woburn, but just now while the M. V. R. R. negotiations are hanging in the balance, and a good many think the sale, if made, will be in the interests of the B. & L., the visit was agitating to a painful degree. The object of their call is still a mystery.

— Rev. Edward Mills, late pastor of the First Baptist Church in this place, left, with his family, last Monday morning for Eastport, Maine, having accepted the pastorate of the Baptist society of that town. On Sunday morning he preached his farewell sermon here to a large congregation, from 2 Cor. 13: 11. It was a good, strong production, appropriate to the occasion, and filled in with excellent lessons for church and people. It was listened to throughout with marked attention. On Saturday evening Mr. Mills's Bible Class surprised him with a gift of "Knight's Popular History of England"—a very handsome and valuable present, which was accepted with warm thanks. Friday evening, at a gathering of members of his society, he was presented with a purse of one hundred dollars in token of their love and esteem for him as pastor and man. These generous donations with the hearty "god speeds" and blessings that followed him to his new field of labor, were pleasant and encouraging and teadered to endear the people of Woburn still more strongly to him. Mr. Frank S. Mills, son of the pastor, also received a costly seal ring from his young friends as a parting gift.

— As the exact date of the dedication of Lyceum Hall has occasioned some dispute we give the card of invitation furnished us by Mr. Edward Simonds, who was janitor of the hall for eighteen successive years, and has kept this invitation to the dedicatory ball all these years. The card reads:

"Dedication Ball, by the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx, at Lyceum Hall, Woburn, Wednesday eve'g, Feby. 27, 1856. Music: Gilmore's Quadrille and the Germania Serenade Bands. N. B.—It is earnestly requested that no set shall be formed on the floor until the Bugle call. Reception Committee, W. T. Grammer, J. F. Bates, J. B. Winn. Floor Managers, Timothy Winn, H. W. Clarke, F. A. Thompson, C. S. Converse, Walter Wyman, I. S. Alley. Supper from 11 till 2. J. B. Smith, Caterer."

— Last Monday morning the Boston Journal contained a notice of the loss of the corner-stone of the old Bedford street High and Latin School building, Boston, which was erected in 1844, and now in process of demolition. During the month that this work has been going on a man has been detailed to watch for the corner stone, but though the building has been razed it has not been found. Among other articles in the strong copper box sealed up in the stone was a silver plate appropriately inscribed, which the old teachers and pupils of the school were desirous of securing for preservation. This item fell under the notice of Mr. Obediah Rich of this place, and then it came to light that he made that silver plate, engraved it, and had it put into the corner-stone. He was a prominent silversmith in Boston at that time, and was frequently employed to do such work by the city, societies, and individuals, and remembers distinctly all about the missing plate, and that his name was engraved in small letters on one corner of it. He made, among a great many other fine things, the Webster Vase now on exhibition in the Public Library. An apprentice of his by the name of John H. Woodward, sealed up the box containing the plate, coins, papers, documents, etc., and it is the recollection of Mr. Rich that the stone was placed in the northeast corner of the building (the Masonic corner), that nearest Chauncey street, and nearly on a level with the first floor, and there it ought to have been found. If our pencil were only in a reflective or meditative mood just now, it might spin out quite a sermon on these incidents—the making of the plate 37 years ago, its loss, and its maker still on the ground to give information concerning it; but such is not the mood of our pencil, and so we recommend that the reader, the woof being furnished, put the filling in to suit himself.

— Mrs. Matilda Raymond, an account of whose injuries, and the mysteries hanging over the case, the JOURNAL gave in full last week, died on last Monday. Forthwith an autopsy was held by the public physician, whose report to the Coroner was that Mrs. Raymond's death was probably caused by said injuries. The woman was badly bruised on her face, head and body, and the examination disclosed no organic disease to which her sudden decease could be reasonably attributed. An ugly wound on the top of the head was pronounced of sufficient severity, or rather the nervous shock from it, to kill in a short time, and it was to this, probably, that her death was due. How Mrs. Raymond came by those wounds and bruises is a question that has been engrossing a good many minds and employing quite a good many tongues in Woburn for a week or two. Judge Converse, as Coroner, investigated the case yesterday, and perhaps we shall be able to get hold of his decision before going to press, and if so, we will publish it. It has been the belief of a good many people that Mrs. Raymond was the victim of a premeditated design on her life by a certain man in Woburn who was actuated by revenge. According to report this young man made an indecent assault on her some weeks ago, and had threatened to take her life if she publicly accused him of it, which she did. But there was little evidence to substantiate such statements except the woman's word, and her mind was in such a condition that a jury would be slow to convict on her testimony. In the alleged attack which resulted in her death Mrs. Raymond distinctly stated that she saw no person, nor heard any sound when she was struck, but still claimed that the young man referred to dealt the blows. Of course that was mere fancy based on his alleged threats to do her bodily injury. Without knowing what the testimony before the Coroner was, our conclusion is that Mrs. Raymond fell down stairs on that dark morning, and received the injuries from which she died.

LATER.—The testimony in favor of the theory of murder at the inquest was stronger than anticipated by us: it was deemed sufficient by Judge Converse to warrant him in ordering the arrest of Henry Ferrin, the young man above referred to, who will be brought up for examination today on the charge of murder.

LITERARY.

The December WIDE AWAKE is out with a gay little operetta for the young folks, which they will welcome for their Christmas entertainments. It is entitled "Prince Puss-in-Boots," and all the performers represent cats and are clad in the most bewitching of furry costumes. The music, which is given entire, is by Louis C. Elson, the words by Mrs. Nina Gray Clarke. A more dainty and laugh-provoking entertainment could not well be desired. The number opens with the best short story of the year, "Rob's Father," by Eleanor Putnam, with five spirited illustrations by Merrill, one of them a very fine full-page engraving. Another beautiful full-page engraving accompanies "The Baby's Escapade" by A. C. and A. T. "How Alice Spent Twenty-Five Dollars" by Jenny Burr, has a charming picture of "Alice" and is a good story for everybody. "Hitty's Last School," will be enjoyed by all those interested in the early days of Boston. The Serials, "Polly Cologne," "Sharon," and "Having His Own Way" finish satisfactorily, and leave the reader wishing for three more good stories. The pretty rhyme of "Wo Willie Winkie" is developed into a piquant ballad by Miss Wilkins, and has six beautiful full-page drawings by Miss L. B. Humphrey. Another very enjoyable poem is "Griselda In Pound," by Margaret J. Preston. The readings for the G. Y. P. R. U. are well worth while the attention of young folks everywhere; and it is to be hoped that thousands of our young people will join the Reading Union before the Course for 1882 is completed. WIDE AWAKE permanently enlarged, is but $2.50 a year. Ella Farman, Editor. D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston, Mass.

BABYLAND is another of the beautiful publications of the enterprising house of D. Lothrop & Co., adapted to the wants and capacities of the very little people indeed, the December number of which is a perfect gem in type and pictures. There is nothing that equals BABYLAND in the way of a little children's magazine, and it ought to be a regular monthly visitor to every fireside in the land.

 Mr. Charlie S. Brown, late of the Woburn postoffice, will take subscriptions here for all of Lotrop's magazines, including the two beautiful ones above noticed.

NOTHING more desirable can be given; any one contemplating having pictures for that purpose should begin at once, as time is short, and too many put it off until the last thing, and dull days are the rule in November and December. Sitting can be made in cloudy weather, but makes very slow printing. WINCHESTER.

Dr. Winsor is still confined to his house, though slowly recovering.

By invitation, Rev. C. P. Lombard will minister to the Unitarian Society during the month of December.

Last week Thomas S. Spurr was elected High Priest of the Woburn Chapter R. A. Masons.

I am pleased to be able to record the fact that Judge Littlefield has returned from his visit to the West well and hearty. He had a good time while away.

We are reminded that the JOURNAL should have said that Mr. Frank A. Patch was the gentleman elected a member of the Standing Committee of the Unitarian Society, instead of Ira Patch. We stand corrected.

The $500 bequeathed to the Town Library by the late D. N. Skillings has been deposited in the Savings Bank. The disposition which the Committee will make of it is not yet known, but it will be judiciously laid out.

Some time in January—the fore part of it probably—a cantata will be given for the benefit of the New England Hospital for Women and Children, which is now in active preparation. The entertainment bids fair to be a great hit, and I have no doubt will be splendidly patronized.

E. Bowman, Esq., of Billerica, an able temperance speaker, will address the Reform Club, next Sunday. The audience will hear a fine address and it is to be hoped the house will be filled. The Reform Club is doing God's work in Winchester.

SALE.—The ladies of the Unitarian Society will hold their annual sale of useful and fancy articles on Thursday afternoon and evening, Dec. 8, in the vestries of the church. There will be the usual attractions on such occasions and the patrons can get a good supper at a reasonable price. W.

Dr. Winsor, Medical Examiner for this District being sick, Dr. Abbott of Wakefield held an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Matilda Raymond in Woburn, a few days since. He was assisted by Drs. Bartlett and Harlow of Woburn. The doctor's report was, that Mrs. Raymond's death was caused by injuries received on her head and body.

Mr. Charles Conant came within an ace of being chosen Senator Dawes private secretary the other day. I think it was fortunate for him that he did not take the position. He has an excellent situation as stenographic and long-hand reporter on the Boston Advertiser, which he fills with credit to himself and profit to the paper. The fact is, Mr. Conant is a talented young man, very industrious, and bound to make a first class journalist.

Last Wednesday week work on the reservoir ceased for the present. By the way, I see that a correspondent of the Star is giving the people of Winchester some excellent advice concerning public debts, "pay as you go," etc. It is advice that our people will do well to take to heart and act on, besides which it shows that the writer is not only a level-headed man, but has the good of our town at heart.

The Gov. Brooks house, one hundred and fifty years old, is being demolished. It was an ancient landmark, the obliteration of which will be regretted by a good many people. "Thus go we on from day to day; thus do we murder, kill and slay, and am weel paid fo't." I am sorry to have these old relicts of former times disappear from human gaze forever. The main chimney in the house contained 30,000 bricks, and the timbers were of great size and strength. Good bye, old mansion!

A Fair by the Young People's Society of the Baptist Church was opened in the vestry of the church last evening, and will close on this, Friday evening. A Japanese Table presided over by persons dressed in real oriental costume is one of the attractions. There is to be a nice supper to-night beginning at 6 o'clock, and ice cream and other luxuries are on sale all the time. The attendance and receipts were good last evening, and will be largely increased this.

On the afternoon and evening of Thursday, December 8, the ladies of the Unitarian Society of Winchester will hold their Annual Fair and Festival in the vestry of their Church, for which preparations are well under way. A great sale of ladies' handiwork is expected, as there will be a large stock and almost endless variety of beautiful wares and merchandise, useful and ornamental to select from. Besides the sale there is to be a grand supper, and grab-bags, country postoffice—indeed, all and singular those things and doings which make such entertainments plesant and successful.

The Star of this town (and Stoneham) talks as though there was a conspiracy on the part of three or four neighboring papers to take its life, or something. For my part I don't see any grounds for such an idea. If I am any judge of journalistic courtesy I am bold to say that the Star receives fair treatment from the aforesaid papers and has no cause to find fault with them. I am sure I try to deal courteously with the Star, and I hope it will continue to twinkle everlastingly here in Winchester; and if you, Mr. Editor, occasionally slip in an item into the Winchester column that bears down a little hard on your esteemed brother of the Star's "grey goose quill," I oughtn't to be rated for it. It is evident enough to my mind that the Star needs all the encouragement it can get from outside and in.

There is a strong desire here on the part of a large number of our people to have the Northern Express train on the B. & L. R. R., which passes through and reaches Boston at 8.30 in the morning, stop here and take passengers. It would reach Winchester at about 8.13 and arrive at Boston only seven minutes later than the 7.54 accommodation train. Many who are now obliged to get up early enough for the 7.54 train, would be specially accommodated by this arrangement, which, I believe, needs only to be brought to the attention of the General Manager of the road, Mr. Sherburne, who keeps an eye out to the interests of its patrons, to secure the greatly desired change. I know our people would feel very kind towards Mr. Sherburne if he would order the Northern express mentioned to stop here.

Knockabout.

Ever since mother Eve puzzled her brains over what she could make for Cain and Abel that they wouldn't tear into bits in a day's wear, it has been a problem with all mothers as to how they could overcome the destructive tendencies of their irrepressible boys to make way with the garments provided for them. The problem has been happily solved by the enterprising clothiers, Messrs. A. SHUMAN & Co., 440 Washington street, in their patented Knockabout suits for boys, which they advertise today. They are made from double warp and double twist untearable fabrics, in medium and dark colors, unlikely to soil, and for these reasons the Knockabouts commend themselves to the taste, judgment and pocket of those to whom the amount expended during the year for boys' clothing is quite an item. Save yourself dollars and make the boy happy investing in a Knockabout.—Sat. Eve. Gazette.

When winter is passing into summer and summer into winter again, your health should be especially looked to. The humors which have accumulated in the blood other sickness peculiar to change of season. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will do this for you. Get a bottle now and begin using it at once. A long fit of sickness and a long doctor's bill may be the penalty of neglect. If your druggist hasn't it write to the doctor at Rondout, New York. Price $1.00.

A Baby Saved.

Since birth my baby had running sores all over its head, and the doctors said that he must die, for they could not heal them. I used everything I ever heard of, but it did no good. He got so bad he would not nurse. My husband's sister told me to try Sulphur Bitters as she had great faith in them. I used a bottle and the sores commenced to heal. After using two more bottles the sores all healed and I considered my baby saved.—Mother, Concord, N. H.

DIPHTHERIA!

THE PROSTRATION which follows Diphtheria, and the persistency with which it clings to the patient, are well known to all who have had any experience with this terrible disease.

The following letter shows how the restoring and invigorating properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla overcome it, and how by vitalizing and enriching the blood it neutralizes and eradicates the poisoned matter from it, bringing to the convalescent the color, life and vigor of robust health.

LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—My little girl had the diphtheria last April. The disease left her very weak, blood poor, with no appetite, and she could not seem to rally from its effects. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA was recommended by a neighbor. After she had been taking it a few days we noticed a change for the better—she began to eat with a relish. It seemed to take out the poison the disease had left in her blood, the change being very noticeable in her face. She took it two months and fully regained her health, much to our delight. We now recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA with a great deal of pleasure. Very truly yours,
J. R. SMITH,

Health Leaves.

No. 3.

The physical effect of the bath as observed by the bather, is something of a guide to the frequency of its employment. But there is one portion of humanity, that are subjects of much bathing, who cannot make this information available. They are the little bits of humanity, who are to live, if they live at all, through the intelligence of others, but oftener die through their ignorance. The amount of surface exposed at once, the frequency of the bath, and the temperature, should be under the direction of an intelligent nurse or physician, alway remembering that sickness so lowers their vitality, that it is wise to remit their bath s such times, or be more than usually guarded in its employment. A frequent change of all under garments is more important as a rule—both for young and old, than is frequent bathing, but as we have said the bath finds a show of reasonableness in the effort to keep the channels healthy, through which the body discharges much of its waste material, and to remove any possible accumulation. Yet it must not be forgotten that the skin is not the only part of the body engaged in this scavenger work. A great deal of it is done by the lungs. The lungs of a healthy adult exhale in the twenty-four hours, 350 cubic feet of air, containing over 3 lbs. by weight, of excrementitious matter, which is in a gaseous form when thrown off. That is, there are 3 lbs. of waste material, the result of broken down tissues, thrown off by the lungs in each twenty-four hours. This, if allowed to remain in the air, is re-inspired and acts as a more or less active poison to the system.

Now there are many persons that would think themselves very filthy, if they had not bathed every day, that will sit or lie and inhale over and over again the air that is foul with the waste of their bodies. Not only this, but in close apartments with others, they not only reabsorb their own waste products, but that also of other bodies, so that in large assemblies they inevitably get into their systems a conglomeration of putrescence. Many pay the penalty of such indifference with aching heads and general languor on the following days. The more accustomed one is to pure air, the more they may feel temporarily the effects of that which is so vitiated. The human system shows its wonderful elasticity in this particular, that it can accommodate itself to very unhealthy conditions. When, however, it has its forces bent toward preserving itself against the effects of this form of poison, it has lowered its general powers of resistance, so that any unusual strain thrown upon any of the organs which act as blood purifiers, at once disarranges them. Such, the more readily fall a pray to disease. Many are the dwellinghouses where the air remains unchanged for days and days. Such air is simply loaded with excrementitious matter. There are very few places of public resort fitted for audiences, especially in the evening, for the gas flame and the lungs, soon consume all the respirable air, not to mention the contamination by the exhaled waste from so many lungs. True cleanliness which has health for its object should have due regard to all of its sourroundings. The sleeping apartment where nearly a third of one's life is passed, is often totally inadequate to sustain life healthfully, and all the air is shut out with scrupulous care. Let the air have free course through the room, avoiding of course a draft over the body, and great will be the gain in the powers of endurance. Not a thread of clothing worn by day should be worn by night, giving the apparel of the day a chance to become freed from the bodies exhalations. No bed should be made for three hours after its occupant has left it. The sunshine, which is a great purifier, ought to fall into all sleeping apartments some portion of the day. These are all well-known truths, yet there are comparatively few living in obedience to them, and those that do, find their sickness reduced to the minimum. ***

LITERARY.

The December, or Christmas, number of ST. NICHOLAS is beautiful in illustrations and interesting in stories, sketches, poetry and other things. The new cover is something of a departure, and will bring vividly to the mind of the youngster the joys of "Merry Christmas." The frontispiece—"The King's Favorite, engraved by Cole, after the painting by Zamacois—is worthy of a handsome frame, and the article that goes with it—"Cap and Bells"—is pleasant reading. The articles in ST. NICHOLAS which follow this (all superbly illustrated by the most skillful artists) are: A Misunderstanding, The Little Beggar's Buttonhole Boquet, Hermann the Brave, Donald Dorothy, The Ballad of Babette, To College and Back, An Angel in an Ulster, The Worthy Schoolmaster, Stories of Art and Artists, What makes the Grasses Grow? Five Little Mice, The Poor Count's Christmas, Little Polly's Voyage, The Seasons, Recollections of a Drummer-by, The Hoosier School-boy, Fun at Grandmamma's, A Hundred Years Ago, The Poet who couldn't Write Poetry, Stories from the Northern Myths, The Nervous Little Man, A Remarkable Fight, The Runaway Princess, The Magic Pen, For Very Little Folk, Jack-in-the-Pulpit, Deacon Green's Offer, The Letter-Box, The Riddle-Box.

Loss of memory, universal lassitude, pain in the back, premature old age, promptly cured with Brown's Iron Bitters. It restores lost functions and strengthens the weakened parts.

A little child was addressed by a gentleman the other day. "How old are you, my dear?" he asked. "Old!" said the child, indignantly. "I'm not old at all. I'm quite new."

"The meanest woman on record," says the New York Commercial Advertiser, "is the one who boiled a codfish in a fire-proof safe to keep her neighbors from getting a smell.

Unhappy Thought—Tommy (gazing at the stars)—"I mean to be an astronomer when I grow up." Effie—"What on earth will you do with yourself all day long?"

"What decoration is that you are wearing?" said an Australian sergeant to a new recruit. The man blushed deeply and responded: "It is a medal our cow won at the cattle show."

So Wretched.

HOW SHE WAS RELIEVED BY THE LIVING ENCYCLOPAEDIA.

"Are you the gentleman who answers the questions sent to the Brooklyn Eagle!"

The voice was filled with music, and as the bent and gray philosopher who officiates as encylopædia for the institution looked up from the question, "Was the walking match between the wise men of the East and the star of Bethlehem a square shake or a hippodrome?" his eyes were blinded. A flash of golden hair! A bewildering sea of blue eyes! A passionate struggle between the red and white roses.

"I am the man," he said, wondering what such grand loveliness could want of him.

"May I—ask you—a—question?" inquired the voice, as the beautiful head bowed and the long lashes swept the flowers of her cheek and lay as lightly as dew across the moist lids.

"Certainly, anything. Can I do something for you?"

"It's about Frank," she faltered. "I want to ask you about Frank. Oh! why does he treat me so?" and the sweet face was turned upward toward the staggered philosopher, wet with tears, and imploring consolation.

"Is it—is it a matter of ice-cream or oysters, or something of that sort?"

"No, no; oh, no! I have plenty of those. But why does he let me pine?"

"Something about theatres? Concert business? Bouquets the matter? Candy? Bong, bong?" asked the philosopher, ending the interrogations with some respectful French.

"Nothing, nothing of that kind," murmured the red, quivering lips. "Why am I so desolate?" and the sobs racked the glorious frame.

"Something about presents? Makes you walk to the park? Won't hire a hack? Another girl? Won't go to church? Plays pool for drinks? Something of that sort?"

"How strangely you mistake him! How cruelly you wrong him!" and the sweet eyes looked tender reproach. "You don't know Frank or you wouldn't say so. What I want to ask is—is—Oh! why am I so wretched?" and the tears rained down her face.

"Maybe he's growing a beard," said the encyclopædia, tenderly. "Perhaps he parts his hair in the middle. Possibly he belongs to a baseball club, or may be he stands in front of the theatre on matinee afternoons. Is that it?"

"No, he don't; none of them!" flashed the angel. "If he did, I wouldn't care. You shan't abuse him. I came here to ask why—why—oh, why am I so uttely hopeless?"

"Possibly he gets drunk," suggested the philosopher. "Or his pants may bag at the knees. Does he brush his plug hat the wrong way? Is his moustache too long on one side? Don't he believe in the doctrine of atonement?"

"Oh! cruel, cruel!" said the maid sinking into a chair. "You are unjust to him. You don't know how grand, how manly he is."

"What is the matter with him, then?" jerked out the philosopher. "How has he made you miserable? What has he done? What do you want of me?"

"I want to know—why—he gets up—between every—act and goes—out of the—theater. I know—he's got—another girl—and he goes—to see—her."

"My dear," said the philosopher, solemnly, raising her head up and putting his arm around her waist. "My dear, you are mistaken. I have known Frank for years, and he has no love for any but you. Let me tell you something. Frank has got the itch, and he goes out to scratch. Trust me, that is all."

"If I could only believe that," murmured she, doubtingly.

"On my honor."

"Then I am happy. If that is all, I am content, but I thought some nasty girl had attracted him."

The red roses had come back, and the sapphire flash to the eyes, and she went out a grand crush of lovely color, fragrance and rare beauty, and the philosopher turned to the question, "What was Eve's maiden name?"

Several scientists are predicting that the "earth is drying up." Those western people who have been catching bull-heads in their parlors, and going boating in the streets, must think it about time for these scientists to dry up. When a man sees his house and barn being swept away by the flood, it is pretty hard to convince him that that the earth is drying up.

In the garret of a New London house a carpenter recently discovered a quantity of honey sufficient to fill a wash boiler and three ordinary pails. The Post observes that he also discovered that he could run down a ladder and roll on the ground, and wildly claw at his legs and blaspheme, all inside of seventy-two seconds.

One cannot perfect himself in all the languages without going abroad. He must go to Finland to obtain the real Finish.

When a man wants to call a puppy he whistles, but a girl just walks along with her handkerchief floating across her shoulders.

The man who stole a glance has not yet been arrested, although his attention was arrested when he stole the glance.

"If you don't stop your coughing, sir," said a testy judge, "I'll fine you £100." "I'll give you £200 if you can stop it for me," replied the witty counsel.

"Tom, where can I get a good two-foot rule?" "I can give you one on the spot, John." "Well, let's have it." "Don't wear tight boots! That rule applies to both feet."

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks No Hearts, Excuses No Crimes.

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat or inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney trouble, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards, excuses no crimes, breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession. He treats all diseases and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

MY QUEEN.

I do not know when I began to love my little May. I think it dated back from the time when I was an awkward college lad and she a go lden headed little fairy in short frocks.

She had an imperious, wilful way with her then, which made me call her Queenie, and, as I named her sovereign, of course I had to bow my knee as the most humble of her subjects, and right royally she exercised her power.

As I grew older I gave no name to the feeling which was growing with my growth, until, having graduated from the Naval Academy, and returned from my first cruise, I discovered May to be longer a child, but a young lady with a legion of adorers, who tauget me my passion by the consuming fires of jealousy they awakened in my bosom.

Years had but made my darling more beautiful. Her eyes were bluer than the sea on which I sailed, her hair more golden than the sun-flecked clouds; but she who been all "May," was now more like an April day; alternate smiles and frowns.

There were moments when, for me, her voice grew tender—when a glance from her azure eyes would bring me, delerious with happiness, to her side, but there were days, as well, when she noticed me as little as the dust beneath her pretty feet—days when others basked in the sunshine and I shivered in the cold.

It was during one of these periods of torture, made doubly excoriating because my leave of absence was drawing rapidly to a close, that I conceived the noble resolution, not only to acknowledge the truth to myself, but to May as well, and to ask her to put an end to my suffering, or at least to my suspense. The opportunity came at last, just when I had almost despaired of obtaining it.

It was a lovely evening in June, when, as I stepped into a summer-house, sweet with the scent of roses, which clustered so thickly about it as to shut out the outside world, I found it already occupied by her.

"Queenie," I said, "you here?"

"Is not the evidence of your senses sufficient, sir," she answer, "without putting the question?"

"Not where you are concerned," I replied. "Besides I did not think fortune could be so kind to me. Queenie, do you know that in a fortnight I sail on a three years' cruise?"

"Yes, I know it," she replied, shortly.

But I was sure that I saw a tear trembling on her long, dark lashes, though she persistently bent her head and ruthlessly tore into pieces the petals of a rose she held.

"Do not be so severe upon that poor rose," I continued, gathering courage. "Must you always exercise your power? Are you not content with making one man miserable?"

"What do you mean, sir?" she said quickly.

"I mean that I love you, Queenie—that the thought of this long absence makes a very coward of me, unless—unless, my darling, you will make me strong and brave by the promise that when I return you will be my wife."

The color flushed into her lovely face. Lower and lower dropped her head, but she spoke no word.

"May," I went on, "you have been very cruel to me, darling, and now you have so little time to be kind. Surely you will not begrudge it to me?"

"Frank! Frank!" she cried out, then in her sweet innocence, throwing both arms about my neck, and sobbing as I pressed her to my heart.

It was a moment of exquisite bliss. I kissed away her tears (they were not altogether unhappy ones) and soon brought back the dimples and the smiles.

"Why did you treat me so badly, Queenie?" I asked.

"Why did you not speak before, sir?" she retorted, saucily. "Was I to place my hand in yours and say, 'Here I am. Why don't you ask me?' Indeed, no!" with a perverse toss of the pretty little head.

"Very well; but, my pet," I replied—"but the less said about a certain little girl's love of coquetry and conquest the better. Never mind; I can afford to be magnanimous, only don't rouse the green eyed monster too seriously. He is only sleeping, May—he is not dead."

Ah, me! that he was destined so soon to to such an awakening.

The next week of my stay flew on wings.

"We are going to give you a surprise before you go, Frank," said May; but of its nature I could glean nothing.

Our engagement was not announced.

"I should have such a stupid time while you were away, Frank, beside the faint prospect of your finding some preferable sweetheart in some other port."

So Queenie argued, and I was fain to give in, though I insisted upon monopolizing the little witch as much as possible, and letting some of the other fellows suffer a little of my previous agony. But three days more remained to me, when one afternoon, looking for May, I heard voices in the library, and stole up to the window to surprise my darling. There I stood spellbound. A mirror opposite me reflected the figures I could not see from where I was, but every word spoken reached my ear. May was leaning back in a large arm-chair, her lovely lips parted, a faint flush on her beautiful cheeks, and at her feet knelt Dick Armstrong, his handsome face alight with feeling and his voice full of emotion, as he leaned over and pressed his mustached lips to her hand an ardent fervor.

"You mustn't do that!" May laughed; "that's not in the play."

"Why not?" he answered. "It is to be my future right, is it not?"

"Yes," she said; "but the future is not the present. Come, go on sir! What were you saying?"

"My love—my life! I cannot live without you!" rang out his impassioned tones. I was about to spring into the room, livid with passion, when May's answer reached me.

"Nor would I ask you, dear," she said, in low, murmuring accents. "Life would indeed be dark without the sunshine of your smile! You are sure you love me? Say it again! The story ne'er grows old, and but gains in sweetness with the telling. What is that?" she added, with a sudden change of voice.

I knew that I had groaned, and sprung from the window that I might not be discovered. So stunned that my sense of suffering was almost paralyzed, I hastened to my room.

Of girlish coquetry, of girlish trifling, I had believed May capable; but perjury and base falsehood I had deemed her as far above as the angels in heaven.

Mad with passion, determined she should not know the truth, I sat down to my desk and dashed off the following lines:

"Adieu, fair love! You claimed to have a surprise for me. I have already received a sufficient inkling of its nature not to wish to be overwhelmed by it. Of course you know the farce we have been playing has but preceeded the tragedy. I shall go in search of the sweetheart you have destined for me in some other port. Do not fear—I shall ride the storm. Yours, Frank."

I had added these last words in a spirit of bravado; but once penned, I leaned my head down on the table and sobbed like a baby—the first tears I had shed since childhood—the last, pray God, I said, I may shed till old age! But all my faith, and hope, and happiness had gone in one fell blow. However, they seemed to make me stronger, and, quickly packing my valise, and handing my no e to a faithful messenger that it should reach May, I left the house, meeting no one.

A week later I was out of sight of land. There were times in the months that followed when, pacing up and down the narrow confines of the ship, I thought I should go mad, and almost prayed I might.

The years dragged slowly by. No news reached me of her—not even of her marriage! Perhaps she had proved false to him, too. And yet I loved her still—loved her with so mad a love that she was ever present in my thoughts to torture me.

One summer evening (we were on our homeward way) I sat alone on deck, thinking how soon we would sight our native land, and how little joy the thought brought me.

What should I do? What could I do but ask to be again transferred to sea duty? I would not even go to the place where May lived. To catch one fleeting glance of her would be to shatter all my hard won calm.

Just as I reached this decision, floating above me in the ether there seemed to be a ball of liquid fire. Dreamily I watched it, wondering what it might be, when I heard a voice.

"Frank! Frank!" it said; and the tones were full of imploring sadness.

I sprang to my feet and rubbed my eyes. It was Queenie's voice that I heard.

Had I been sleeping or waking? The ball of fire had vanished—all was darkness; but my new-born resolution had taken wings. I must see May once more face to face, and ask her: "Why did you do this thing?"

The ship seemed to crawl now; but all things come to an end, and at last we heard the welcome cry of "Land!"

I was one of the first to leap on shore, and then I travelled night and day to reach the house I had left three years before in such wrath.

It was almost evening when I arrived, and stole through the lodge gates like a thief. I could not yet enter the house.

From the garden the scent of roses again greeted me, and I made my way to the summer-house, which seemed to smile a welcome on me. No its threshold I stood transfixed. As once before I found occupied. A girl sat in its furtherest end, her head in her hands and sobs convulsing her frame. It was Queenie!

Softly I spoke her name. She sprang to her feet, and dashed away her tears. Spite of the twilight I saw that she was pale and thin.

"How dare you, sir," she cried, in hot passion—"how dare you come here to gloat over my misery, and to witness your petty triumph!"

There the woman in her conquered, and once more she burst into bitter weeping.

"Is it for you to reproach me?" I said. "Had I not the evidence of my own senses of your falsehood!"

"My falsehood!" she repeated. "You dare to speak such a word to me?"

And then I told her all that I had heard and seen. Oh, heavens, the fool that I had been! She had been rehearsing a portion of a little play they were to act in my honor, on the night following the day I had seen them. When Dick had asked if it was not his future right to kiss her hand, he had only meant during the real progress of the play; and my darling, loyal as she was, would not permit him even that privilege in rehearsal.

My note had seemed to her the cruellest mockery. She had been very ill after I left, and all these years had believed me untrue and unkind. It was a dark night when our explanations were given, but for us the day was just dawning.

"May," I said, throwing myself at her feet, and telling her the story of my strange vision, "can you ever forgive? May I not let my whole future life atone?"

"Darling!" she wispered, as her soft little hand toyed with my hair, "it was my heart's voice that called you. Do you think, now you have come, I can shut its doors against you?"

And so I won my Queenie.

Health Leaves.

No. 4.

It is very likely that they who have sufficient care for healthful surroundings to read these papers, will have no need of many of the suggestions they contain; but if they are already enlightened, let them act the part of teachers to those who still sit in the darkness of slovenliness and filth. We have often been into homes in the heated days of summer where the good house wife, with scrupulous care for cleanliness and comfort, to guard against the flies, the dust and the heat, which were sure to come in through open doors and windows, has carefully kept them closed until the same stagnant air has been housed up for weeks. Here is air that has not only been contaminated with exhalations from many lungs, but with effluvia from many sources; kitchen, cellar and sleeping rooms. There are many places called homes, from which are coming the future husbands and wives of the land, that are reeking with pestilence, even where the inmates make some pretensions to cleanliness. Cesspools and drains have always come in for their share of blame for foul air, but all decaying and fermenting matter does not find its way into cesspools and drains. In many of the poorer class of homes, the accumulations of months of carelese spilling and crumbling in the apartment which is used as a sink room, kitchen and dining room, in common, are allowed to remain and decay, and their characteristic odor can be detected, even upon the garments of the occupants as they are passed on the streets. Cloths, that with some pretense to cleanliness have been used on floor or utensils, are allowed to still further corrupt the air through processes of fermentation. This putrescence is just as prejudicial to health from this source, as though it came from the sewer.

The public at large can not be indifferent to these slovenly habits, and say it is no matter of theirs, because it does not affect them. It has become sufficiently established as the most reasonable theory of the origin of typhoid fever and diptheria, that it is produced by living germs, that have their source in just these decaying animal and vegetable substances. Could the disease be confined to the premises where it was bred, the public might plead indifference, but each case of diptheria becomes the focus from which these germs are propagated, and multiplying, spread by means not yet fully investigated, but being inhaled and coming in contact with an inflamed and partially raw membrane, as a throat under the influence of a slight cold, finds a resting-place and favorable condition for multiplying again and producing the terrible results of the justly dreaded disease. So the public are involved, and are interested in seeing that their neighbors even are educated up to such habits of cleanliness that these workings of a natural law under conditions within their control, shall not be made the basis of complaints against an inscrutable providence.

The public has not inaptly been likened to one great individual, and like the individual, if one of its members suffers all the members suffer with it. The remedy seems sufficiently plain. Pure air and cleanliness are better by far than disinfectants, but if the former will not be used the latter must be.

A Wrong Idea.

Many persons having gotten the wrong idea that hops are strengthening, have taken to drinking beer and ale very freely. The consequence is they feel better for a short time, but when the reaction comes they are much weaker than before. Reader, if you value life, lay aside all malt and alcoholic beverages and put your trust in that temperance preparation of iron and vegetable tonics called Brown's Iron Bitters. It gives health and strength to every part of the body, refreshes the mind, and restores the nervous system to its proper standard. Over 1,000,000 bottles have been sold this year.

THE MESSAGE.

On Tuesday forenoon the message of President Arthur was received by Congress and read. It is a lengthy document, occupying seven or eight columns of the large city dailies, somewhat prolix, and, if anything, rather too much given to detail in the treatment of its subjects. The press of the country speak of it as a sound, practical business paper, and the general verdict is that the message is above the average of similar documents in the quality of statesmanship and good sense. A brief space is devoted to the death of President Garfield, after which the customary topics discussed by Presidents' messages to Congress are reviewed. A good deal of attention is devoted to our foreign relations which, the President says, are in a very satisfactory state, and with the exercise of judgment and courtesy may remain so indefinitely. The financial condition of the country is made out by the message to be cheering, to substantiate which a bewildering array of figures is submitted which a due regard for the mental welfare of our readers will not allow of our giving in this brief notice. The discussion of the Panama Canal project involves a reference to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, without which no President's Message would be considered complete. Not much information, however is vouchsafed on this subject. Another puzzling array of figures is given under the head of "Public Revenues", and the same is true of the "Postoffice Department". The President recommends a general reduction of taxes, and a revision of the tariff laws. He thinks it hardly advisable that the taxes on liquor and tobacco should be repealed. More space is given to the Civil Service than to any other, on which his views oppear to be sound and worthy of the approval of even the most exacting of the civil service reformers. His ideas are practical, we should say, on this subject, and if they were adopted the country would have a much better service than it now has. The army and navy are intelligently discussed; so also are our pension system, in which changes are advised; agriculture, merchant marine, internal improvements, education, the Federal Courts, and many others. On the whole, the Message will bear close reading, and stand the test of criticism as well as documents of the kind usually do.

☞ The reader is referred to the advertisement of Harper's publications—the Monthly, Weekly, and Bazar—in this paper. Each of these standard publications has a widespread popularity, and deservedly so, for they are the best of the kind that the country affords. The announcement of the publishers is worthy of careful notice; and those casting about for their next year's reading we would say subscribe for Harper's and you won't miss it.

☞ The Forty-seventh Congress convened on last Monday. Senator Davis took the president's chair in the Senate, and Gen. Keifer, Republican, of Ohio, was elected Speeker, and McPherson Clerk, of the House.

☞ Mr. Reed of Maine did not make a strong pull for the Speakership, Boss Conkling killed off Hiscock, and an Ohio man won the prize.

So it is: and it isn't to be sneezed at as an intellectual exercise, especially if you win the hat.

— Christmas will get round in a little over two weeks, and already dealers in holiday goods are preparing for the rush of trade that is certain to come with the merry season. Folks, too, are beginning to turn over in their minds the questions of presents, and the small fry to look forward to Christmas morning with hopes and longings. With these time will pass very slowly for the next three weeks.

— Mr. Geo. Nicholls, the watch-maker, is just entering on his third year in this village, having done a successful business in the two he has been here. He announces that, if there is one out of the hundreds of men who he has done work for in that time, who has been or is dissatisfied with his job, he will refund the money and pay damages. Mr. Nicholls has not heard of such a person, and probably there is not one in Woburn or vicinity. He is a bang-up workman.

— Want of space compels us to leave out several articles among them a very interesting one from "G. M. C."

— Our town hires all the money it wants at 3½ per cent interest. That shows that Woburn is sound corn financially.

— A new carpet will help to make a Merry Christmas. You can buy one of C. A. Smith & Son cheaper than you can in Boston. Their $1.00 Tapestry has already gained a reputation.

— The verdict of Judge Converse, as coroner in the Mrs. Raymond case, was that she came to her death on the morning of Nov. 28 from wounds and injuries recieved at the hands of Henry Ferrin.

— Messrs. C. A. Smith & Son have received a very nice assortment of Japanese Fancy Goods and Japanese fancy Crockery which they bought cheap and will sell cheap. Call and see them.

— The first telephonic message from Woburn was sent on Wednesday. Capt. Mathews has charge of the exchange which is located in the Fox block. Connections will be made with the public offices at once.

—The 1st week in December 8,779 letters, postals' bundles, etc., were recieved at the Centre P. O.; and 5,589 letters, postals, packages, etc., sent out, both setts of figures representing large gains over the corresponding week in 1880.

— A new Black Silk Dress would be a very nice Christmas Present for your wife. The Bellon Silks which C. A. Smith & Son keep are not only one of the handsomest makes in the market but are sure to wear well. Messrs Smith & Son sell them as low as they can possibly be bought in Boston.

— Copeland, Bowser & Co. are arranging their storewith fine taste for the holiday display. The windows look very inviting and so do the shelves and cases, filled as they are with new and beautiful goods. People will find it worth their while to visit the nice and handsomely arranged store, about which we would like to say more did space allow of it.

— A real neat thing in the musical line is booked for next Thursday evening at the Congregational church. At that time and place Miss Minnie W. Roby will give a concert, and as she is no stranger to our people, and her musical gifts fully appreciated, it is needless to suggest to them that the entertainment will be a fine one. We trust the music-loving folks of Woburn will turn out in full force and attend this concert of Miss Roby's.

— The State Grand Lodge of the Orange Institution met in their hall on Tuesday James Dargin, State Grand Master, with a full suite of officers, opened the meeting in the Arch Purple Degree. The new Constitution of the American Order was adopted. No other business of importance was transacted except a luncheon, with which all seemed satisfied. There was a full delegation from all parts of the State. * *

— Mr A. Cummings adds several fingerlengths to his mammoth advertisement this week and tells some facts which are of interest to the ladies of Woburn, Winchester, Burlington, Stoneham, Reading, Lexington, Arlington, Medford, Melrose, Wakefield, and other inland seaports. The way it works is this: Mr. Cummings advertises liberally: the advertisements increase his trade largely: this furnishes the needful for still greater displays in the newspaper: and again his returns are increased thereby. This is the way of it, and it is strange that all of our business men con't see it in the same light.

— The Board of Selectmen held their monthly meeting on Tuesday evening. The petition of J. H. Cummings and others for the release of Kate Meehan from the House of Correction was referred to Committee on Police. The report of the committee on the case of officer Gallagher of North Woburn was presented and accepted. It found that officer not guilty of the charges preferred, after the examination of a large number of witnesses, and gave the petitioners leave to withdraw. The officer's conduct was sustained all the way through. The monthly bills were passed upon. The Clerk of the Board was authorized to arrange for telephonic communication with the rooms.

— The custom of presenting and exchanging holiday cards bids fair to prevail as generally this year as last, and to meet the expected demand dealers have put in large stocks in almost endless variety of styles, quality and prices. The cards are generally richer in design and execution this year, many of them being the very perfection of beauty, and none that would not grace a centre-table or card-stand. This custom of giving cards to friends and acquaintances is a good one. Nothing could be more appropriate for gifts than these beautiful products of the press and brush. In a well-selected stock one can secure just what is wanted—the little picture for ten cents, or the elegant hand-painted one for from one to five dollars. One of the finest stocks that we have seen in Woburn is at the drug-store of W. W. Hill, whose counters, windows, and show-cases are filled with a great variety of beautiful things in this line. In making his purchases Mr. Hill has had an eye to getting the best, in the very latest styles, and also to the purchasing capacity of his customers. Pictures of any and all prices are kept by him—the cheap, pretty thing and the rich and costly one—and everybody may be suited. To those about to buy their Christmas cards we cheerfully recommend Mr. Hill's store.

— Although the public schools of this town are not excelled by those of any other in the State, and are the pride of our people, the department which, we think, will bear the test of examination the best is the primary. There is no question but that the methods of the teachers in the primary schools, under the direction of Mr. Superintendant Davis, are a long ways ahead in efficiency of those commonly employed. They have had the indorsement of eminent educationists and the hearty approval of all who have examined their practical workings. This week the Superintendant of the Cambridge public schools, as we hear, has given our primary department a thorough looking into, having become very favorably impressed with our system of teaching in it from the many excellent reports that have gone out from here. The progress which the little ones make in our primary schools is wonderful and would hardly be credited by those unacquainted with it. And here is where the best school work needs to be put in. Mr. Davis is of this opinon fully. Here is where the foundation for an education is laid; and if the foundation is shaky, insufficient or weak, the structure won't be worth much. At some future time we propose to go more into the particulars of teaching in our primary schools.

HENRY FERRIN

COMMITTED TO JAIL TO AWAIT THE ACTION OF THE GRAND JURY IN THE MRS. RAYMOND ALLEGED MURDER CASE.

Last Tuesday morning Henry Ferrin of Church street, this village, was brought before Judge Converse for examination on a charge of inflicting injuries on Mrs. Matilda Raymond, on the night of November 18-19, of which she died on November 28. The government was represented by District Attorney Stevens, and the accused by William B. Gale, Esq. of Marlboro, and John G. Maguire, Esq. of Woburn. Henry Ferrin, the prisoner, sat by the side of his counsel, during the examination and exhibited no signs of unusual interest in the proceedings. He is a young man of rather prepossessing appearance, with nothing in his behavior or looks that would warrant one in suspecting him of the great crime charged against him. It is said of him that, when sober he is a mild-mannered, inoffensive young man: but when in liquor, a very devil. Concerning the correctness of these common reports about his character we know nothing. From his appearance in the court-room one would conclude that he did not fully realize his situation, for, whether innocent or guilty, it is a very serious thing for a man to be put on trial for his life. Several witnesses were examined, but a less number than at the inquest. Mrs. Julia A. Cassidy, who lives in a part of Mrs. Raymond's house, testified to hearing something fall in Mrs. Raymond's part, about 5.30 o'clock on the morning of the 19th; to going in with Mrs. Eliza King about 7 o'clock, and finding Mrs. R. in bed with her clothes on, covered with blood, Mrs. R. told Mrs. Cassidy that she had got up to put a tub out to catch water, as it was raining. She didn't know how she came in toat condition. Mrs. King corroborated this testimony. Dr. G. P. Bartlett was called and testified as follows: Was called to Mrs. Raymond on the morning of the 19th, about 10.30 o'clock. Have been consulted by her before. She couldn't see very well; never noticed that she could not hear well. Found her in bed bleeding from two wounds, one on each side of nose, a little more than one-quarter and not half an inch deep; a little discoloration around ooth eyes; very much swolen about the eyes; about one inch below and behind each ear were well marked contusions large as good sized eggs, some swollen, several irregular swellings behind, which ran into each other. There was a bruised spot on the right forearm; also a bruise on knuckle of third finger of the right hand. She was covered with blood. Don't think that all the wounds could have been caused by a fall. Don't think wounds on neck could have been caused by a man's fist; a club might have produced such bruises. Took her to the almshouse. Saw her the afternoon of the second Sunday after she was hurt. Told her that she could live but a short time. She said she knew it. I heard a part of a conversation with her and other parties. Think her mind was clear. Her mind had not been clear all the time she was sick. She said she wanted to be left alone; didn't want to be pulled around; wanted to die in peace. Messrs. Conn, Bond and Simonds came into the room and she began to tell how it happened; but when she saw Mr. Bond she stopped talking. She said it had been raining, and she went down stairs to get tubs: said she came in as far as the stairs and had a chill. Heard her make a statement the next morning after she was hurt, at the almshouse; said Henry Ferrin struck her. Said she didn't fall down stairs. Assisted at autopsy. Death resulted from effusion of serum to the brain.

The testimony of Dr. S. W. Abbott of Wakefield, who conducted the autopsy, and Dr. J. M. Harlow of this place, agreed with that of Dr. Bartlett in relation to the injuries and probable cause of death. Dr. Harlow also testified to the sanity of the deceased. Mrs. Vestine Gray, Matron of the almshouse, testified to the condition of Mrs. Raymond when brought there. Her mind wandered at times. She always said she didn't fall down stairs. Mrs. Raymond said to witness' son (thinking he was Ferrin,) "Henry, go and tell your priest to pray for you. If they insist I shall have to tell." Mrs. R. was in a very bad condition. Mrs. Martha C. Monroe, sister of Mrs. Raymond, was present the afternoon before she died and heard her statement. Her testimony was as follows: My sister, Mrs. Skilton, asked her if she was reconciled to die? She replied she didn't wish to live. She was very faint and weak. She told my sister it was not any fall; repeated it three times. John I. and George J. Munroe were present. John I. Munroe asked her questions as to how it happened. She said that Henry Ferrin came in at one o'clock at night; his pants were off, and got into bed with her. She asked him what he came for at that time of night? Said he always came when the lights were out. She said how is it you came when I told you never to come again? He then went on and to tell her how he loved her; loved the very ground she trod on. He said her knowledge was greater than her virtue. She said how dare you tell me that? He told her that if she moved or stirred, he would kill her. He put his hand over her mouth and his arm around her and tried to violate her. He said he had instruments with him to kill her if she moved or screamed. She said she did scream. He told her to stop or they would hear outside. She said that is just what I want, I shall have to call the Police. She said, John, what could I do? John said, what could he want of an old woman like you, Aunt Matilda? She replied, you know he is passionate man. John asked her if he ever accomplished his purpose? She said, never; she said she was dreadfully frightened but tried not to let him know it; she said, I've told the truth. She said that when he left her he told her not to move or stir. After she saw lights she got up and went down and put out tubs. When she came in she felt faint, found light was put out, said she thought she saw a billy in Henry Ferrin's hand; said she was knocked down and laid a good while, till she got so cold she thought she would try and get up stairs. She went up stairs, got into bed and did not dare to move till light, when she called for Mrs. King.

Mrs. Almira Skelton saw her sister, Mrs, Raymond, the morning she was hurt, and heard her report the story of putting out tubs and of being struck down. Saw her on the afternoon before her death; thought she was rational. Mr. John I. Munroe corroborated the statements of his mother, Mrs. Martha Munroe. At this poin, the government rested, and no defence being put in Ferrin was held to await the action of the Grand Jury in February next. He was taken to the Cambridge jail. It is said there is additional and stronger evidence against him, but how this is we cannot say.

When I was sick my room looked like a drug store, I had so many bottles in it. The more I dosed the worse off I was. Finally I paid my doctor and told him he needn't come any more. I was trombled with Chronic Rheumatism, and couldn't get out of bed alone. Six bottles of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Fireman, Boston.

GENTS—I have been very low, and have tried everything, to no advantage. I heard your Hop Bitters recommended by so many I concluded to give them a trial. I did, and now am around, and constantly improving, and am nearly as strong as ever.

Poverty and Distress

That poverty which produces the greatest distress is not of the nurse but of the blood. Deprived of its richness it becomes scant and watery, a condition called anemia in medical writings. Given this condition, and scrofulous swellings and sores, general and nervous debility, loss of flesh and appetite, weak lungs, throat disease, spitting of blood and consumption, are among the common results. If you are a sufferer from thin poor blood employ Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which enriches the blood and cures the grave affections. Is more nutritive than cod liver oil, and is harmless in any condition of the system, yet powerful to cure. By druggists.

No Preparation on earth equals ST. JACOBS OIL as a safe, sure, simple and cheap External Remedy. A trial entails but the comparatively trifling outlay of 50 Cents, and every one suffering with pain can have cheap and positive proof of its claims.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Gimour, Cleveland, Ohio;—Chas. S. Strickland, Esq., 9 Boylston street, Boston, Mass.;—Capt. Paul Boyton, the World Renowned Swimmer;—Prof. C. O. Deplessis, manager Chicago Gymnasium, Chicago, Ill.;—Wm. H. Wareing, Esq., asst, General Superintendent, New York Post Office;—Hon. Thomas L. James, Postmaster, New Yark;—Stacy Hill, Esq., Mt. Auburn Inclined Plane Railroad, Cincinnati, Ohio, are among the myriads who have experienced the beneficial effects of that most remarkable remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, and who have testified to its efficacy in unqualified terms.

The ills which flesh is heir to are more often due to impurities in the blood than is generally supposed. The purification of this vital fluid enables the system to ward off its worst enemies. There is no doubt that Hood's Sarsaparilla is one of the best blood purifiers in the world, and we feel confident that those who give it a trial will not be disappointed.

Our representative lately learned the following from Mr. Carl Siegmund, Cor. Congress and Washington Sts.: My daughter suffered from rheumatism to such an extent that it crippled her, rendering her unable to walk at all. We consulted many physicians and used all kinds of medicines, but in vain. At last St. Jacobs Oil effected the happiest results. It cured my daughter.

WINCHESTER.

Mr. Taylor, the popular proprietor of the Winchester and Woburn barge line, has made some changes in his timetable.

There are citizens among us who do not endorse the sentiments and statements of Mr. Johnson on the tax and other questions.

On Tuesday evening, December 20, the Good-Will Club will play "Dora," and a grand good thing it will be, if all signs don't fail in a drouth.

The meetings of the Sodality of the B. V. M. have heretofore been held on Thursday evenings. Hereafter they will be held after vespers on Sunday.

There is a call for a better thoroughfare from the Centre to the Unitarian Church, against the present condition of which their is considerable complaint.

Excepting the first, sessions will be held every Sunday in the month at St. Mary's Church, with mass at 10:30, except on the first Sunday, when it will be at 9 o'clock.

Bernard Cummings has been missing since last Saturday from this village, and as a boat was found adrift on Mystic Pond and Cumming's hat has been found near the dam, it is believed he was drowned in the pond, which was dragged on Wednesday for the body.

Rev. Dr. Barrows gave the third lecture in the course at the Congregational church on last Monday evening. The theme was "Out West, Where and What," and was illustrated with very many views by Prof. Black of Boston. It was quite interesting.

Mr. Charles W. Bradbury died very suddenly at his home in this village on last Monday morning. His health had not been good for some time, but he has been able to attend to his affairs, and his sudden death was was a sad surprise to his friends here. Mr. B. has been a resident of Winchester for many yeare, and was a man highly respected by this community. The cause of his death was heart disease.

On Monday evening, December 26, an entertainment will be given in St. Mary's Church in the interests of the children, who are looking forward to it gleefully. Admissions will be on invitations only, but it is hoped that none of the little folks will be slighted. After the entertainment, which will consist of tableaux, cantata and speeches the Christmas tree will be attacked and made to yield up its presents, which will be the most interesting part of all.

Within a short time the Boston Water Board propose to tackle the Mystic Valley nuisance, and carry out their agreement with the town of Medford on the withdrawal of their petition from the Supreme Court. The plan to abate the nuisance consists in the taking of about six acres of gravelly land in Winchester belonging to the Boston and Lowell Railroad Company, and erecting thereon a pumping station, through which the sewage matter is to be pumped direct from the Mystic Lower Pond, and after filtering is to return through the sewer freed from all offensive odors.

"Mechanic" is scolding, through the Star, Winchester store-keepers for their alleged high prices. He says he can buy provisions in Woburn and Boston from 10 to 50 per cent. cheaper than at home, which I very much doubt. My experience leads me to the conclusion that goods of all kinds may be bought as cheap in Winchester as elsewhere; and more than that, I don't think it looks very well for the Star to allow a correspondent to use its columns to decry the people from whom it gets its bread and butter. It is not a well regulated bird that defiles its own nest, and this trying to drive the citizens of Winchester to do their buying somewhere else by crying up high prices is not just exactly the thing, especially when the cry is baseless.

SKILL IN THE WORKSHOP.—To do good work the mechanic must have good health. If long hours of confinement in close rooms have enfeebled his hand or dimmed his sight, let him at once, and before some organic trouble appears, take plenty of Hop Bitters. His system will be rejuvenated, his nerves strengthened, his sight become clear, and the whole constitution be built up to a higher working condition.

Gage & Co. have a splendid stock of cloths for gents' suits, and they are made up in the latest styles.

It is with pain we notice the Boston Post "All Sorts" used the word "skun." Will æsthetic Boston stand this "playfulness" with the United States language?—New Haven Register.

Hammond's Clothing Store is a very popular resort these days.

They have never Failed.

I have been sick more or less for the last ten years, which has cost me many dollars in doctors and druggist's bills. The last two years it only cost me three dollars. Why? Because I used Sulphur Bitters instead of employing doctors. They cured me of Jaundice.—J. J. Boyd, Hoboken.

Mr. Burgess is offering the ladies great bargains in dry goods. His stock is a prime one, and his prices low.

WE DO NOT CLAIM

that HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulness is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment, to relieve the itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

Very truly yours,
MRS. S. S. MOODY,
No. 75 Broadway.

Interview With a Small Boy.

A small boy leaned out of the rear third-story window of his father's house in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon, looking at the sky, and at times breaking out with the tune, "In the North Sea Lived a Whale." His noise attracted his newspaper neighbor, who also leaned out and said, "Well, Georgie, how are you?"

"I'se a prisoner locked up on bread and water," Georgie replied, "just 'cause I didn't know it was loaded. You see, father was in the army, and last week when you heard him firin' off his pistols he was shootin' at a cat. He shot five times and the cat looked up and smiled when he got frou'. Says I, 'Father, did you ever kill a man when you was a soldier?' thinking, you know, that he couldn't shoot fur a cent. He says, 'I s'pose so.' 'Well,' I says, you muster bin close enough to hit him with an ax,' and he sent me into the house. Well, I seed where he hid his pistol in his overcoat and yesterday I got it out, an' there was an accident. I felt sure it wasn't loaded, for didn't I hear father fire it off? I put it under my piller, 'n' I waited for supper to be over, 'cause I wanted to scare the girls. Girls always holler when the see a pistol. Well, our minister come to tea. Ministers are the greatest hands to come to tea; it's half their work to go 'round an' eat supper with the ladies. Father went down to the Convention, and Bess and Lily, them's the girls, went into the parlor to see the minister didn't get sleepy. 'Bess,' says I, 'lend me your blanket shawl for a few minutes, I want to be an Indian brave.' I wrapped the shawl 'round me, put father's cane over my shoulder for a gun, 'n' then I got the pistol, 'n' crept softly down to the parlor so they wouldn't know Indians was skirmishin' 'round their camp. I pushed open the door, 'n there was the minister and Bess sittin' at opposite ends of the sofy, 'n' Lil was crocheting a lamp mat. All was still, 'n I said 'The hour has come.' Then I give three war whoops 'n' and rushed in and said, 'Surrender or I shoot!' There was a panic. The girls went into hysterics, 'n' the preacher said, 'My son, mebbe that pistol's loaded,'

"Says I, 'S'render, pale chief, or I'll shoot yer ded in yer tracks.' They all made at me to take the pistol away, 'n I fired. Lordy, what a noise. I was skeered most to death. The bullet went into a picture of the signers of the Declamation of Independence, and took off the head of one of the signers. The preacher turned pale 'n said I was a wicked boy. I knowd it, an' I knowd what I was going to ketch. The girls cried like as though there was a fun'ral 'n' I was whipped. I dreamed all night I was fightin' the Indians, 'n' when I woke up this mornin' I felt sure my name would be in the papers. They gave me bread and water for breakfast 'n' wouldn't let me see a newspaper. So I thought I'd escape. I tore up the two sheets, tied one end to the bureau drawer, and was climbin' down like they do at a fire, when something give way, I fell about a thousand feet I thought, I came down so hard. I hit the stone area, 'n' it seemed to me as if it was night and I was lookin' at about a million stars. I didn't know nothin' for a minute. Then I come to."

"What broke?"

"Nothin' broke; the bureau drawer come out. I oughter tied on to the gas fixture. Father wouldn't give me a newspaper but he gave me another lickin' and some more bread and water. I s'pose now I'll be a month on bread 'n' water."

"But you mustn't make so much noise."

"That was op'ra I was singin'. Don't you like op'ra? Well, you don't care if I play the umpah?"

"What is the umpah?"

"Why, didn't you never hear a brass-band going down the street? One man with a little horn goes 'Ta-te-rent-ta-ta-ta-ta,' an' a man with a big horn goes 'um-pah, um-pah, um-pah.' That's the um-pah I play."

As the neighbor drew in his head the small boy began on the "umpah," and he was playing it when the reporter went away.—N. Y. Sun.

NEW BOOKS.

"HE GIVETH HIS BELOVED SLEEP," by Elizabeth Bassett Browning: Lee & Shepard, $1 50.

This is a companion volume to, and arranged in the same style as "Nearer My God to Thee," "Rock of Ages," "Oh Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud," and "Abide with Me," and illustrated by Miss Humphrey. As a Christmas gift none can be more appropriate. The efforts of leading publishers to furnish works that, while beautiful to the eye, are filled with the choicest reading, and the success they have met with is a sure proof that the better a book is, both in its appearance and its contents, the larger will be the demand for it.

LIKE A GENTLEMAN. Lee & Shepard, pp, 214, $1.00.

This volume belongs to one of the numerous No-Name series, in some of which we get the work of the best writers. Several characters hold important positions in the various scenes, which have been so nicely woven as to make a deeply interesting story appear like a history of real life. The temperance question comes in for a large share in the moral, and the rescue of two of the most prominent characters and their restoration to all the joys of a happy home through the fearless energy and unchanging love of a noble woman, who would risk all else to save them, is another proof of the worth of woman's labors in rescuing the fallen from the curse of the fell destroyer.

HOW IS YOUR MAN? Lee & Shepard, 139 pp. paper; 30 cents.

This little volume, by one who professes to know whereof he writes, is devoted to an expose of life-insurance fraudulently conducted. The writer claims that in the State of Pennsylvania bogus insurance is carried on to an extent that would astonish any one who had no knowledge of it. Mock funerals and often murders are charged on the parties interested, and if one-half be true, it is no wonder that life-insurance has acquired a most unenviable reputation in some sections. With all due respect for the benefits of life-insurance when properly conducted, we say it will not harm any one to read this.

The Double Runner Club, or the Lively Boys of Rivertown, shows us what sports the boys of former days engaged in and the mishaps that befel them. No one will doubt but that the veritable Ike Partington is better fitted to describe the wild boys of his time than any other writer, and particularly those acts in which he undoubtedly took a prominent part. One reading of this book will be worth more to drive away the blues and all poor feeling than ten times its cost in patent medicines and will prove a more lasting cure. Readers of all ages from youngest to oldest will welcome this, and the boys of to-day may find that after all they are not so much more roguish than their fathers were as they might be.

Consolation.

"It is hard to lose a husband," sobbed the Widow Wiltwingle, as she gazed down upon the features of the late lamented, and wondered where she could borrow a long mourning veil.

"Yes," sniffed the undertaker; "but all flesh is grass, Timothy v. 22, and it only remains for us to plant him in fashionable a shape as we can. Hadn't we better plow him under tomorrow?"

"Isn't that too quick?" sighed the widow, who knew she couldn't get her washing from the laundry until the day after.

"I don't believe he'll keep," said the undertaker, eyeing the deceased critically. "This here is pretty hard weather for meat, and he's liable to sp'ile unless you shove him in pretty sudden. He smells bad now."

"So he does," replied the widow, sniffling at him cautiously. "And yet I hate to put him in the ground."

"You can store him in the receiving vault for a while, if you like, but if you try to keep him around the house long he's likely to bust open, and you'd better not have that if you can avoid it."

"Is it cold in the vault?" asked the widow, with streaming eyes.

"It ain't so remarkable tropical," responded the undertaker. "Mourners generally put stiffs in there now, and you can pop him into the grave whenever it's handy. By the time you get around to it he'll be so far gone you won't mind it. If I was you I'd stick him in the vault for a few weeks.

"Well, I suppose it is best, and perhaps we'd better do it tomorrow."

"All right," said the undertaker. "I'll cane him during the day and in the morning I'll team him over to the church. Don't cry. Just heel yourself pretty well up in scripture and you'll pull through. Would you like a rosewood or a velvet duster for him?"

"Rosewood by all means. Please handle him tenderly."

"Oh! we may have to bump him around a little, but we'll make it as easy as we can for him. How many teams will you want to haul the grief?"

"I think ten will be enough," replied the widow. "O, what shall I do when he's gone?"

"Don't think of that now," sympathized the undertaker, as he made a few memoranda in his note book. "He's keeping up his end with the angels, and you know the Bible says the Lord is a shepherd who leads us around by green pastors. Brace up, and think of him as being where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary get the best. Who have you got to do the pious business.

"Our minister is preparing himself now."

"That's all right. I'll be around again during the day to try the box on, and I guess I'll freeze him a trifle, or you can't stand him by morning. This heat is terrible on defuncts but we'll slide him away as soon as we can, and you'll just bust with pride to see how it's done."

Applied Theology.

At a meeting of the Woburn Conference Farmer Allen of Wakefield related following anecdote:

One Sunday morning, while a certain deacon was preparing for church, a wandering wayfarer, or, in modern parlance, a tramp, appeared at his door, pleaded his hunger, and begged for something to eat. The deacon looked solemn and frowningly, but reluctantly got a loaf of bread and began to cut it; but while doing so took occasion to admonish the beggar concerning the error of his ways. After reminding him that it was the holy Sabbath which he was desecrating, he asked him if he knew how to pray. "No," was the reply. "Then," said the deacon, "I'll learn you," and he commenced to repeat the Lords prayer.

But just as he uttered the first words, "Our Father," the beggar interrupted him with the question, "What, is he your father and mine, too?"

Yes," the deacon replied.

"Why," exclaimed the beggar, "we are brothers, then, ain't we? Can't you cut that slice a little thicker?"—Albany Arqus.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT.

A bad breath may result from acidity of the stomach, or from biliousness. In either case a few doses of Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient, administered according to directions, will supplant this unpleasant companion with a sweet and healthful one. It is a saline corrective, specially suitable for warm weather, and leaves the system strong to do its work of recuperation.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGIST.

L. HOUGHTON ALLEN,

FUNERAL and FURNISHING UNDERTAKER.

Having recently enlarged my warerooms, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country. I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, white broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the finest cloth covered goods in this country.

All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from other towns as well as Woburn.

Hearses, Carriages, and Flowers furnished at short notice and at low prices. At the old stand, No. 8 Montvale Avenue, near corner of Main street.

WOBURN, April 8, 1880. 35

NORTHERN TEXAS offers greater attractions in way of good, cheap lands, healthy country, mild climate, abundance of timber and water, diversity of products, than any other region now open to settlement. In this rapidly developing section, the Texas & Pacific Railway has in operation over 500 miles of road, along which are to be had, at low prices and on easy terms, millions of acres of good and cheap railroad and government lands, but recently opened for settlement. Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

THE MYSTIC VALLEY RAILROAD.

The prospect for an early completion of the Mystic Valley Railroad is highly encouraging, and the faith of our people in a competing line of passenger and freight transportation to Boston is strong. Until recently, for reasons which need not be stated here, the project of building this road has not been so heartily endorsed by the population along its line as it deserved; but it has evidently taken a new lease of existence, and its speedy construction is no longer a question of much doubt. The facts concerning the matter, as we gather them from reliable sources, are substantially these: the old company have sold to a new one their charter, road-bed, franchises, etc., and received pay therefor: the new company have organized, chosen officers, and let the contract for building the road to Mr. Kelley of New York: Mr. Charles Lewis, of Boston, a gentleman of abundant wealth, energy and enterprise, is at the head of the new company, and principal owner of the road: Mr. Francis Chase, of Salem, one of the best engineers in the country, has been appointed Chief Engineer: Mr. Kelley has sub-let portions of the road, and gangs of men are now at work on it: the line extends from Wilmington to Boston, strikes the Boston & Maine a mile or so this side of the city, which it will enter on that company's tracks and land at Haymarket Square.

There is no doubt but that the new company "mean business." Mr. Chase, the engineer, informed us, last Wednesday, that the road is to be built immediately, and corroberative of this sub-contractors commenced operations in good earnest yesterday morning. In yesterday morning's Globe a sub-contractor at Chelsea advertised for a hundred men and fifty horses to work on his section: the iron for the road has been bought, so we are informed.

That the road will be finished by the first part of March when the charter expires, is not probably; but the General Court will be petitioned this winter for an extension of the charter, a notice of which, we hear, has been published. That the petition will be granted there can be no doubt.

Taking all the facts together it is perfectly safe to say that the Mystic Valley Railroad is to be built, and that considerably within a year the Boston & Lowell will have a sharp rival for Woburn business.

The benefits which Woburn will derive from the success of this enterprise can not be over estimated. It will give it a new start by infusing fresh blood into its veins, and inaugurate a business boom that, in a short time, will set her away ahead of any of the cities in the neighborhood of Boston. Next spring will witness lively times in this town.

☞ Bro. Gray, skipper, cook and all hands of the Malden Mirror, has been sued by the Chief of Police of that town for libel. If the Chief has a plenty of stamps he has gone into just the right business to reduce his pile. Our advice to him is to let Bro. Gray severely alone: if he don't he'll come out a poorer, if not a wiser, man.

☞ Dr. Greene was elected Mayor of Boston last Tuesday against Palmer, the straight Democratic candidate. The Doc was the Citizens' nominee, and was support-ed by the best voting elements of the city.

— Don't fail to cast your eye over Burgess's change of card in this paper.

— A young son of Mr. John Dwyer fell from a fence last Friday and broke his arm.

— Please cast your eye over Mr. Frank Pierce's Christmas announcement, and say what you think about it.

— Our people are feeling very grandly over the cheering prospect of an early completion of the Mystic Valley R. R.

— So far this week it has been very quiet in the Police department: not a person locked up since last Friday night. Good!

— A good cloak or black dolman will be just what some one wants for a Christmas present. You can find it at C. A. Smith & Son's.

— The Woburn Mechanic Phalanx will give their Annual Ball on the evening of January 20, and it is expected to be a rouser.

— Wouldn't it be well, during the sloppy weather this winter, to keep a few men at work on the street crossings near the business portion of the town?

— A sub-contractor on the Somerville end of the M. V. R. R. advertises for 100 men and 50 horses right away. Here is a chance for any Woburn men who may be out of work.

— As was expected, the dance held by the Highland Hose Co. in their hall on Green street last night, was a grand success. Joyce's Band of Boston furnished the music, which was in truth, fine.

— The crossing at Salem street on Main should be put in good condition, and that promptly. A lot of loam and gravel was thrown upon it a few weeks ago, which made walking through it intolerable.

— The officers and twenty privates of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx visited the Soldiers' Home Bazaar in Boston with the Fifth Mass. Regiment on Thursday evening, and took part in a drill and dress parade there.

— Edward C. Nicholls was precipitated from the platform of a street car to the ground last Saturday and had his thumb broken.

— Don't fail to read the four inch-and-a-half ads. of Smith & Paine in this paper. Think of them and their good things in connection with Christmas.

— Cross street station was burglarized last Friday to the extent of a lot of tickets and considerable change. Though not a very extensive affair it was a bold one.

— When our good people arose from their couches on Thursday morning they were greeted with the nastiest kind of a storm made up of snow, rain, fog and some sleet.

— We are indebted to Mr. Will F. Davis for a New England Life Insurance calander—the handsomest thing of the kind we have seen this season. It is a steel engraving, and is pretty as a picture.

— Things have been quiet and "honors easy" at the Temple of Justice this week. Which will make His Honor's Christmas Goose relish all the better: Jas. Kelly, assault and battery; $1 and costs.

— Dear Reader: Please bear and forbear. "Christmas comes but once a year," and it is the poor printer's harvest. After the holidays our advertising will drop off; you'll get more reading; and we shall be all the poorer, if possible, for it.

— A large delegation of the Woburn Y. M. C. A. attended a convention of the Association at Charlestown on Wednesday, and enjoyed a refreshing season. A distinguished clergyman from London and one from St. Louis delivered addresses.

— On Thursday night of last week about 12 o'clock, officer McHugh found the front door of Sweetser's provision store and Salmon's grocery, on same street partly open. There is no doubt but that they were forced open by thieves who intended to enter at a later hour when the officer had gone home. Nothing missing.

— Next spring Woburn will begin to bloom like a rose of Sharon, figuratively speaking. With another railroad new business enterprises will seek settlement here; those here will enlarge and spread out; buildings will start up; real estate will advance in price; population will increase; wealth will accumulate; employment will be given to additional thousands of men and women, and things will boom.

— On the 14th day of December, A. D. 1881, the same being last Wednesday, William Winn, Esq., while surveying some real estate not far about here, discovered crawling on the ground, captured, and killed a black snake, which measured four feet and seven inches from snout to tip. It is only just and proper to add that Mr. Winn did not find this monster snake in his boots.

— Mr. John C. Buck, one of our leading clothiers, has a change of advertisement in this paper. We desire to state that Mr. Buck has a capital stock of goods, including everything kept in a first-class clothing store, and that his prices are away down. He has just opened a very fine assortment of gent's furnishing goods, to which attention is called. People who trade with Buck are always satisfied with goods and prices.

— The Phalanx Masque Ball last week was all that was anticipated, and more too. Everything passed off splendidly, and everybody enjoyed the affair for all there was out. It was more numerously attended than last year, and socially, musically, financially and terpsichoreally it was a grand success. The Edmunds Band of Boston, one of the best that the Hub can brag on, did the music, and it was kept busy from 9 o'clock till 2, when the company dispersed.

— The Woburn Star Course of six first-class entertainments will open in Lyceum Hall on Wednesday evening, January 24. They are to be given under the direction of Mr. T. Marvin Parker, a veteran and very successful manager, who has secured the very best talent for the entire course. Parker's seal is a warranty for the best that can be had in the amusement line, and by looking over his list of entertainments in this paper it will be seen that he is going to do his level best this winter.

— We were very glad to meet and shake the honest hand of our old-time friend, Francis Chase, Esq., at present Chief Engineer of the Mystic Valley Railroad, as we did las Wednesday. We found that years sit very ightly on his level head, and that the freshness of youth still rests on his cheek like the bloom on the sunny side of a peach. Mr. Chase is one of the best civil engineers in New England, in which profession he has had a large experience. Forty years ago he surveyed and located the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth railroad, and afterwards he was for ten years its General Superintendant. He is now as busy as a bee on the Mystic Valley.

— We can't forego the pleasure of saying an extra word or two about the holiday display at the popular store of Copeland, Bowser & Co. On Thursday we asked Mr. Lyford to show us around, and he did it in a real gentlemanly way, with which we were pleased. Now we have begun it, we can allude to the great Christmas stock of this firm only in a general manner, because to enumerate just the leading goods, the handsomest and most costly, would take up a good share of "the broadside of a meeting-house," as they used to say before "churches" became the rage, and we haven't any broadsides of meetinghouses in the JOURNAL to spare this week. With great confidence we affirm this; a larger, better, handsomer, richer, jollier stock, consisting of more things—more unique, nobby, nice things—for holiday gifts, can't be found in Woburn. This may seem bold talk; but it is true, and if any of our readers doubt it, we advise them to go to Copeland, Bowser & Co's and look about for themselves.

— Mr. Ebenezer Parker has a good tenement to let. See card.

— Read the warrant for Town Meeting, and then attend it and do your duty as free-born American citizens.

— The Florence Etching Silk, a very popular thing, is advertised by Mr. Cummings. Read what is said about.

— The windows of Mr. Dodge, the jeweler, look about as tempting as anything there is in town. The splendid goods are finely arranged.

— Particular attention is called to the advertisement of the Hammond Clothing Store. It hardly need be added that the stock is kept full in every line.

— Mr. Mark Allen, who we have no hesitation in calling "a gentleman and scholar," placed us under obligations to him last week for the use of his press, for which he will please accept thanks.

— Mr. Cornelius Mahoney was stricken down with apoplexy while at work in a field on Church Avenue last Tuesday afternoon, and died in a couple of hours after. His age was seventy years.

— It isn't often that the JOURNAL is obliged to appeal to its patrons for patience in delivery; but a break-down last week set us twenty-four hours behind, for which we ask their pardon. Accidents will happen in the best families.

— The winter has very favorable to country editors and other poor people thus far. Less coal and clothing are comfortably got along with than would have answered in a very cold winter. And December is generally calculated to be about the worst one of the months to contend with.

— We acknowledge the receipt of a generous slice from the bridal loaf of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Sweetser, whose nuptuals were celebrated a Malden, on Wednesday evening last. On that important occasion the Highland Hose Company, of which Mr. Sweetser is Asst. Foreman, presented him with an elegant writing-desk in token of their regard for him. It was a generous thing to do.

— It is not surprising at all that Munroe's Clothing Store is a favorite place to buy all sorts of clothing, overcoats, hats and caps, underwear, gent's furnishing goods, etc., because first, there is not a better stock than Munroe's outside of Boston; secondly, his prices rule low all the way through. Honest goods in the prevailing styles, low figures and fair dealing will win customers every day in the week. Hence Mr. Munroe's heavy trade.

— Mr. A. E. Thompson has stacks and stacks of good things for the holidays. He has made it a point to go about and get just what he knows his customers like best: and we make bold to say that there is nothing lacking in his store to make glad the hearts of men, women and children at the good, merry Christmas time. It is the common speech of people that, after you have unsuccessfully searched all over town for what you want, go to A. E. Thompson's and you'll find it.

— Among the many articles that C. A. Smith & Son have secured for Christmas trade we notice an assortment of work and nursery baskets and stands, made by the Wakefield Rattan Co.

— At the Vesper Service in the Unitarian church next Sunday evening, the following musical selections will be rendered:

Organ Prelude. Arr. by Lucy.
Tenor and Soprano solos.
Choir. Come, Holy Spirit. Denks.
Gloria. Mozart.
Response. Beethoven.
Choir Hymn. Arrangement from Cantata of Esther. Lucy.
Solo. The Lost Chord. Sullivan.
Miss Allen.
Organ postlude. Handel.

— Last Monday afternoon, Thomas Kelley, about fifteen years old, broke through the ice at the lower end of Horn Pond. He was seen to go down by men near at hand, but attempts at rescue were unavailing. His body was recovered a few hours after by officer Michael Walsh. On the same day a little son of Mr. Wade, engineer at the Water Works, had a narrow escape from drowning in Horn Pond. His father bravely took to the thin ice and rescued his little son with much difficulty. Boys should take warning from these cases.

— The Young People of the First Unitarian Society, will hold their annual Christmas Festival in Lyceum Hall, Friday evening, Dec. 23, 1881. From 7.30 to 9 o'clock there will be a stage entertainment consisting of Loves of Bo-Peep, Santa Claus Frolic, and Babes in the Wood. At 9 o'clock the hall will be cleared and there will be dancing until 12 o'clock. Music: Ames' Orchestra of Boston. Admission 50 cents. Tickets may be obtained at Hammond's Clothing House, Lyceum Building, or at the door on the evening of the entertainment.

— We are glad to know that the Y. M. C. A. are alive, and active in good works. Let every well-wisher to humanity encourage the Association. Here is a chance to render material aid, and try people's talk by their acts: on February 21 and 22 the Y. M. C. A. of Woburn will give a Fair, with intent of replenishing their exchequer with which to increase their scope of usefulness and do still more good. It will be worth patronizing, to say nothing of the merits of the object, and we give this timely notice of it so that there need be no excuse for meagre contributions to their strong-box.

— The Boston Branch sent in a new advertisement which we wish we could have printed this week, for it tells all about the thousand-and-one choice things in the grocery line which Fitz & Stanley have taken great pains to secure to make Christmas dinners go off to the great delight of Woburn epicures. It is almost as nice as a feast to go into the Boston Branch and take a survey of the endless variety of good things—the fruits, confections, nuts, spices, fragrant bohea, aromatic coffee, etc., great tempting piles of which fill their spacious store. And you would be surprised to learn how cheap all these delicious things are sold. Why, for a mere pittance one can carry off enough to make a large family of old and little ones as happy as clams all the merry Christmas day long, with considerable left over for the next morning.

— It is a real delight to walk up (or down) Main street after the gas is lighted and look into the store windows. There is Burgess's, neat as a pin, tasty, and causes many a halt in the crowd as it passes along: Leed's, with its profusion of plants, leaves, ferns, and other fine things: Dodge's, that makes ones mouth water as he passes it: Copeland, Bowser & Co., a very handsome and attractive display, with stores and stores of beautiful things inside: Hill's, with charming Christmas gift goods: Cummings's—such a sight! We cant describe it: Pierce's, across the way, with endless patterns of Christmas slippers for the minister and the editor; Buck's, a little farther along, as fine a window as there is among them: Dr. Dodge's windows blaze with beauty: Buss makes a handsome display of cards: Charley Munroe's great windows show off in fine style: and so on to the end of the chapter. And such delightful things to eat that the markets show! Why, we should know that "merry Christmas" was at hand with our eyes shut—the air is so full of it, and we can almost snuff the fragrance of the holly and mistletoe.

— As the good time approaches—that joyous season of the year when hearts grow mellow and hands open—the "merry Christmas," when good feelings and kindly remembrance of others prevail, the mind goes about over our circle of acquaintances in search of any who may be in need of aid, and to whom, without it, Christmas must be a hard, dreary time. In thus casting about we have met a case of this kind. Having investigated it thoroughly and become satisfied of its merits, we have no hesitation in appealing to those to whom prosperity has been kindly vouchsafed by the Good Giver to join us in aiding one of our most worthy citizens—one who amid financial reverses, domestic afflictions, and physical infirmity, has ever maintained a character above reproach, and held the esteem and confidence of the community equal to that of any other person. We know there are many who would come and freely give of their abundance was the name of our needy friend given here, and therefore we invite all who are willing and want to promote the happiness of an estimable family at this joyous season of the year—to show their "good will" to the deserving—to call at our office where all needed information will be given.

— Though not intended for publication we take the liberty to print the following from a note received from Mr. Amos Cummings last Tuesday. We are glad to add the testimony of so successful a business man in favor of liberal advertising, and trust it may induce others to go and do likewise. There is no doubt about it—advertising in your local papers pays: "Mr. Hobbs: In looking over the JOURNAL of last week my attention was called to your notice of my system of advertising, and I asked myself, how many who read this will believe the statement made? And yet how consistent and natural! I add my testimony to your words. I have never known such an increase of business since I came to Woburn, nearly twelve years ago. Certainly, I have not grown smarter, though I hope I am wiser. I think it but right and just to say that I have an increasing faith in advertising—it touches in so many ways. My greatly increased business enables me to buy in large quantities and hence to greater advantage. I am surprised at the difference in prices paid for goods by many parties, and wonder how they get along. Please consider this a frank acknowledgement of the truth of your statement; and if it shall induce your patrons to advertise more freely and thus draw business into town, I am satisfied—A. Cummings."

— Among the leading merchants of Woburn who report a large increase of business in 1881 over any former year, and whose increased footings are highly satisfactory and encouraging, is the dry goods firm of Charles A. Smith & Son. The store that for a long time was found ample to accommodate their trade has been doubled in capacity within the last year, and it now begins to dawn on the proprietors' minds that their fine, spacious quarters are becoming too circumscribed for advantageously handling their great stocks of wares. Of course there are many reasons for this large increase of business, but the chief is, that they keep what the people want to buy in their lines. It would be difficult to find a larger, better or more carefully selected stock of dry goods than the Messrs. Smith handle in any suburban Boston town. It consists of a great variety in all the popular styles, sterling fabrics, and what the public want. People go to trade at those places where they can get just what they are in pursuit of. Besides dry goods, and all the term implies, the Smiths have lately opened carpet rooms and connected the sale of them with their other trade. This has proved a profitable step, for it is found that they can successfully compete with Boston prices and make a per cent. For the holidays this house is offering many rare attractions, although it does not indulge in so great a display as some others, and people looking for Christmas presents will do well to call there. Secondly and thirdly: the Messrs. Smith are honest and reliable, and sell goods at bottom prices all the time.

— A wedding of note took place at the residence of Mr. Marshall Richardson, on Middle street, at half past eleven o'clock on Tuesday forenoon, at which Dr. March, pastor of the First Congregational church, officiated. The twain made one and very happy by the Doctor's words were Mr. Charles P. Bates, clerk in the house of Bates, Reed & Cooley, importers of dry goods in New York City, and nephew of the senior member of the firm, and Miss Anna F. Richardson, daughter of the host, and one of Woburn's very best young ladies. The invitations were confined to relatives and intimate friends of the fair bride and her family, and yet the company was a large and happy one. The presents were numerous, valuable and appropriate, among which was a check for $500 from the groom's uncle, Mr. Bates above mentioned, and also a case of solid silver containing thirty-nine pieces from the same generous hands, which were accompanied by a letter which, coming from such a source, was more gratifying than the liberal gift of money and costly ware; a cash present of $200 from the associates of the bridegroom in the New York store; a curious themometer from Mr. Everett Fox, of Woburn; an elegant cake basket from the Methodist choir, of which the bride has been a member for the last year; solid silver pieces from Mr. and Mrs. John E. Stearnes of Manchester, N. H., and a valuable dressing-case from the Stearns brother and sister; a beautiful card-receiver from Mr. and Mrs. Dennis of Woburn; and valuable gifts from the Messrs. Johnson, R. Bates, brother of Charles, the bride's parents, and others. After congratulations and a fine dinner, the happy couple took the 3.15 train for Boston, to go thence to Vermont, where they will visit for a few days, and then repair to New York and settle down to wedded life. And may all good fortune and much happiness attend them.

I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine.

Lyceum Hall.

Mr. Editor:—Your informant was not quite correct in saying that Lyceum Hall was dedicated on Tuesday evening, Feb. 27, 1856, when a grand ball was given by the Woburn Phalanx. The dedicatory exercises took place on Tuesday evening the 26th. On that occasion J. P. Converse, Esq., chairman of the building committee, made an appropriate address; the Woburn Musical Association, then in its best estate, sang several pieces of classical music, also an ode written for the occasion by one of our citizens. The inaugural lecture followed later in the evening and was given by Rev. E. H. Chapin, whose complimentary remarks on the beauty of the hall are well remembered. The interest in the new building and its fine accommodations for lectures, concerts, dances, etc., was very great. The hall on the evening of the dedication was densely packed from the opening of the doors at 6, to the close of Dr. Chapin's lecture at 10 P. M. Winchester, Stoneham and Burlington, were well represented in the audience. The great ball on the following Thursday evening as your informant states, was a brilliant affair, and many distinguished men in military circles from different parts of the state participated in the festivities. A rumor had got abroad that the walls of the main building were unsafe and many entered its doors with a suppressed fear that something might happen. But the green walls of those days stood the great pressure without a crack, and have since borne the weight of many a crowded audience. G. M. C.

Beatty Organs and Pianos.

We learn that Mayor Beatty, of Washington, New Jersey, is receiving hundreds of orders for his Pianos and Organs for Christmas presents. We advise our readers to order early and avoid the rush. Read his advertisement.

The old time idea that consumption is incurable, has been demonstrated by science to be fallacious. Many remedies have been found for it, but none so sure, so quick, nor so pleasant as Phosphatine. This medicine is composed entirely of phosphate and gastric elements and contains nothing whatever that can prove injurious to the physical system. Its composition makes its especially well adapted also for all diseases that grow out of an improper assimiliation of the food; it acts as a soothing, sustaining influence in all cases of nervous prostration; it reinvigorates the stomach and causes the blood to flow through the veins in a healthy and active manner. It is a most excellent cure for all the diseases to which women are subject, and is also good for the ills of childhood. Indeed, no well regulated household should be without it. It was invented in Boston and has gained much of its already great popularity from the recommendations of those who have used it here and elsewhere and enjoyed its benefits. It would be well for those who need Phosphatine and never tried it to read what is being said of it in another column.

BURLINGTON.

LECTURE.—Rev. E. G. Porter, of Lexington, gave a unique and interesting lecture on "The Way Our Ancestors Travelled in Britain," in the church course, Tuesday evening. The next lecture or concert of the course will soon be announced.

Dr. Wistar's Wild Cherry Balsam. This Balsamic compound has become a home fixture. Let all who suffer, and have in vain attempted to cure their coughs, colds, bronchial or, pulmonary complaints, make use of this unequaled remedy. It can be relied upon, the mass of testimony that has been published since its introduction being ample proof of its efficacy.

No music below the skies is equal to that of pure, silvery speech from the lips of a man or woman of high culture.—J. S. Hart.

"How do you manage," said a lady to her friend, "to appear so happy all the time?" "I always have Parker's Ginger Tonic handy," was the reply," and thus keep myself and family in good health. When I am well I always feel good natured." See other column.

Speaking of Governors suggests the mention of an item we received from Mr. Henry A. Knight, Foreman at Chas. Waters & Co.'s Governor and Valve Works, Boston, Mass.: I have used St. Jacobs Oil among our employees and find that it never fails to cure. The men are delighted with the wonderful effects of the Oil, as it has cured them of bruises, burns, etc.

Mr. C. L. Oudesluys, a leading importer of Baltimore, has stated that nothing has done his dyspepsia, indigestion, &c., so much good as that most wonderful of all tonic and reviving medicines—Brown's Iron Bitters. Just think of it: at a supper the other night, although a chronic dyspeptic, he says he ate, at 12 o'clock, fried oysters, chicken salad and ice cream, after which taking a dose of Iron Bitters, he never spent a more pleasant night, with no dyspeptic symptoms in the morning.

In offering to the public this course of entertainments, I would state that great discrimination has been employed in the selection of talent. It will be my aim to conduct these entertainments solely for pleasure and benefit of the public. A nominal price has been made, which will save our town's people the discomfort as well as expense of going elsewhere. The actual cost of the course will exceed eight hundred and fifty dollars, and will necessitate a large sale of tickets. I believe the public will extend their hearty co-operation. With their encouragement and support I cannot fail to make this course of entertainments the most successful of any ever given in Woburn. Respectfully,

T. M. PARKER, Manager.

WINCHESTER.

The late Fair of the ladies of the Unitarian Church was a real success all round.

There is a revival of religious interest in the M. E. Church here. Recent meetings of the society have been largely attended.

Several additional gas lights have been put up on Main street. They were needed, but there is no longer cause for complaint.

L. Quimby has sold his house on Walnut street to P. Waldemeyer; and A. C. Quimby has purchased the Law house on Mount Pleasant St.

Louis Parkhurst of Athol, and Nettie M. Wetherbee of Waltham, have been duly confirmed Principal and Assistant of our High School.

The Congregational Sunday School recently voted donations to the amount of $225 for various worthy purposes. "It is more blessed to give than receive."

Our people are a good deal stirred up over the flattering prospects of the Mystic Valley Railroad. They like it, for Winchester will be greatly benefitted by its completion.

The Good Will Club will give a dramatic entertainment next Tuesday evening in Harmony Hall at which "Dora," and "Box and Cox" will be given by amateur actors. Everybody expects it will be a very nice thing.

The body of Bernard Cummings, whose disappearance and probable drowning were mentioned in the JOURNAL last week, was found on Thursday afternoon in Mystic Pond in sixty feet of water. His gun was found in the hands of the unfortunate man.

Mr. Josiah Hovey has secured telephonic communication with Boston, and it is fair to presume a good many others have, though for the certainty of it I cannot vouch, not having circulated round town as much this week as usual.

Some of our good Winchester ladies are getting themselves stirred up, and are trying to stir up others, on the female suffrage question. They are not quite satisfied with what the majority of people regard as "woman's sphere," and are disposed to be heard on the question. I hear that a few talk right out in meeting full as bold as that young and tender piece of feminity, Susan B. Anthony, and propose to fight it out on the line of "No Surrender," if it takes all summer. A meeting has been held to discuss the matter and prepare the ground for future cultivation, and I shouldn't wonder if our ladies made a pretty strong pull for the right to be selectmen.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

When I was sick my room looked like a drug store, I had so many bottles in it. The more I dosed the worse off I was. Finally I paid my doctor and told him he needn't come any more. I was troubled with Chronic Rheumatism, and couldn't get out of bed alone. Six bottles of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Fireman, Boston.

[Elgin, (Ill.) Daily Leader.]

The subjoined opinion, we perceive, is by J. A. Daniels, Esq., of Messrs. Stogdill & Daniels, attorney, La Crosse, Wis., and appears in the La Crosse Chronicle: Sometime since, I was attacked with pain in and below one of my knee joints. A few applications of St. Jacobs Oil quieted the pain and relieved the information. I regard it as a valuable medicine.

Unhealthy or inactive kidneys cause gravel, Bright's disease, rheumatism and a horde of other serious and fatal diseases, which can be prevented with Hop Bitters, if taken in time.

They have never Failed.

I have been sick more or less for the last ten years, which has cost me many dollars in doctors and druggist's bills. The last two years it only cost me three dollars. Why? Because I used Sulphur Bitters instead of employing doctors. They cured me of Jaundice.—J. J. Boyd, Hoboken.

SCROFULA.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and when once settled has the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,

SARAH C. WHITTIER.

Written for the Journal.

Health Leaves.

No. 5.

It is not the conditions surrounding our bodies alone that affect them injuriously, but often that which enters into them. The ordinary articles of diet, that under usual circumstances are health giving and invigorating, may be made injurious when taken in improper quantities, or at improper hours, or with too great frequency, or with too great rapidity. All these various rules of diet have been frequently given and repeated, but there are always a sufficient number of those who are indifferent to them to keep well filled the ranks of the army of dyspeptics. Of more importance are those things which are hurtful in themselves. Such under certain conditions, varying with the article and the uses, are the whole class of what are known as stimulents.

The least harmful of these, tea and coffee, are seldom used to any great extent of injury by adults. Sometimes one finds their digestion gradually weakening, or themselves growing wakeful, or irritable, or feeling unnatural, and they begin to suspect their favorite cup of Java or Oolong, and refusing it for a while, find their suspicions confirmed. A greater injury is done by both tea and coffee, where one finds themselves put to a severe strain, and their appetite having failed, they do not get sufficient nourishment to sustain themselves, they resort to these mild stimulants. The result is, they hold out considerably longer, and do not give up until they have done themselves serious harm, and sometimes irreparable injury. The tea and coffee, furnish no tissue building material, but they simply stimulate until nature has exhausted every available particle for repair, and then the injury is more difficult of cure. But it is to children that these stimulants are more certainly harmful. A very eminent physician once said, that any one who would give a child, younger than eighteen years, tea or coffee ought to suffer capital punishment. That is putting it rather strong, perhaps, but there can be no doubt that many are seriously if not permanently injured by the thoughtlessness, or ignorance of their parents in allowing them these beverages. The nervous organization which these stimulants principally affect, is proportionately much more developed in children than in adults, and they cannot bear the strain. The same effect also comes from tobacco. This is infinately more injurious to the child than to adult life, though certainly poisonous at best. That so many people endure the free use of it so many years, only proves the wonderful elasticity of the human system, and how much abuse it may accustom itself to. But the strongest system sometimes will yield to the too free use of this form of stimulant, and then its characteristic symptoms of nervous irritation and exhaustion will show themselves while with children it results in stunting the growth of both body and mind. It seems somewhat surprising at first view, that thest things which are so utterly worthless at best, and so often positively injurious, should have such a hold upon humanity.

Their use was never so general as today; used by both young and old; rich and poor male and female; the aristocrat and plebeian, and their use is still increasing. The explanation of it lies in the contamination of evil association, and in the craving stimulation which springs from the exhaustion that the customs of all grades of society entails. The highest ideal of healthy living will never be reached until their use is abandoned.

MERRY CHRISTMAS.

A Merry Christmas to all our patrons and everybody else. And many returns of the same to you and yours.

CHRISTMAS.

It is expected of the editor, particularly of the rural representatives of the craft, that, when the time arrives, he will say something about Christmas, and things connected therewith. The course most commonly pursued is to give, more or less briefly, a history of the day; its observance by Christian nations; and then to elaborate on the text, "On Earth, Peace," etc.

We would not even seem to question the intelligence of the readers of the JOURNAL by informing them that the word Christmas is made up of two others, Christ and mass; nor that it is a church festival held each year on the 25 th of December, in memory of the birth of Christ. As the birthday of the Savior is not certainly known, the reason for holding the festival on December 25 is not quite clear, except that the custom of observing it on that day has been one of long use, and the exact date is not deemed to be material. Properly speaking there are twelve days of Christmas, and in olden times—just how remote we cannot say—jollifications and rejoicings were kept up during this period, ending on the 5th of January in a grand climax of feasting, drinking, dancing and sports. Old English mansions still stand—not many, to be sure—that have been the scenes in the long-ago of roystering goings-on during the twelve "merry Christmas" days; but history is silent concerning the length of time it took the jovial Squires and Dames to recover from the effects of their prolonged and excessive devotions to the flagon and festive boards.

It probably has occurred to the reflective and conservative mind that the celebrations of the birth of the Savior are carried to excess in these modern times, and that the true intent and meaning of them have been perverted. Originally the Christmas festival was a religious one; it was kept as a holy season; but it bears little of that character now. In the elaborate preparations for the merry-makings, and in celebrating the day, the reason for them is almost entirely lost sight of; and, if ever thought of, but small reverence is paid to its sacred character. General dissipation, mild and otherwise; ministering to the grosser elements of our natures; self-gratification, display—anything but pious rejoicings over the greatest event the world ever witnessed—characterize the keeping of the festival, and the holy Christmas time is given over to eating, dancing, and the most carnal of carnal merry-making.

But it isn't a good time to rake up such things. There is something in the air that fault-finding don't agree with; and people don't look or act as though they wanted to be preached to. So, we hold our peace.

☞ The Medford Mercury reached its first mile stone last Saturday, having set out on its earthly career December 17, 1880. If the Winchester Star has no objections, we would like to say that the Mercury comes squarely up to our ideal of a first class family journal in every particular. With the W. S.'s permission, we would also say that the Mercury is in a very prosperous condition.

☞ Judge Horace Gray of this State has been appointed a Justice of the United States Supreme Court to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Justice Clifford. But for the assassination Judge Gray would have been appointed by President Garfield, whose plans Mr. Arthur has done well to carry out.

☞ Mr. Blaine is out of politics, at least out of office, for the first time in a good many years. But he won't stay out long: he is too important a person—too great a man—to be shelved in the prime of life; and besides, the American people will want to use him again by and by.

☞ Senator Howe of Wisconsin has been appointed Postmaster General in place of Mr. James, resigned.

H. A. Endicott—Warning.
B. Millett—To Let.
J. W. & E. F. Johnson—Card.

— Please read the Boston Branch card in this paper.

— Dea. Millett has a nice residence to rent on reasonable terms.

— The JOURNAL sends out greetings and a "Merry Christmas" to all its friends.

— We are in receipt of "Andrews & Cutler's Almanac" for next year, for which we thank those gentlemen. It is a handsome work.

— You all know the saying about a "green Christmas" making "fat graveyards," don't you? We don't believe there is anything in it to speak of.

— "The Night-Blooming Cereus," a prime Christmas story, written for the JOURNAL, will be printed next week—in the midst of the happy holidays.

— We print in this paper the professional card of J. W. & E. F. Johnson to which persons having to do with the law are respectfully referred.

— Old Santa Claus in the window of Hammond's Clothing Store attracts crowds of people. It tickles all the little ones that pass almost to death. There is nothing better in town.

— About this time buy your Almanacs and Diaries—at Horton's.

— Mr. A. E. Thompson has the best material for a fried mush and syrup breakfast that can be found in the 17 States.

— The merchants, without exception, tell the JOURNAL that this holiday trade has been very much larger than ever before in Woburn.

— A couple or three weeks ago Thomas McLear of North Woburn packed up and left his wife's bed and board and has not been heard from since.

— Though his Christmas sales has been immense, the store of Mr. Cummings is still a sight to behold. Such piles and piles of everything! This and tomorrow evening will probably witness the greatest rush of the holiday season, and people must go early if they would avoid the jam.

— A man giving the name of Capt. J. A. Langill, Esq., and the Baron J. A. Longeulle, Esq., has been sponging money from members of a family of a similar name, who live in Massachusettss and the Provinces. A lady in Woburn, who had paid him several dollars, placed the matter in the hands of Chief Conn who satisfied himself that the whole thing was a fraud.

—A comedy company, calling themselves a "New York Co.," visited Woburn Wednesday evening, and gave a show to a very poor audience. Thursday morning they attempted to leave town without paying the bill poster, S. H. Cutter. The trunks of the company were attached after being placed on the cars, and at the last moment all parties were satisfied, and the showmen and their goods left Woburn.

— We learn from a neat card of invitation that Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kenney will celebrate their silver wedding at their residence, 153 Main street, Sunday evening Jan. 1. They were married on New Years evening, 1857—twenty-five years ago—and now propose to honor the event by receiving and entertaining their many friends in Woburn and elsewhere on New Years evening, 1882. We suspect it is going to be a noteworthy affair, pretty numerously attended.

THANKS.—I avail myself of the tendered columns of the WOBURN JOURNAL as a medium through which to express my hearty and sincere thanks and lasting obligations to the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary Corps, Burbank Encampment, Post 33, G. A. R., for their very kind invitation to me to visit with them the Soldiers' Home Bazaar in Boston, on the 15th inst., and for their generous and ladylike treatment of their humble servant on that exceedingly pleasant occasion. William B. Harris.

— Perhaps advertising don't pay: some people say it don't, and mebby they are right; but you can't make any live business man of Woburn believe it by several sled-lengths. To illustrate: Copeland, Bowser & Co. advertised a "children's reception" for last Saturday, the result of which was that over 800 children visited their bazaar of beautiful things between 9 a. m. and 3 p. m. on that day! Over 800! It was the merriest and jolliest day that the store of C. B. & Co. ever experienced. And, yet, advertising don't pay! Of course it don't.

— Mr. Charles Stevens, who is employed in the machine shop connected with Simonds' Stiffening Establishment, has just completed a neat model of the engine used in that building. It is 16 inches long, made of iron and is painted red, which makes it a rather pretty ornament. Its drive wheel is 10 inches in diameter, giving the piston rod a three-inch stroke. It is altogether a fine piece of mechanism and shows that much time must have been employed in getting it up, but Mr. Stevens informs us that it was done only in his spare moments after work hours.

MR. EDITOR:— Is it not about time to hear of a vigorous administration of the law regarding illegal sale of liquor? If the number of intoxicated persons on our streets is any indication, something is rotten in Denmark. My reading of the published reports of the doings of the Police Court fails to convince me that the Judge is overburdened with cases of prosecution of liquor sellers. Was the expression of the town's sentiment on the matter last spring a farce? Is the play to be continued till another election? Why must so fair a place as this suffer this terrible curse to longer remain?

— The Woburn Bookstore, by S. Horton, speaks for itself, and needs no recommendations from anybody. It is well-known all over Woburn and neighboring towns, and is popular. It wasn't to praise Mr. Horton and his store that we sharpened our pencil—only to suggest to our readers that the proper thing to do at this season of the year is to buy a Diary. The head of every well regulated family needs a Diary just as much as the household needs a new almanac at the beginning of the year. Likewise to say that Diaries of all kinds, sizes, and prices are kept by Horton "in quantities to suit purchasers." He has an ocean of them in all imaginable styles, from the simple ten-center to as high up as your money will go. And everything else in proportion.

— A cock-match took place in Woburn last Saturday night. The scene of the main was a barn not far from the Winchester line. It was gotton up and managed by three Woburn men, who, it is said, made "big money" out of it. The company, numbering quite five hundred persons, assembled around the pit in the barn about midnight, soon after which the cruel sport began, and was kept up until four o'clock Sunday morning. The price of admission was fifty cents, and men from Boston and neighboring towns for twenty miles around paid this for a chance to stand four or five hours and see the poor fowls destroy one another and bet. Several pairs fought, and large sums of money changed hands. Cocks were brought from a long distance away, but the Woburn birds won the money in almost every contest. Everything was conducted in an orderly manner. This item of news will probably be a surprise to the police.

— C. A. Smith & Son have a nice assortment of Box Stationary.

— Remember The Wilkinsons next Wednesday evening. See ad.

— Now is the time to go to Horton's and subscribe for your 1882 magazines and literary papers.

— Niel Harkins, engineer at Shaw's tannery, had his face very seriously burned on Tuesday morning by a mass of melted babbitt which he was handling flying into it.

— Please bear in mind that the Perham Hose Company give another of their very enjoyable assemblies this evening. There will be tip-top music and everything bang-up.

— The Woburn Brass Band will give a public rehearsal in Lyceum Hall on the evening of Feb. 1. It will draw a house-ful. Everybody will want to be there, and they will go.

— A great bargain! C. A. Smith & Son have opened to-day, one hundred picture frames, (cabinet size,) which they sell at 25 cents. They would not look dear at 75 cts; just the thing for Christmas.

— Mr. Mark Allen will play Col. Bruce in "Nick of the Woods" with Mr. Joseph Proctor at Lawrence next Monday evening. He played the same part with Mr. Proctor more than thirty years ago.

— An effort is making in town to form a class for the study of Shakespeare's plays under charge of a noted competent Shakespearean scholar. Ladies and gentlemen interested in the matter can communicate with the subscriber. Geo. H. Young.

— Judging from the interest taken in it, we conclude that that the Christmas Festival to be given in Lyceum Hall by the Unitarian Society this evening will be very largely attended. It is going to be a nice entertainment, and worth anybody's going to see.

— Several Woburn people attended the celebration by the Congregational Club of Boston of the two hundred and sixty-first anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims at Music Hall last Friday evening. Many eminent men were present and addressed the meeting.

— Mr. A. Cummings is building an addition to his store 25x40 feet, two stories, which will give him a salesroom just 100 ft. long. The second story of the addition will be used for a work-room. Increase of trade demands more room.

— No. 6 of "Health Leaves" published on the fourth page of this paper, is worthy of careful perusal. It is a first rate temperance article, and seems to strike at the root of things. Men inclined to bibulous habits ought to read the article and profit by it.

— An error of date somehow crept into the advertisement of the Star Course in this paper last week. The opening entertainment is to be given on the evening of January 4, instead of 24, a fact which our readers will please bear in mind. It is to be a grand good thing too.

— On the outside of this paper we print an account of an accident to a little boy who was born in Woburn, trusting it will excite the pity of those who knew the Hunts here. Any donations for the mother and little boy may be left with Miss Hattie Bosworth at Cummings's store.

— A meeting of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx Association will be held on the evening of January 9th, to make a permanent organization and choose officers. This Association is composed of ex-members of the company and patrons of the same, and are called "Fine Members," exactly why we have never heard explained.

— There is a class in the Congregational Sunday School here composed of about ten Swedes, only three of whom can speak English. Mr. Charles Rosenquist and wife are the teachers, by whom the lessons, instructions of Superintendent and addresses are interpreted to the class. We learn that quite a good many Swedes are settling here, which will be a good thing for the town, for they are a quiet, sober, industrious, intelligent and well-informed people.

— We have good ground for believing that there is something in preparation in aid of the Soldiers' Home which will attract general attention when fully announced. It is said those fine musical artists, Mrs. Clough-Phinney and Mr. F. H. Lewis, are deeply implicated in the affair, and if they, with assisting talent, cannot bring out a Comic Opera in the best style, as well as furnish other points of a superior musical and mirthful entertainment, we know not who can. Let everybody be ready for the pleasant event soon after the "glad New Year."

MR. EDITOR:— I shall be doing your music-loving readers a favor by calling their attention to the Friday afternoon public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, George Henschel, Conductor, in Boston Music Hall. For the small admission fee of twenty-five cents the opportunity is presented to hear music of the highest order rendered by a company rivalling the Thomas Orchestra in its palmiest days.

GEO. H. YOUNG.

— An entertainment consisting of music and reading was given at the vestry of the Congregational church on Thursday evening of last week by Miss Minnie Roby, assisted by Miss Hattie Beckford of Boston, reader, Miss Ardelle Herrick, Mrs. Fulton, Mr. F. Morse, vocalists, Miss A. Josephine Lang, pianist, and Mr. Eph Cutter, accompanist. The opening number, "Song without Words," by Mendelssohn, was played by Miss Lang with good interpretation, the distinct articulation of tone, so essential in this class of music, being quite marked, although the tempo seemed accidentally taken a little fast for the best development of the cantable style throughout. Altogether, the playing of Miss Lang betrays much intuitive ability and faithful study. The two-part song, "Life's Dream is O'er," adapted to the beautiful music of Ascher, was exceptionally well rendered by Mrs. Fulton and Miss Roby, (even to the correct taking of the cacophonous tones of the fourth and fifth, singularly used without accompaniment as a fragment of the chord of the seventh, leading to the close of the last phrase,) and was a most enjoyable number. Miss Herrick sang with much excellence in her selection from Verdi's Ernani, but evidently felt the want of that inspiration that accompanies a fuller house. C.

— Charles and Lillie Wilkinson—familiar names to Woburn folks—will appear in Lyceum Hall next Wednesday evening, in E. A. Lock's new play, "Priscilla,"—the best that popular author ever wrote. It is plum full of realistic scenes and situations, and "takes" wonderfully. The Wilkinsons have just returned from Europe, where they have been very successful, and will be heartily greeted here.

— Business at the Police Court has been from fair to middling this week. The watchfulness of the lynx-eyed conservators of the peace has a good effect on the otherwise would-be violaters of law and order: John McGonagle fired a customer from his store on Saturday, and Monday p. m. was set apart to prove if the same was illegal: decision reserved until Saturday. Charles D. Onion answered "not guilty" to a charge of adultery, but the witnesses got the best of him, and he was bound over to the Grand Jury. He gave bail. Thomas Manning, who, for nigh 30 years, has been going down hill, was given three months for his favorite offence—c. d. James Wallace came to Woburn to work in the Construction Department of the M. V. R. R., but for dis. peace has gone to Cambridge where they want no railroads. Patrick Smith, d'k, second offence, $5 and costs, sent down. John and Michael Connolly tumbled to a first-class racket on Salem street, Sunday night, and it being disagreeable to the neighbors, they each paid $3 and costs. It has seemed like old times to the police to take care of so many lodgers as of late, of which there has been a large influx on account of the R. R.

Notions of the First Settlers.

Mr. W. H. H. Amidon, one of the first settlers in the town of Gilmantown, Wis., and one of the most industrious and hard working men in the county, has been very severely troubled with rheumatic pains during the past few years, so much at times, that he was disabled from performing manual labor. Learning of the wonderful cures effected by the use of St. Jacobs Oil he procured a few bottles and experienced immediate relief. Many others of our acquaintances have used it and expressed themselves highly gratified, with the relief it has afforded them. This king of medicines can be bought everywhere.

NEW BOOKS.

FORTUNATE ISLAND, and other stories. By Max Adeler. Boston: Lee & Shepard.

There are five sketches in this neat volume, all penned in the popular author's best vein, namely; Fortunate Island, City of Burlesque, An Old Fogy, Major Dunwoodey's Leg, Jennie. The reader will find each of them fresh and interesting, and the genuine merits of the book are giving it a fine holiday run. It is handsomely issued, as everything is from the famous publishing house of Lee & Shepard.

A HAPPY BOY. By Bjornstjerne Bjornson. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Pp. 165; $1.00

This is pronounced by competent critics the best story of peasant life which has appeared from the pen of this distinguished author. The trifles which caused the alienation of two brothers who had long lived in the strongest bonds of friendship; the misfortunes and premature death of one and the happy restoration of the other; and so intensely interesting that no one will lay it aside till they have finished it. The happy union and lovely home of hearts whose love was sealed in early youth completes the story of A Happy Boy and gives us a glimpse of the brightest side of earthly existence.

SEVEN VOICES OF SYMPATHY, from the writings of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow; edited by Charlotte Fiske Bates; Houghton, Mifflin & Co.; pp. 258. $1.25.

To the bereaved, the depressed, the neglected, the toiling, the erring, the struggling and the aged this will be a most welcome book. To all who are included in this list of sufferers, and how few are not? it will prove a friend indeed. Selections have been made both from the prose and poetical writings of this honored representative of American literature whose labors for the good of others have gained for him the highest respect and gratitude of millions.

While there is almost no end to improvement in all human industry the change is nowhere more apparent than in the production of illustrated books for the young. In this volume the artist has made the characters and scenes described so real that we almost imagine we see them move. The small Auton family of brothers and sisters, twelve in number, eleven of whom lived to take their part in the great drama of life, were worthy scions from a noble stock in the good old times when even New England Puritanism allowed a system of servitude in a mild form. The peculiar style of living and the whole routine of daily life at that period when the slow stage coach, the weekly mail and tedious travelling on horseback had not been superceded by the lightning train, the telegraph, the telephone and the palace car, were so different that this true picture will seem more like romance than reality to the young. To the young this will prove a source of information not easily obtained elsewhere, and none are too old to award it the praise of being one of best books of the season.

Weakness Cured.

LYNN, MASS., Dec. 18, 1880.

I gave that valuable medicine, Brown's Iron Bitter, to my sister for weakness. After taking two bottles, she was able to walk and run as well as ever. It is certainly a wonderful tonic. WM. JONES.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Harper's Magazine for January is a strong Number, beautifully illustrated. The frontispiece is an illustration drawn by Alfred Fredericks, entitled "The challenge," representing a familliar legend of the Court of King Francis. The leading illustrated paper treats for the first time a characteristic Western subject—the transportation of coal from Pittsburgh down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. The paper is contributed by G. F. Muller, and is admirably illustrated by J. W. Alexander. James Jackson Jarves, who has recently presented presented three hundred pieces of Venetian glass to the Metropolitan Museum of New York, contributes a paper on this collection, illustrated with pictures of thirty-seven specimens. "With the Van-guard in Mexico" is the first of W. H. Bishop's series of Mexican papers, an exceedingly entertaining paper, finely illustrated. This series is to be followed by another from the same author, on Southern California. Joseph Hatton concludes his "Journalistic London" with notices of Lloyd's celebrated penny newspaper, the London Illustrated News, and the Graphic. Among the illustrations is a group of portraits of the leading artists of the London Graphic. The character and scope of the work done by Young Men's Christian Associations form the subject of an interesting paper by Dr. George R. Crooks, illustrated by portraits of leading men in this work. Senator Edmunds contributes a timely and important paper, entitled "Political Aspects of Mormonism." Robert P. Keep, in a paper entitled "The Boundary of Greece," treats of the present extent of King George's dominion, and of the administrative problems growing out of the new accession of territory. "Who were the Pilgrims?" is a question answered in an interesting historical paper by Wm. T. Davis. F. R. Stockton contributes a clever story, "In the Southeast Bastion;" and R. M. Johnston a humorous Georgian sketch, "Jonce Trammell's Compromise," illustrated by Frost. The strongest poem in the Number is by Annie Fields, entitled "Pastor Dunwardt," the interest of which is enhanced by two illustrations drawn by Abbey. Miss Constance Fenimore Woolson's novel, "Anne," appears to be approaching a crisis of unusual interest. Hardy's "A Laodicean" is concluded, and will be followed in the February Number by "Prudence," a story of Æsthetic Lonon, by Mrs. John Lillie. The Editor's Easy Chair, besides its other interesting gossip, gives a pleasing sketch of Materna, who is to be a prominent attraction in the coming Musical Festival. The other departments are full of entertaining and instructive matter. Sold by Horton at the Woburn Book store.

The leading article ig the North American Review for January, contains the judgments of five of the most distinguished American authorities upon "The Moral Responsibility of the Insane." Just at present this subject occupies a very prominent place in the minds of the American people; but quite apart from its momentary interest, as connected with the extraordinary trial now in progress in Washington, the problem of determining the fact of insanity, and fixing the limits of responsibility of the insane, is one that in itself possesses an irrisistible attraction for every generous mind. The wreck and ruin of Intellect appeals at once to our highest sympathies, and to whatever is noblest in human curiosity. The authors selected for the discussion of the subject are Drs. Beard and Seguin, of New York, Dr. Elwell, of Cleveland, Dr. Jewell, of Chicago, and Dr. Folsom, of Boston. The other articles of the Review are as follows: "The New Political Machine," by Wm. Martin Dickson; "Shall Women Practice Medicine?" by Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi; "The Geneva Award ans the Insurance Companies," by G. B. Cole; and "A chapter of Confederate History," by F. G. Ruffin. The announcement is made that the February number of the Review, to be issued January 15th, will contain Part III of the "Christian Religion" series of articles, and that it is to be a very able defence of the Christian faith.

Consumption in its early stages is readily cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," though, if the lungs are wasted no medicine will effect a cure. No known remedy possesses such soothing and healing influence over all scrofulous, tuberoulous, and pulmonary affections as the "Discovery." John Willis, of Elyria, Ohio, writes: "The 'Golden Medical Discovery' does positively cure consumption, as, after trying every other medicine in vain, this succeeded. Mr. Z. T. Phelps, of Cuthbert, Ga., writes: "The 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured my wife of bronchitis and incipient consumption." Sold by druggists.

It will be my aim to conduct these entertainments solely for pleasure and benefit of the public. A nominal price has been made, which will save our town's people the discomfort as well as expense of going elsewhere. The actual cost of the course will exceed eight hundred and fifty dollars, and will necessitate a large sale of tickets. I believe the public will extend their hearty co-operation. With their encouragement and support I cannot fail to make this course of entertainments the most successful of any ever given in Woburn. Respectfully,

WINCHESTER.

Work on the Mystic Valley R. R. is progressing rapidly here. And we are all very glad of it.

On Sunday afternoon next the Unitarian S. S. will give a Christmas concert in the church, to begin at 3 o'clock.

One of our worthy citizens, Mr. James W. Bartlett, has been appointed tally clerk in the U. S. House of Representatives.

Miss Moody, of the Chapin Intermediate School, one of our very best teachers, has resigned, to the great regret of our people.

A granite monument to cost nearly $500 is to be placed in Wildwood Cemetery by the Unitarian Society to the memory of their late pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Bangs celebrated their Tin Wedding last Tuesday evening by a dress party. It was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season.

The School Board have increased the salaries of two of our teachers that Somerville has been trying to get away from us, and they have concluded to remain.

A Branch of the Irish Land League was to have been organized here this week, but dilligent inquiry fails to ellicit any material facts concerning it.

I hope you will overlook my carelessness in not sending you an account of the burning of John S. Richardson's barn last week. I was very busy, and it slipped my memory.

"Dora" and "Box and Cox," by the Goodwill Club, last Tuesday evening, drew a big house. The plays were admirably well acted, and everybody was delighted with the entertainment.

The cost of the Metcalf memorial tablet for the Unitarian church cost about $100. The society deserve a great deal of credit for this tribute to the memory and worth of their late beloved pastor.

If nothing interferes to prevent—and who ever heard of such a thing happening in thirty-days?—the Catholic Order of Foresters will give a ball in Lyceum Hall on the evening of January 27, 1882. The best of music will be furnished.

It is with great pleasure that I am able to inform your readers that Geo. P. Brown, Esq. has been reappointed Postmaster here. He is not only an esteemed citizen and a good man all the way through, but very popular as a public officer. Here is my hand, friend Brown.

I learn from pretty good authority that several sporting men of Winchester attended the great cock-fight at Woburn last Saturday-Sunday night, and that they did not get back home until a pretty late hour Sunday morning. I am sorry to be compelled to write this item.

There is a fear in some quarters that the tanks and settling basins being placed near the railroad for diverting the sewage from Mystic Lower Pond will cause a nuisance to passengers in the trains. City Engineer Wightman of Boston, however, does not anticipate any such annoyance.—Mercury.

The following are the officers elect of Winchester Council, 150, A. O. L. H.; Commander, Charles E. Sweet; Vice Com., Thomas S. Spurr; Orator, J. P. Boutwell; Chaplain, Henry W. Hight; Treasurer, Geo. P. Brown; Sec., Warren F. Foster; Collector, H. A. Emerson; Guide, Jas. H. Winn; Sentinel, A. C. Quimby; Trustees, C. H. Dunham, Warren Johnson, W. F. Foster.

The following officers of Post A. D. Weld, 148, G. A. R., will be duly installed on the evening of December 26:—Commander, William A. Snow; Senior Vice-Com., R. S. Carr; Junior Vice-Com., Daniel Rooney; Quartermaster, Harrison Parker; Surgeon, F. Winsor; Chaplain, S. C. Small; Officer of the Day, M. E. Lyon; Guard, J. E. Brynes; Adjutant, Albert G. Rice.

At a meeting held in the Selectmen's Rooms last Monday evening, the Town Board of Health—Dr. Winsor, Hon. A. B. Coffin, P. W. Swan—were instructed to confer with the State Board of Health, with a view of preventing the location of the sewerage reservoir here by the City of Boston. It is determined that the Boston authorities shall go no father in their scheme to create a nuisance here.

Preparations for the merriest kind of a "Merry Christmas" were never made on a more extended scale here than this year. Everybody is doing something to make somebody else happy, and it is an unusual sight to meet a person, especially a lady, without an armful of packages and bundles, the contents of which are destined to fill stockings, grace Christmas trees, and to make hearts glad. Gift goods are much more beautiful this year than ever before—indeed, they grow richer and rarer with each succeeding year—and heaps of money have been spent here for them. At the Congregational church there is to be a concert on Christmas night, which, from what I know of the preparations, it is safe to say will be a grand one. Other doings are projected; but the places to see the real, genuine "Merry Christmas" will be in the homes of our people, at their cheerful firesides, and among the little ones, who are already half dead (as they declare themselves) for the visit of Santa Clause or old Kris Kringle, and the dawn of fair, jolly and jovial Christmas morn. It will soon come; then for happy hearts and merry times!

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done thousands of women more good than the medicines of many doctors. It is a positive cure for all female complaints. Send to Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham.

"How do you manage," said a lady to her friend, "to appear so happy all the time?" "I always have Parker's Ginger Tonic handy," was the reply, and thus keep myself and family in good health. When I am well I always feel good natured." See other column.

No one whose blood is impure can feel well. There is a weary, languid feeling, and often a sense of discouragement and despondency. Persons having this feeling of lassitude and depression, should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla to purify and vitalize the blood.

Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is a most powerful restorative tonic, also combining the most valuable nervine properties, especially adapted to the wants of debilitated ladies suffering from weak back, inward fever, congestion, inflammation, or ulceration, or from nervousness or neuralgic pains. By druggists.

The most Unhappy Person in the world is the Dyspeptic. Everything looks dark and gloomy; he feels "out of sorts" with himself and everybody else. Life is a burden to him. This can all be changed by taking PERUVIAN SYRUP (a protoxide of Iron). Cases of 27 years' standing have been cured by it.

When I was sick my room looked like a drug store, I had so many bottles in it. The more I dosed the worse off I was. Finally I paid my doctor and told him he needn't come any more. I was trombled with Chronic Rheumatism, and couldn't get out of bed alone. Six bottles of Sulphur Bitters cured me.—Fireman, Boston.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880.

I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine.

J. J. BABCOCK, M. D.

They have never Failed.

I have been sick more or less for the last ten years, which has cost me many dollars in doctors and druggist's bills. The last two years it only cost me three dollars. Why? Because I used Sulphur Bitters instead of employing doctors. They cured me of Jaundice.—J. J. Boyd, Hoboken.

MONTVALE.

Last Thursday week Mr. Michael Cowin was badly burned by falling into a leech at Mawhinney's tannery.

Mrs. Michael Finnegan of this village, aged about 50 years, was drowned in the canal near here last Friday afternoon. About 5 p. m. that day she went out avowedly to call on some neighbors, but not returning as expected, a search was instituted and her body was found on Sunday morning in the canal. As it was so plainly a case of accidental drowning the Medical Examiner did not deem an inquest necessary. She left a husband and a large number of children to mourn her loss.

PROBABLY NEVER

In the history of proprietary medicines has any article met success at home equal to that which has been poured upon HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. Why, such has been the success of this article, that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. Every week brings new evidence of the wonderful curative properties of this medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Combines the BEST Remedies of the vegetable kingdom, and in such proportion as to derive their greatest medicinal effects with the least disturbance to the whole system. In fact this preparation is so well balanced in its action upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood, that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism, that can hardly be credited by those who have not seen the remarkable results that have followed its use. If the Sarsaparilla does not prove sufficiently laxative, take a few doses of HOOD'S VEGETABLE PILLS. It is well in all cases of biliousness to take these pills in connection with the Sarsaparilla for the first ten days. That dull, sleepy, sick feeling can be wholly overcome by the use of these remedies. Will you give them a trial and be yourself again?

An ex-alderman of this city says of Hood's Sarsaparilla, "It is the strongest Sarsaparilla I ever saw."

Price one dollar, or six for five dollars. Hood's Sarsaparilla, prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

☞ Use HOOD'S TOOTH-POWDER.

DR. G. LOWELL AUSTIN'S PHOSPHATINE

A WONDERFUL REMEDY, INTENDED INTENDED FOR YOU IF SICK OR BRAIN WEARY.

ALSO A MOST DELIGHTFUL BEVERAGE.

Ask E. B. Fairchild, Esq., at Lee & Shepards, Boston, Col. Taylor of "The Boston Globe," Thomas Keefe, Esq., with "Boston Pilot," Robert Murray, Esq., 46 School St., Boston, C. M. Hatch, Esq., Hotel Clifford, Boston, and a host of other names of men, women and children that can be furnished.

It imparts a rallying and sustaining help that is truly marvellous; the quickest in effect; the most efficacious system regulator, extant; and witeal a delicious beverage that can be enjoyed with each meal or otherwise.

It is based on scientific facts, and owes its origin to the discoverer's determinatiou to save the life of his nearest of kin, when everything else had failed.

PHOSPHATINE is not a medicine in its proper sense, BUT NUTRIMENT possessing the very properties, phosphates, (ete., scientifically prepared) of which more than eighty per cent. of the human system, when in health, is composed. Just what a diseased and wasting body lacks and yearns for.

Written for the Journal.

Health Leaves.

No. 6.

The unhealthfulness which springs from the use and abuse of the milder stimulants, teas, coffee and tobacco, considerable as it is, is nothing compared with the injurious effects of alcohol on the system. By the term alcobol is meant all fermented or distilled liquors of whatever name or nature, for it is the alcohol in them that is the mischievous agent, and that makes them sought after as a beverage. It is not a wonder, perhaps, that before experience or scientific investigation, had proved the ultimate effect of alcohol on the system, it should have been in such general use, for its apparent effects are invigorating, and transiently it gives to many countenances a glow of health. But in these days when its physiological action is and may be so well known, it is only ignorance or willfullness that leads to its persistant use. A part of the secret of this use, no doubt, lies in the fact of the difficulty of making the user believe it is really injurious. He feels so confident that he is being benefited by it, and asserts so confidently that "he knows" whether he is being made better or worse, taking his own feelings as the measure of its effects, that he will not listen to the facts in the case. Leaving it transiently, he feels worse; resuming it he feels better, and that is proof sufficient to him—that in his case at leat, it is a real benefit.

Now what are the facts that scientific research has found out, that the spirit drinking is really doing to that man? Chemically in its affinity for water, which it will extract from the tissues, it dries them and as the most moist tissue of the body is the brain, it affects that most, and absolutely changes its texture, so that after a time of continued use, he is really not the same man in thought and feeling, so far as the peculiar formation of brain made him a characteristic individual. This effect is supplemented by an expansion of capillaries, which alcohol produces by its effect on vaso-motor portion of the nervous system, which expansion, produces a certain amount of atrophy of the brain substance from pressure. The change is slow and gradual, yet as certain as any chemical or physiological law, and a fact of dialy observation. This need not be amplified; any one can confirm it in their own observation of the mental change that has come over the habitual user, and its explanation lies in this well-known chemical and physiological effect that alcohol has upon the tissues. This, briefly, so far as the brain is concerned.

Further, alcohol is a foreign substance in the blood; that is, it is not a natural ingredient of the blood. A portion of all spirit imbibed, fails to undergo the chemical change that characterises the digestion of the various articles of diet, and so circulates in the blood as alcohol. As a result, the excretory organs, the liver and kidneys, attack it to eliminate it. These attempts on the part of these organs cause an increased flow of blood to the organ; the increased flow of blood results in increased nutrition; that is, new tissue is formed; the new formed tissue at length, contracts, just as does the new tissue formed over a burn or an ulcer; this contraction of the organ at length interferes every way with a proper discharge of its functions, so the harmonious working of the whole system is interfered with, and the organs become increasingly degenerated. These are physiological facts, are proven every day in autopsies of bodies of those who have been free users of spirits, until this condition of organ has become known professionally as the "gin drinker's liver." The kidney, too, undergo like processes of degeneration and therefore fail of performing their duties, and are found as "enlarged kidney, fatty kidney, or contracted kidney," according to the stage of the process in which the system give out.

So this is really what is silently going on in the system of the person who asserts so confidently that they know the beverage does them good, and it is what every person so using it subjects themselves to. The user's confidence in its healthfulness is increased by seeing himself increasing in weight, and gaining in rotundity of form. This effect is brought about by that expansion of the capillaries before alluded to, which favors increased nutrition, and by deposites of fat which has failed of being consumed, through lack of oxygen, owing to the effect of alcohol upon the red corpuscles of the blood, which are the oxygen carriers, and which function is interfered with by their being massed in the blood like rolls of coin. But this apparent increased healthfulness is deceptive, for their vitality is really lowered, and every practioner discounts the chances of a spirit drinker, in any severe strain upon his system.

The user's confidence is still further increased by the fact that doctors prescribe it in their practice. It is indeed a valuable and powerful instrument in the hands of the physician, but it is an instrument that cuts both ways. It is a safe rule for the inexperienced not to handle edged tools There is no remedy so popular as some form of spirit, but often the devil invited in is ten times worse than the devil cast out. The user is still further misled by the belief that he is safe from acquiring a habit of spirit drinking until he shall have acquired a love for the taste of it. It is a fatal mistake. It is not the love of the taste of it at all that wrecks the man; it is the presence of it in the system that creates the demand for more. This demand is far more premptory than any delights of a gastatory sense, and is next to irresistable. It is the same with opium, arsenic, and neither the Chinese with the one, nor the French with the other, are ever led to use it from a love of the taste of it. The only safe way then is never to use it on ones own responsibility. If the doctor prescribes it, he will order it stopped when the occasion for it has passed, as he would any other poison. When we have a watch that wants repairing, we never go at it ourselves, but take it to such only as understands its mechanism. Here is the human system that exceeds in fineness of mechanism the most delicate watch ever invented. The attempts to tinker it with spirit, by those who know nothing of its workings, are like going at a watch with hammer and screw-driver. It is no wonder it gets upset and out of order, and stops at mid-day. So, many of us are wiser in our own conceit than ten men who can render a reason.

CHRISTMAS CAROL.

LONGFELLOW.

I hear the bells on Christmas day
Their old familiar carols play,
And mild and sweet
The words repeat,
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

And think how, as the day has come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Have rolled along
The unbroken song,
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Till ringing, singing on its ways,
The world revolves from night to-day,
A voice, a chime,
A chant sublime,
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Written for the Journal.

A STORY OF CHRISTMAS.

It was strange that it should blossom on that very Christmas Eve. There it had stood, summer and winter, for twenty years, in the sunniest corner of Miss Drusilla's parlor, and, till then, had never borne bud or blossom. Many a time friendly callers had said to its owner, "Why do you keep that worthless plant? It will never amount to anything." And she had always answered, with a little sigh, "perhaps it will blossom by and by. Any way, I would like to keep it as long as I can."

And so it happened that, after these long years, on Christmas Eve, Miss Drusilla Page sat alone in the old parlor, with the firelight shining on the late buds of her cherished plant, and waited patiently for the mystic midnight unfolding, while her thoughts wandered back into the past. She remembered when the plant was given to her,—the afternoon when she went to take tea with Miss Penelope Reynolds, her father's old friend. Miss Penelope lived in a large yellow house, at the end of a long row of similar stately dwellings. There were lilacs by the gate and two giant honeysuckles climbed over the porch. They rattled uneasily in the keen November wind, when Drusilla lifted the great knocker, that afternoon. Miss Penelope opened the door. Drusilla remembered exactly how she looked. She was very tall and straight, and her gown of silver gray silk hung in smooth stiff folds to her feet. She wore a handsome black silk apron, and an embroidered pocket hung at her side. Her hair, which was not white, but black and shining like her round, twinkling eyes, was knotted high on her head, and her wide, cambric collar was fastened with a very large breast-pin, containing her father's hair, under a crystal. And if Miss Drusilla could yet clearly see this picture, she might also recall the fair image of the young Drusilla, as it was reflected by the oval mirror, in Miss Penelope's best front chamber, whither she was presently shown to remove her wraps. The glass hung so high above a tall chest of drawers, that she was obliged to stand on the tips of her toes to catch a glimpse of herself, and the exertion made her pink cheeks redden like roses. Her brown eyes shone with tender, merry light, and little smiles dimpled around her lips, just where a tiny patch of black enhanced the whiteness of her dainty chin. She wore a gown of pale blue cashmere, with a kerchief of fine old lace at the throat. Her soft, dark hair was puffed very high on her head, and waved in bewitching little scallops and curls, upon forehead. At her belt she had fastened a cluster of late white chrysanthemums—a charm it may be, for Miss Penelope's nephew Will, to whom she vainly supposed the honor of her visit was due. Did not all Hightown known that this handsome young sailor was visiting his aunt? And how could he possibly be better mated than with Judge Page's only daughter? So the gossips said, and perhaps Miss Drusilla might have thought so herself. But when she went down to the parlor, she found no handsome gallant awaiting her, only Miss Penelope, sitting very stiffly before the bright open fire and knitting like one possessed.

It was rather a dull afternoon to Drusilla, Miss Penelope did not approve of gossip, and when she had inquired for Drusilla's father, and related some interesting adventures, regarding the preserving of her late peaches, and the fattening of her Thanksgiving poultry, the conversation gradually died away. Despite the straight back of the old fashioned chair, in which she sat, Drusilla soon grew sleepy. The low room, with its bright Turkey carpet, claw-legged mahogany tables, and high-backed chairs seemed to spin in circles, which ended in oblivion; the tall candlesticks on the mantel nodded to the chrysanthemum pots on the wide window-sills, the andirons knocked against the fender, and Miss Penelope's ancestors—very stiff and straight in water-colors—seemed to dance in their frames, and shake their privileged head till the powder flew—then Drusilla would wake with a start, grasp the sampler just slipping from her lap, set a few stitches, and then whirl away again with the ancestors and the candlesticks and the fender.

But the afternoon, like all things bright or dull, came to an end, at last. Just as the old clock in the hall was stricking five, Miss Penelope arose, rolled up her knitting, and said to Drusilla:

"My dear, you must see a wonderful new plant which my nephew has brought me, it is called a cereus, and it only blossoms in the night."

"It must be a strange plant, indeed," said Drusilla, as they went out into the dining-room together.

The plant stood on the carved mahogany sideboard, with the crystal decanters—empty now, for Miss Penelope had in some way imbibed the new-fashioned ideas of temperance—the tall wine-glasses, and the big blue and white punch-bowl, filled with rose-leaves. As Miss Penelope displayed her treasure, Drusilla peeped slyly around the room, as if she expected to find Master Will sitting on the shelves of the buffet, among the china, or hiding under the tea-table. And while she was looking, the front door opened noisily, a quick step was head in the hall and Mr. Will Reynolds entered. Miss Penelope presented him very formally to Drusilla, and then they sat down together at the round table, already spread for supper, with the linen that Miss Penelope's grandmother had woven, and the service of silver and china her father bought in London.

"Aunt Penelope is a worshipper of old china," said Will, laughing, "I tried to coax her to exchange these plates for the handsomest dishes I could find in Canton, but I could not."

"I would like to please you, my dear, but I could not part with my mother's china," answered Miss Penelope, who could never take a joke.

While they were speaking, Drusilla observed Will's face, for the first time. It was handsome enough to suit even that fastidious little lady. His dark, merry eyes, finely cut features, and smiling red lips, made a pleasant picture never to be forgotten. Do we carefully choose the face which is to haunt us till the dreams of death? Nay, it may be to-day, it may have been yesterday, but it comes unbidden, unaware, and its hold upon us is unyielding. Middle-aged Drusilla, in her lonely parlor, needed no minature of Will Reynolds to "keep his memory green," on Christmas Eve. It was a merry supper, despite Miss Penelope's stiffness. Will amused both ladies with lively anecdotes and descriptions of his life abroad, and made the ancient room ring with laughter. After tea, when Miss Penelope was washing her tea-cups, which were never trusted to servant's hands, Drusilla looked at the plant again, and greatly to Will's delight, discovered several buds. "These will open by Christmas," he said. "Aunt Penelope you must invite Miss Page to come here, and we will all sit up together to see the blossoming."

"Perhaps so," answered Miss Penelope, gravely. There were reasons that made this midnight watching with a charming young girl unprofitable to Will, and she understood them well. By and by Will walked home with Drusilla, in the cold moonlight. When they parted, she held out her hand to him and said softy: "You know I have no mother, Mr. Reynolds, but father and I would be glad to see you here at any time."

Will accepted the invitation gladly. He came the next morning, and the next, and the day after, and finally spent the greater part of his time with Drusilla. Judge Page liked the young man from the first, and being absorbed in his own affairs, saw no harm in the intimacy. Miss Penelope hardly inquired where her nephew spent his time, and certainly never suspected it was with pretty Drusilla.

So they sung and talked together, rode and walked in sweet companionship. For such dear days there is no returning, and they are forever happy who may once enjoy them. But the end came and swiftly. On Christmas Eve, Drusilla went to Miss Penelope's to watch the blossoming of her rare plant. It hardly seemed a time for joy or blooming. Will was very grave, and Miss Penelope, as Drusilla thought, too stiffly polite. All three were honestly glad, when, after midnight, Drusilla was free to go home and Will to accompany her. Before they left the house together, he gave her a small green slip of the plant. "For Christmas," he said, smiling, "you must take good care of it, and when it blossoms think of me."

They spoke but few words, during their walk. Will seemed anxious and disturbed, and Drusilla wondered silently. When they reached the gate under the great elms, where they had so often parted, she drew her hand quickly from his arm, and held it out to him, pleadingly, "Will," she said, softly, almost unconsciously using his Christian name, "Will, are you angry with me?"

"No," he said, gently, "it is you who should be angry. Good night, dear Drusilla, and—and—forgive me."

His voice faltered at the last words, he dropped her hand and turned away.

Hurt and wounded by his strange manner, Drusilla closed the gate quickly, and hastened up the path. She had not gone far, however, before she heard him call to her, "Drusilla! Drusilla!" That voice would have recalled from the ends of the earth. She turned immediately and went back to him. He reached across the gate and took both her small, cold hands in his own.

"My darling, my darling," he said, "I love you more than my own life, more than my honor, I cannot and will not live without you."

Too happy to speak, Drusilla bowed her head till it rested on his breast. In an instant, warm arms were folded closely around her, and tender lips rained kisses upon her brow and cheeks. Then, like one who dares not trust himself farther, he loosened his hold, and wrapping her shawl more warmly around her throat, he said, "It is too cold for you to stay here, sweetheart. We shall see each other to-morrow. Good night and a "Merry Christmas!" So lingeringly they parted, and if they dreamed of each other afterward, only the bright stars could know.

There was to be a festival at the church, the next evening. In the morning the young people met there to make the suitable decorations. Among all the laughing, merry crowd, Drusilla only was silent and depressed. Despite the joy of her love, she had a strange foreboding of impending misfortune. But she worked busily, twining wreathes and crosses with nimble fingers, and hardly raising her eyes from the greenery in her lap. She had not expected to see Will, so early in the day, and she almost cried out, when she heard his voice close beside her.

"Drusilla," he said, "come here, I want to see you a moment." He beckoned her away into a corner, so shaded with branches of fir and pine, as to be quite sheltered from all observers. She was making a wreath of evergreen and immortelles, and she still held it, as she went to him—how tightly her trembling hands grasped it, when she saw the sorrowful, desperate look on his face.

"Will," she said, "what is the matter?"

"I cannot tell you, now," he answered, hoarsely, "I have not time. I must start for home in an hour. I have just received a letter from my father. He has a ship, ready to sail for Canton, in two or three days, and he wants me to go."

Drusilla turned very white, and held out her hands, as if for help. In the shade of the Christmas green, he drew her close to his side.

"Dear Drusilla," he said, "did you think I would leave you? I could not. I shall not. Only wait a few days, and let this be our secret. I shall not go to Canton, but I must see my father. I will write and explain everything. Darling trust me for a little while,—please God, before another Christmas, you shall be my wife!" And with one solemn, sacred kiss of promise, they parted.

As soon as he was gone, Drusilla hastily left the church and fled rather than walked to her home. Once there, she hurried to her chamber, and was just locking the door, that she might subdue her agitation, when she heard Miss Penelope's voice in the hall below, speaking to the house-keeper, "When Miss Drusilla come," she said, in a high, sharp voice, "I wish to see her."

Fearing she knew not what, she went down to the parlor, immediately. Miss Penelope glanced coldly at her flushed cheeks and trembling lips. "So my nephew has been making love to you, has he?" she said, "I heard so, yesterday, and he don't deny it. I must say that he's a very honorable young man. If he won't explain matters to you, I will, and you'll have to listen."

Just then a step was heard in the hall, Drusilla started, and grasping Miss Penelope's arm, said, softly, "That's father coming to dinner. If there is anything wrong, he must not know. Please go now, Miss Penelope. I will hear it all, but I cannot now. Please pity me and help me, I did not know of any wrong."

Trembling and sobbing, she clung to Miss Penelope's arm, pleading her not to let her father know, and she herself would do or listen to anything, till that good lady relented.

"Well," she said, reluctantly, "I will go now. I don't know as you meant any harm, but you must come to my house, this afternoon, and hear all I want to say to you. Promise me that, or I'll tell your father, now."

So Drusilla promised, and Miss Penelope departed without being seen by Judge Page. As soon as dinner was over, the unhappy girl stole away to Miss Penelope's house. The servant ushered her into the old parlor, and there for an hour afterwards, she sat with blanched cheeks, listening to the story of Will's life. It may be briefly told: At seventeen years of age, he had been urged by his parents into an engagement with his father's ward, a wealthy lady, whose ample fortune might redeem the failing speculations of his father. He had been very patient in his bonds until his meeting with Drusilla, and some chance remarks of his had first led his aunt to suspect the state of affairs. His betrothed wife loved him devotedly, and was, moreover, an invalid, so that the breaking of his engagement might prove fatal to her. With many and strong arguments, did Miss Penelope urge Drusilla to give him up, but the girl at first, was firm.

"We love each other," she said, bravely, again and again, "it is right that he should marry me."

Nevertheless, after a time her strength, already too severely taxed, began to fail. She felt faint and sick. The room seemed to spin in circles, and Miss Penelope's en-

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1881.

THE JOURNAL is for sale at the stores of S. Horton, 195 Main Street, R. Robie, 156 Main Street, E. F. Cutter's, Cummingsville, J. P. Tyler's, North Woburn, Cooper's News Stand at the Centre Depot, and at G. P. Brown's, Winchester.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ The WOBURN JOURNAL has reached the beginning of its thirty-second year, and enters on a new volume this week. It was thirty-one years old on Christmas Day last past, which for a country newspaper is quite a respectable age, and entitles it to respectful consideration from its contemporaries and the people. Without taking any of the credit of it to ourselves, it is meet to say that the JOURNAL has always maintained a good reputation for correct deportment; a high standard of morals; borne a good name through life; shed abroad a puryfying influence; and been an honored institution in this community. It has been respected for its intelligence, and esteemed for its sterling qualities of head and heart. Hanging quite near our elbow as we write this is a framed list of the original subscribers to the JOURNAL—of names put down by the owners themselves thirty years ago—and it is with feelings of pride that we are able to say that quite a number of them are still subscribers, and have been continuously from the beginning to the present time. This speaks volumes in praise of the JOURNAL. It will be our aim to preserve its old standard of moral excellence in the future as it has been in the past; to conduct it with the same intelligence; to make it an instrumentality for good in this community; in short, to have it respected and looked up to as something very good to have among us. Perhaps it may not be amiss to remark that the JOURNAL, in a worldly sense, is reasonably prosperous.

☞ The trial of Guiteau still drags along, and the prospect for its early termination is not good. The accused continues to play his pranks and act more like a bedlamite than ever; but the evidence so far shows pretty conclusively that he is sane, and in this the evidence and public opinion agree. Possibly the case will close next week, and when it does there can be no doubt it will be with a verdict of guilty against the murderer of President Garfield.

☞ Guiteau was put into the criminal dock on Wednesday like other law-breakers, his conduct having become so outrageous that the court could stand it no longer. His case grows to look worse as it progresses, and it seems as though his chances for hemp were good.

☞ With their permission, we tender to the large army of patrons which the JOURNAL is very proud of, the compliments of the season, having reference to the "Happy New Year," more particularly. And we wish them "many happy returns of the same."

☞ The Arlington Advocate is in a thrifty condition. It has recently provided itself with a new power-press, a water motor to drive its machinery with, and proposes an early enlargement of its proportions. Success to it, say we.

☞ The parties who bargained for the M. V. R. R., have given it up and gone out of the arrangement. It has been a strange and mysterious affair all the way through.

— The Christmas Sabbath School concerts on Sabbath afternoon and evening were about as pleasant a feature of the festival as any. Good music and interesting exercises were the rule at all of them.

— Within the memory of the oldest inhabitant there has been no such "green," moist and warm Christmas season as the present. The weather has been very remarkable.

— Next Monday is swearing-off day, a good deal of which will be done in Woburn, it is suspicioned. At any rate, there is a plenty of it that might be attended to with profit.

— An employe in John Cummings & Co.'s tannery, by the name of James Boevird, had the flesh pretty effectually carved from one of his arms by a fleshing-knife falling on it, last Saturday.

— The annual Christmas Festival of the Young People of the Unitarian Society was given in Lyceum Hall last Friday evening, and was well attended. Notwithstanding the interruptions by the fires that night, the affair was pleasant and successful.

— Mr. Albert Thompson, artist, is kept quite busy at his studio, corner of Washington and Winter streets, Boston, with classes in drawing. He had applications for classes before his rooms were fairly in running order.

— Attention is directed to the notice of the Water Board in this paper. Be it understood, too, that it means business, and the first thing some people know they will wake up some cold winter morning and find themselves waterless.

— The Wilkinsons gave a first-class dramatic entertainment in Lyceum Hall on Wednesday evening, and deserved a much better house than they had. This company is sound corn, and always give an audience their money's worth of the best there is in the market.

— Joseph J. Kelley, Esq., of Cambridge, addressed the Woburn Branch of the Irish National Land League in Emerald Hall last Wednesday evening. The meeting was a lively one, under the push and spirit of the committee, Lawrence Reade, E. F. Cassidy, J. C. Meehan.

— Samuel E. Furlong met with a painful accident at the tannery and currying shops of E. Cummings & Co. where he is employed as machinist, last Monday. He had his left hand badly crushed by the fall of a cylinder which weighed 200 pounds, and a bolt on which he was at work was driven through the hand.

— Some of the Boston dailies of Monday morning contained notices of and copious extracts from the very excellent sermons preached by Rev. Daniel March, D. D., pastor of the Congregational church, and by Rev. George H. Young, pastor of the Unitarian church, on Sunday morning in their respective houses of worship in this village.

— The first anniversary of the H. S. C., held at the residence of Mr. E. R. Emery, Fowle street, on Monday evening last, was an affair highly enjoyed. An entertainment occupied the early part of the evening, and a bountiful spread, the latter, the tables being richly decorated with flowers.

— Mr. Mark Allen played Col. Bruce in Proctor's "Nick of the Woods" to an overflowing house at the Lawrence Opera House last Monday evening. He was such a complete and utter failure that the manager, Mr. Lanagrin, engaged him before he left the city to take a prominent part in Othello to be presented at the same place on next Monday evening.

— Next week has been set apart as a Week of Prayer by the evangelical churches in the world, and will be so observed. In this place prayer meetings will be held every evening in the week by the churches. Union prayer meetings will be held at the Baptist church on Monday evening; Methodist on Tuesday evening, and Congregational on Thursday evening.

— Mr. Hudson is laying out the grounds and making plans for a dwelling-house which he is to build on Canal street for Thomas H. Hill, Esq. The lot will be one hundred feet square, on a pleasant site on that popular street, on which will be erected a fine house for the future residence of our Clerk of the Board.

— The initial entertainment in the Star Course, under the management of Mr. T. Marvin Parker, will be given in Lyceum Hall on Wednesday evening next, January 4, when the famous Listemann Concert Company will appear, and give one of their rich musical treats. This is head and shoulders above any of the Boston concert companies in merit an reputation, and our folks needn't be at all afraid but that they will get the full value of their money at this entertainment. It is a rare chance to hear a good thing. Furthermore, those who have not secured season tickets to this admirable course should do so at once.

— The old friends and relatives of Mr. Warren Teel, formerly of Woburn, but now of Davenport, Iowa, will be interested to learn that he will celebrate his fifty-third birthday to-morrow evening, in proper form. He was born on the last hour of the day, the last day of the week, the last day of the month, and the last day of the year 1828, according to the old family Bible, and we don't blame him for celebrating.

— Mr. Postmaster Wyman, whose veracity anybody in Woburn will vouch for, informs the author of this editorial, that, during what is commonly understood as the Christmas season, more than three times the quantity of Christmas gift goods passed through his office in 1881 than on any other of the twenty years that he has been its highly respected and very popular incumbent. "Straws show," etc.

— It is furthermore stated that the price of tickets to the musical entertainment to be given by the ladies of Woburn in behalf of the Soldiers' Home will be 35 cents, or 3 for $1.00 to seats on the floor, all of which have been reserved; and gallery 25 cents, limited to seating capacity. Several rows of the back seats on the floor of the hall will be raised, making them equal in value to the front or middle ones.

— Mr. Edmund Gerson, the London theatrical agent, who sails for England tomorrow, will take with him for production in Great Britain and the British Colonies Mr. Mark Allen's plays, "The Courier of the Czar" and "Mystery of Ardennes," from which it looks as though our esteemed fellow-craftsman was about to have a "windfall" of golden sovereigns, etc.

— Our business men are not now indulging so largely as formerly in worthless handbills and advertising sheets as a medium through which to make known their business. They begin to see the folly of that mode of advertising, and to employ more than ever the only legitimate channel, the columns of the local newspaper. An inch space in their town papers is worth more than a cart-load of dodgers, gutter-snipes, flyers, and handbills, for advertising.

— Mr. Charles R. Rosenquist has a couple of cards in this paper treating of pictures, which cannot fail to interest the people of Woburn and neighborhood. A good sample of the work in crayon which he furnishes at very reasonable prices may be seen in the window of Smith, the jeweler, the same being a portrait of Mr. Thomas Salmon, and it is pronounced by competent judges a very fine one. Mr. Rosenquist is reliable, hence does a good business.

— It has been very quiet and orderly at Police Headquarters this week—remarkably so considering the season: Alfred Woodland, truant, placed on probation. George Brown, a Swede, assault and battery on John McCarthy, $10 and costs. Stephen Hart of Stoneham, using firearms on the street, Monday night, $5 and costs. William Manning, drunk, second offence, $3 and costs. William Manning, larceny, discharged. Joseph Griffin, profane language, $5 and costs.

— Mr. Robert Paul is a skilled painter. His shop on John's Court off Lawrence street is a fair sample of his art. The walls are painted in French grey with imitation cornice and chair-rail; the low walls are laid out as a dado in maple panels and blackwalnut styles: the ceilings frescoed with neat cornice and centre-piece. The harmony and contrast give the room a pleasing effect, and make it one of the handsomest in the village, which ought to be inspected by parties thinking of having ornamental painting done.

— Monday, as Christmas Day postponed, was celebrated here in a lame and halting manner. Generally speaking. Some business houses were open: some were shut. Some trades were prosecuted: some were not. Some folks ate Christmas dinners: some did not (they took theirs Sunday). Some (a good many) indulged in a holiday drunk: some did not. Some received Christmas gifts; but the major part of the people devoted Sunday to looking over and admiring theirs. On the whole, it was a sorry and very unsatisfactory attempt at a religious festival.

— At a regular meeting held on Tuesday evening last, Baldwin Council, No. 125, Royal Arcanum elected the following officers: Past Regent, Frank A. Partridge; Regent, T. H. Hill, Vice Regent, A. J. Parker; Orator, Nath'l Jenkins; Chaplain, Parker E. Bancroft; Guide, Jas. A. Brown; Secretary, F. A. Flint; Treasurer, Alva S. Wood; Collector, Thosas B. Evans; Warden, George A. Simonds; Sentry, Walter Widgery; Finance Committee, E. O. Soules, P. L. Bancroft and C. H. Delano; Auditors, F. A. Flint, S. Frank Trull and A. J. Parker: Trustees, Alva S. Wood, Gilman F. Jones and Charles A. Jones.

— The Echo has outstripped its slower competitors this time in giving a detailed exhibit of the tannery interests of Woburn. It published its report last Saturday, which, on examination we find, shows well for the business. From it we learn that there are in town between thirty and forty tanneries, currying and stiffening shops, which employ nearly 2,000 hands. A large proportion are running up to full capacity, and the amount of leather weekly turned out would surprise one unacquainted with the business here. The Echo's figures also show that about forty men are employed in the machine shops, and thirty-three in the Woburn Laundry, carried on by the Richardson Brothers. This establishment turns out 18,000 pieces each week.

— A Grand Entertainment is in preparation by the Committee of ladies appointed to raise funds in aid of the Soldiers' Home, which is to take place on the evening of Friday, Jan. 6, in Lyceum Hall. The programme will embrace readings and vocal and instrumental music by lady residents, assisted by Miss Georgie Pray, the celebrated violinist, and Miss Fannie Rice, the talonted Cornetist of Boston, to be followed by the mirthful comic opera, "Penelope, or the Milkmans Bride," the characters to be sustained by Mrs. Clough-Phinney, Miss Etta Allen, and Messrs, S. F. Trull, C. C. Shaw and H. M. Aldrick. Musical Director—F. H. Lewis. Tickets may be found at J. W. Hammond's and C. H. Buss's. Sale of reserved seats will begin on Monday next at 9 A. M.

— Last week we saw the pictures of two of Mr. Fred Dow's spaniels at the rooms of Mr. H. E. Strout, which were worth looking at. They were crayons raised from photographs, bearing the imprint of Mr. Strout, artist, and procured by Mrs. Dow as a Christmas present for her husband. We have seen nothing more life-like, or better done, than this picture of Mr. Dow's two dogs.

— Per notice a town meeting was held on Wednesday evening to act on divers and sundry questions of interest to our citizens. Thomas H. Hill, Esq., was chosen Moderator of the meeting. There was a good deal of discussion of one kind and another, and on the whole the meeting was quite interesting. There were nine articles in the Warrant, all of which were considered and disposed permanently or otherwise. On article two it was voted that the committee having the matter of printing Vol. 1 of the Town Records in hand, be allowed to copy said records and print without expense to the town. Four thousand dollars were appropriated for macadamizing Main street; $1500 for defending certain suits against the town, and $75 for land taken for reservoir purposes. There was considerable opposition to some of the appropriations, but it did not prevail.

— The other papers having rushed in with unbecoming haste to lay the following item of news before the public, the JOURNAL concluded to reserve it until this week, so that if the parties interested were fond of such things they might have this in the shape of "link-ed sweetness long drawn out," and also to vindicate our claim to modesty:—Leonard Thompson, Esq., the gentleman who holds Woburn's money-bags, venerates Forefathers' Day, and never fails to celebrate it in due and regular form. And it is his invariable custom, too, to invite in friends to help him celebrate. He does it in the best of style, and those so fortunate as to secure invites enjoy themselves splendidly. On Wednesday, the 261st anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims, he gave a dinner party at his residence, at which the School Board, with the Superintendent, and several friends sat down, and a season of great pleasure was enjoyed. The party, headed by Mr. Thompson, with gentle force, divested the JOURNAL reporter of every scrap of reporting material, hence the absence of the dinner speeches of the company in this paper. It was an exceedingly pleasant time, as all aver who were present.

— Last Friday night was quite a time for fires in this village. About midnight the stable of Dr. Bartlett was discovered to be on fire and an alarm was sounded. The fire department were promptly on hand and succeeded in saving the building, though in a rather poor condition, notwithstanding a strong wind was blowing. The barn contained 12 tons of hay which was ruined for feed; two horses, which were saved, and two valuable Jersey cows, which were lost. The amount of damage was adjusted on Wednesday, but the exact figures have not been given. At half-past three another alarm was sounded, from box 53—Highland Station—and it was soon found that the currying shop of L. F. White & Co. was on fire. Firemen were soon on the ground, and did their best to save the buildings, but without success. A currying shop is seldom saved when once a fire gets fairly hold of it. The tannery was saved. The damages were placed at from $100,000 to $150,000, the insurance being $80,000, in 39 companies, of which Mr. George H. Conn had $35,000. The damages were adjusted on Tuesday. So it was a pretty tough night for our firemen.

MR. EDITOR:—Several persons have remarked to me how unusual a thing it is for Christmas day to fall on Sunday; and I should judge it was the general impression that such an event was indeed a rare occurrence.. If my mathematics are not at fault, it will be found that, Christmas will have fallen on Sunday 15 times; on Monday 14; on Tuesday 15; on Wednesday 14, on Thursday but 13; on Friday 15; and on Saturday 14. It would seem, therefore, that Santa Claus, nothwithstanding the fact, that he is sometimes familiarly addressed as Old Nick, rather favors Sunday than otherwise. The following table gives the years in which Chistmas comes on Snnday, Monday etc.:

— Alexander Rossetta, an Italian, who killed a Lynn man in Boston about three months ago, and who has kept out of the way since, was captured on Wednesday night at an out of the way place in Billerica, by Chief Conn, Officers Welsh, Mulkeen and Simonds, and Haley of Boston. Our officers have for some time had suspicion that Rossetta was in this vicinity, but it was only last Friday that the immediate locality could be determined, and on Wednesday additional evidence was secured making the officers certain. It was arranged to leave Woburn promptly at 6 P. M. Wednesday, and proceeding directly up the turnpike road, turned off on a less travelled road, and leaving their teams, proceeded afoot to the house which was on the farm of a Mr. Murry. Welsh and Mulkeen took to the fields to get in the rear of the house, their presence was discovered by the dog, whose barking brought out Mr. Murry and his son, who thought somebody was getting into his barn. The officers finding themselves discovered, said they "had lost their way and wanted to find the road," and called on Murry to call his dog off. The younger Murry recognized Welsh and told his father, who immediately ran towards the house to give the word to Rossetta, but before he reached the door Conn with Simonds had effected an entrance and secured their man, who finding himself at their mercy, quietly gave up. The family were in complete consternation, and could hardly utter a word, so quiely, yet speedily had the arrest been made. The prisoner was taken to Boston on the 8.30 P. M. train and locked up in station 1, and others implicated were arrested in Boston and elsewhere during the night. The whole time consumed was only two hours from leaving Woburn, and so quietly that few others that the officers knew what was going on.

— Rum was the cause of Dave Roach getting his head laid open at Tim Sheehan's bar-room last Monday, and making the last half of Christmas anything but a pleasant holiday for him. With his hide chockful of the poisonous stuff he picked a quarrel with Morris Dwyer, the bar-tender, when a heavy drinking-glass was snatched up by the latter, and Roach received some ugly cuts on his left temple. It was at first thought that he had got his quietus, but Dr. Bartlett sewed him up, plastered him over, and sent him home in a hack. Public sympathy was with Dwyer because he was set upon by Roach, who when drunk is a blustering, bragging, quarrelsome buly. But what if he was? He would not have been had Roach been sober. Who sold him the rum to get drunk on? Perhaps Dwyer himself: if not, some other law-breaker did. Then where does the responsibility rest? Which one of the parties was entitled to the sympathy of the public? In this particular case the rum that fired the brain and made the poor fellow crazy may have been purchased at some other of the numerous drinking dens in Woburn in which young men are destroyed body and soul; but the Sheehan place is engaged in the same work of wreck and ruin, and if, once in a while, one of the victims of a kindred establishment breaks in and disturbs the even tenor of their way in making drunkards, a due regard for the fitness of things ought to induce them to put up with, and make the best of it, instead of pounding the life nearly out of the poor, crazy wretch with a bottle that some other weak slave to his appetite had just emptied of its fatally poisonous drink. People in the rum-selling business ought to be contented with killing their patrons with the contents of their bottles, and not resort to the bottles themselves to cut them down with.

George Hunt Again.

MR. EDITOR:—I am sure the humane citizens of Woburn will thank you for giving space in your crowded holiday issue of last week for the appeal in little Geo. Emery Hunt's favor. When we realize the crippled tortured life that lies ahead of the mere babe, and the mother's agony intensified by the necessity for constant for the support of the little sufferer — her care for his distress divided with anxiety for his positive wants, is there not tenderness enough in the hearts of our prosperous business men who are fathers to handsomely head a subscription for their relief? And will not Woburn mothers, as they clasp their own more closely, realizing what in the near or far future may be in store for them, come individually to the rescue? Who of our young ladies will show philanthrophy enough to circulate a petition for their relief, and give Woburn an opportunity to add another laurel to its fair fame by raising a fund for the sufferers!

LITERARY NOTICES.

The January number, which is the holiday issue, of WIDE AWAKE, is as beautiful as Santa Claus himself could have made it. The frontispiece, "Winter Birds," deserves framing for every house in the land; "The Fairy Crew" is pronounced by all who have seen it, the most beautiful fairy picture ever drawn; and "The Blind Handel" is like a masterly painting. The magazine opens with "Asaph Sheafe's Christmas," and is followed by "Christmas Cards," which, by the way, is illustrated by Miss L. B. Humphrey. Then comes "Their Club and Ours." It has excellent illustrations by Bodfish, as has also "From the Hudson to the Neva," by David Ker. Now we come to the grand pictorial feature of this number: seven Poems of Christmas tide, by the young Vermont poet, Mary E. Wilkins. Very beautiful poems they are, and very beautiful are the illustrations. The jolly feature of the number is "Ginevra Alveretta's Merry Christmas," illustrated by Sol Eytinge, Jr., in his happiest vein. Sophie May tells a funny story about "Kittyleen," which is also illustrated by Eytinge. Two other capital stories are "A Father Lost," by Mrs. Catherwood, and "Queer Company Home." Mr. Arthur Gilmen begins his "Short Stories from the Dictionary," and Edward Everett Hale goes on with his popular "To-Day" talks, while Mr. George L. Osgood opens the new music series with a charming composition for a song by Christina Rossetti. Whoever reads this number will subscribe for the year. Only $2.50 a year. Ella Farman, Editor: D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston.

The third number of the new series of SCRIBNER presents, as a frontispiece, a tint-printed engraving by Cole of Bonnat's portrait of Theirs, accompanying a paper of personal recollections of the first President of the French Republic, E. B. Washburne, late U. S. Minister at Paris. Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote's second paper on Mexico deals with "A Provincial Capital," viz., Morelia, and particularly with the home life of the place. "The Cavern of Luray," is the first fully illustrated magazine paper that has appeared on the subterranean wonders of the newly discovered rival Mammoth Cave. "The Revival of Burano Lace" is the subject of record by Catherine Cornaro. "Who were the Chartists?" a vigorous account and vindication of the workingmen's agitation in England in 1848, with portraits of six of the most prominent of the leaders of the movement. Colonel Rockwell's paper of reminiscences of Garfield appears in the present issue. The most elaborately illustrated paper of the number is "Oriental and Early Greek Sculpture"—the first of several on Ancient Sculpture. The unillustrated material is "Through One Administration," "Modern Instance," "The Increase of Divorce," "The Legal Aspects of the Mormon Problem," English and American Song Birds," "Old Madame," "The Farmer of Marshfield," and there are other poetic contributions, also "Topics of the Time." The World's Work Department is given over to material about the Atlanta Cotton Exhibition, the result of the writer's personal inspection of the exhibits.

ST. NICHOLAS for January 1882, has eighty pages and more than sixty illustrations: Its frontispiece is a beautiful picture by Robert Blum, illustrating a fairy story of the Rhineland. There is the conclusion of "The Poor Count's Christmas," and a curious tale of Modern Greek Folk-lore, illustrated with spirited pictures by Alfred Brennan. Other short stories are: "The Cow that Considered." "The Porter's Iron Collar," "Bones and Bow-wows." Celia Thaxter contributes a fine poem on the great Sir William Napier's chivalrous conduct toward a peasant child. "How to make Puppets and Puppet-shows," Mr. Daniel C. Beard explains to the boys and girls how they may entertain the family circle, or parties of their companions. This month's installment of the two serial stories—"Donald and Dorothy," by Mary Mapes Dodge, and "The Hoosier School-boy," by Edward Eggleston, are well illustrated. "A Drummer boy's Recollections" describes, with the help of three fine illustrations, the terrible experiences of a soldier in the Federal Army in the woods at Chancellorsville, and through the first day of the fighting at Gettysburg. Humorous verses and funny single pictures are given here and there in the number: there is a story of four pages with five pictures for the Very Little Folks: "Jack-in-the-Pulpit:" the "Letter-box:" and the "Riddle-box" closes the number with an assortment of puzzles including a curious Maze.

OUR LITTLE ONES for January is a perfect piece of work in letter-press and illustrations. It is a beauty, and contains within its handsome covers the choicest products of pen and pencil. Somehow the pictures in OUR LITTLE ONES please a taste for the beautiful in art more than those of any of the other magazines for children, hence its great popularity. It is published by The Russell Publishing Co., Boston.

The January number of BABYLAND, published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, is a little beauty. This is the only magazine published in this country expressly for babies, and it deserves the extensive circulation it has. BABYLAND begins the new year with flattering prospects.

Good for the Women.

Many ladies suffer from an extreme nervous, semi-hysterical condition. They have disturbing dreams, exciting muscular startings, peculiar painful symptom of nightmare They lie awake and suffer the brain to be flighty when that weary organ ought, according to nature, to be asleep. Brown's Iron Bitters give sweet repose and quickly remove all such nervous disorders.—Hom Physicians.

Gentility is neither in birth, manners nor fashion, but in the mind. I did so and five dollars worth of Sulphur Bitters cured me of general weakness and debility. Mrs. S——, New Haven.

WINCHESTER.

Rev. Dr. Bellows of New York will fill the Unitarian pulpit next Sunday.

The officers of A. D. Weld Post, 148, G. A. R., whose names were given to the JOURNAL last week, were duly installed on Monday evening last.

The records of our Chief of Police show that Winchester is a law-abiding town. Fewer arrests are made than in almost any other town we know of.

On and after next Sunday the Hymn and Tune Book published by the American Unitarian Association will be used in the church here.

The Women's Suffrage question bids fair to be quite thoroughly canvassed here this winter. Several of our prominent ladies are interested in it, and I shouldn't be surprised if a strong organization was formed.

The Unitarian church was beautifully decorated on Christmas day with holly and mistletoe, mottoes in Christmas greens, wreaths, and-so-forth. It looked very fine; and the sermons were exceptionally good.

Judge Littlefield has been doing quite a little stroke of judicial work this week; for example: Ed. Eisenor and Geo. Quinn were find $1 and costs each for simple drunks; and John McCarthy and George La Puree $3 each and costs for disturbing the peace and quiet of this burg.

Christmas services at the several churches in this village last Sunday were appropriate and highly interesting. Sound sermons and touching ones were preached from the pulpits of each; the music in them was first rate; and the religious festival was properly kept.

The Congregationalist Sunday School gave their Christmas Concert on Sunday evening in the church which was numerously attended and greatly enjoyed. On Monday evening the same school held their annual Christmas Festival, which was one of the pleasantest occasions of the whole holiday season. Young and old took it all in heartily and joytully.

Miss Josephine S. Hinkley, of Woburn, has been elected teacher of the Chapin Intermediate School to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Miss Moody. This was done at a special meeting of the School Board last Thursday evening. The idea prevails that the Board made an excellent choice. Miss Hinkley is a graduate of the Woburn High School, and has been in the Woburn Training School for Teachers for a year past. She is well equipped for her business.

Tom Merriam of Woburn didn't get a license to open a billiard hall here. I am glad of it. Rum generally goes with billiards, and our town has too good a reputation for sobriety to have it endangered by allowing such places to be opened. And then we don't want our boys educated in a billiard hall. Generally speaking they are bad places for old or young; and our authorities will have the thanks of Winchester fathers and mothers for barring out this attempt to set up an institution to corrupt the morals of the young, and lead them to perdition.

While Mr. Sheldon, the drover and butcher, was passing with a drove of cattle across the bridge over the M. V. R. R. on the new Arlington road, last Tuesday, the bridge gave way and the whole concern was precipitated to the ground below. The only damage done to the cattle, so far as I have been able to learn, was to a cow which lost both horns. The piers of the bridge were found to be intact, but the woodwork somehow parted with its foundations and did the mischief.

Two cattle were killed and others injured.

BURLINGTON.

S. S. CONCERT.—An excellent Christmas concert was given, at the church, Sunday evening. The exercises consisted of responsive reading, singing appropriate to the season, and recitations of Scripture and poetry The church was suitably decorated, and a tasteful motto "King of Kings," was placed on the front of the desk.

HOLIDAY.—The schools were closed, Monday.

CHANDELIERS.—The two new chandeliers, ordered, some time ago, for the church, were hung in their places, last week. They are very beautiful in design and finish. The money for their purchase was procured from last winter's course of lectures.

Catarrh.

The remarkable results in a disease so universal and with such a variety of characteristics as Catarrh, prove how effectually Hood's Sarsaparilla acting through the blood, reaches every part of the human system. A medicine, like anything else, can be fairly judged only by its results. We point with pride to the glorious record Hood's Sarsaparilla has entered upon the hearts of thousands of people it has cured of catarrh.

How it Was!

At the battle of Gettysburg I was shot through the left leg and was sent to the hospital. The army surgeons relieved me but pronounced my case incurable. It discharged pieces of bone, and for years I have suffered with a running score. I tried everything which my limited means would allow, and experienced no relief until I tried Sulpher Bitters. I am now almost well, and shall continue their use.—Old Soldier.

Carry the News.

Mr. John Etzensperger, manufacturing Jeweler of North Attleboro', Mass., lately communicated to us the following: I suffered so much with pains in my arm, that at times I was completely helpless. I used that incomparable remedy St. Jacobs Oil and was completely cured as it by magic.

If it were possible

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA for debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which every one feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that Hood's Sarsaparilla contains more real medicinal value than any article before the people.

What a Man Did with Kidney Complaint

DRACUT, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.:

Dear Sirs—I have suffered from kidney complaint and biliousness for fifteen years. Have tried everything and never got any good. Last January, before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, everything I ate bloated me aft up, pain in my chest and arms, headache and dizzy. I could not get up without feeling weary and all fagged out. Many mornings I was obliged to lie down on the lounge. To do any work seemed almost impossible. Have taken two bottles. The backache, dizziness, pain in my chest and arms, and that feeling of intense weariness are all gone. I can eat anything and it does not press me at all. Feel just like work; in fact, like a new man. Can heartily recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and hope all who desire to know anything about it will come to me and ask what I think of it. Very truly yours, treaties sounded far-off and indistinct. She rose feebly and staggered toward the door. "Only give me a little time," she said, "I will see you to-morrow or the next day. I cannot talk any more now. I am sick, I must go home."

JONATHAN J. COBURN.

Miss Penelope, frightened by her looks, tried to detain her, but in vain, she would not and could not stay longer. Feeling her last remnant of strength leaving her, she hurried from the house and fled, like a hunted creature, to her home. The next day, se fell sick of a fever, which had crept up from the river meadows to the higher parts of the town, and for the next four weeks, she lay tossing in pain and burning. Lost to the outer world, she never knew that Will called, asked to see her, and was sent away without explanation. Believing her false, he went home in desperation, married his enforced bride, and sailed away to a foreign city, where he lived in constant attendance upon peevish invalidism, until years after, death brought release.

After a time, life grew peaceful to Drusilla. Her father never knew her secret, and for his sake, she struggled and endured. When she was thirty years old, he died, and soon after she was summoned to the deathbed of Miss Penelope. This lady had a singular confession to make. With her own hands she gave Drusilla four letters, yellow with age, which Will had sent in her care, years ago, and with trembling lips, disclosed that she herself had bribed Judge Page's housekeeper to send Will away from the house, with no knowledge of Drusilla's illness. It was the last tempest of outward sorrow which Drusilla's life ever knew.

With a few trite words of forgiveness, she hurried to her lonely home, and there in her own chamber, gave way to a passion of grief. When she had sobbed herself into partial calmness, she broke the yet unopened seals of her lover's letters, and with dimmed eyes, began to read them. Their contents, first pleading and hopeful, then doubting, and finally despairing, soothed her sorrow. If, all these years, she had mourned Will's supposed faithlessness, could she not even rejoice, when she knew he had always loved her? A great and abiding peace entered Drusilla's soul. She was no longer a bereaved woman, but one who had gained her measure of love on earth, and should find it again in heaven. And so the years glided on quietly to the Christmas Eve when the night-blooming cereus blossomed, and Miss Drusilla was watching it. It was not strange that she should indulge in the luxury of memory. As the weird hours of midnight approached, she grew strangely restless. She rose and paced the room for a few moments, then hastily wrapping herself in a thick cloak, went out the night. She wished once more to be alone in the spot where she had stood with her lover twenty years ago. She reached the gate, and for some time, leaned upon it in silence, hiding her face in the folds of her cloak.

Was she the ghost of the fair young girl who had once waited there? She seemed so, indeed, to the lonely stranger at that moment walking up the shaded street. He had come to Hightown by the evening train, and though the friend he was to visit lived in quite a different part of the village, he could not resist the desire of going this way, past a house once well-known to him. He forgot the lapse of years when he saw this solitary woman leaning upon the old gate. Led by an uncontrolable impulse, he went up to her and spoke softly, as we may address the dead. Even before she lifted her head, he knew her quite well.

"Drusilla! Drusilla!" he said.

She was not frightened, whether "in the body or out of the body," she knew that Will had come. A yearning for reconciliation, even at this late hour, seized her very soul.

"You must come into the house," she said gently, and seeing him hesitate, she added, "I am quite alone, I live quite alone. Indeed you must come, for I have much to tell you."

So they went into the house together, and there in the old parlor, she told him the story of their wrong, and listened to the tale of his own life since the parted. Then they sat for a few moments in silence. They were sober, middle-aged people now, to all the world, only to each other they were still unchanged. Suddenly Drusilla remembered her night-blooming cereus.

"Will," she said, pointing to it, "there is the plant you gave me—it blossoms for the first time, to-night."

They rose from their seats and went toward it. Silently and with clasped hands, they watched the waxen chalice slowly open, and as the last snowy petals parted into beauty, Will spoke very softly;

"Dear Drusilla," he said, "even for this world, it cannot be too late."

A Philadelphia tourist, who has been visiting Boston, speaks in the following glowing terms:—

Standing on that high monument (Bunker Hill) I remember her patriotism and her grand Revolutionary history. As I looked down upon the homes or the graves of Longfellow, Motley, Prescott, Lowell, Dana, Sprague, Holmes, Whittier, the Adamses, Everett, Cushing, Winthrop, Choate, Sumner, Webster, Agassiz, Wilson, I thought of what Massachusetts had done in history, in poetry and in eloquence. This one city produced half the literature of the nation. She is entitled to her proud name, "The Athens of America." More than this, in intellectual activity, in the culture of her native citizens, and in genuine democracy, she stands without a peer on the world's history. Around her is a Commonwealth not yet three hundred years old, with as dense a population as that of Europe, with a higher civilization, for universal education, equality and liberty of thought and speech, have reared their altars on its granite rocks.

Suffering from kidney diseases, from which I could get no relief either from medicine or the prominent physicians of the country, I tried Brown's Iron Bitters, which cured me completely. A child of mine recovering from scarlet fever, had no appetite, and did not seem to be able to eat at all; I gave him Iron Bitters with the happiest results.
